MISCELLANY.

DOMESTIC TROUBLES.

Mrs. Harry Monteth sat in her neat, cozy parlor, book in her hand. A large fire blazed behind the burnished androons and shining fender, lighting up the four corners of the room, glowing on the Venetian blinds, and deepening the rose on the cheek of the young wife. She was waiting the return of her husband from his counting house, and was wondering at his absence, so unusual at that hour.
He had often said that these evenings were the green spots in his life; and she felt so happy after a whole day's separation to have him seated at her side. What could detain him.

The door-bell rang. She started up; but it was only a messenger, telling her not to be uneasy, as his "new goods" had arrived, and he was busy unpacking them.
"Then he will not be here for some time," she thought, as she resumed her seat with a sigh of disappointment. "Oh, I wish Harry was not a merchant!" The beautiful volume she held—yesterday's present from him, an elegant edition of "The Wife's Own Book"—had suddenly lost its attraction; even Washington Irving's incomparable sketches of the masterpieces of his friend Leslie, and the heroic devotion of the noble Mary, failed to interest her. She opened her piano; but the voice that usually mingled with hers in the song and whispered sweet words of praise, was absent and music had lost its power to amuse her. At last she thought, to while away the hours of absence, she would cross to the mansion of an old friend of her mother's. So leaving a message for Harry to follow her, if he should not return in half an hour she set out.

It was but a few steps, and when she reached the door she dismissed the servant who had accompanied her, charging him to deliver her message to Mr. Monteth without fail. Mrs. Russell was charmed to see her dear Agnes, and after many anxious inquiries concerning her domestic arrangements,
she gradually began to discourse on the great and important duties of married life—Mrs. Russell dwelling particularly on the obligations of a wife to obey
her husband, as the lord and master of her house and heart. Agnes disliked this strong, stern, language, and after a little while remarked,
"But, my dear madam, we are not bound to servitude when we marry, such as the slave renders his owner. Ours is the bondage of love, and from my experience, I pronounce it an 'easy yoke.' Man is more energetic, more firm and hardy; therefore he should hold the reins, as you express it. But woman is softer, milder, and frequently rules by gentle submission. I am certain Harry will never exact any thing from me that I cannot perform."
This was uttered with a confident smile. Mrs.
Russell shook her head and sighed dolefully, as she replied,
"My poor girl, you have been married but six months, and the 'honeymoon' is scarcely over yet.
Wait until the end of the present year, and see if you do not agree with me. When I was of your age, I thought as you do; but now I am intimate enough in my family to know how much I can boast of my domestic peace. You see what marriage is!"

"But, Mrs. Russell," exclaimed Agnes, warmly,
"Harry, my husband, is not—!" she paused.
"Is not what, my dear?" said her companion.
"Why do you hesitate? I saw your thoughts in your countenance. That is very true; he is not yet what John Russell is, but he may one day be.
Wait until the rose fades on your cheek, and the lights dim in your eyes."
"Oh!" exclaimed the young wife, "if I love him always but just as well as he does now, I will be content. I am not too exacting; I possess his best affections, and I rely confidently on their continuance. I will not court misery by thinking of the days to come, when my beauty will no longer exist. I have cared only for a fair face, I might

DIED.

In this town, Sept. 12th, George Edjeomb and Mrs. Elizabeth Flint, aged years.

— 3d inst., John Whitney, Esq.,
 — 4th inst., Mr. Lemuel Fernald.
 At Puttick's Island, Boston Harbor,
 Anne, only daughter of Mr. John Mary Cleverly, aged 1 year and 20 days.

She is gone! that noble frame
 To scenes more pure and fair Another's numbered with the Immortal bliss to share.

Sleep, leaders, thy race is run,
 Thy days of toil are o'er;
 The debt is paid! yes, thou art
 To dwell on earth no more.

The grave is but the resting place
 Between the earth and God;
 No more shall we behold thy face
 On this terrestrial sod.

Parents! cease to mourn! Behold
 On Canaan's lovely shore;
 Soon you will join her, hand in You'll meet to part no more.

Sleep, leaders, in calm repose,
 Naught shall disturb thy rest
 Thou shalt arise as Jesus rose
 And be forever blest.

In Sentence, 29th ult., Mr. Richard formerly of this town, aged 25.

VALUABLE TESTIMONY FROM THE SOUTH.

We like, at all times, to give credit where credit is due, and if at the same time we can relieve the distressed, we are doubly gratified; we, therefore, give the following voluntary testimony as to the beneficial effects of Western Balsam of Wild Cherry, by the author of the Columbian South Carolina, who appears to have obtained great relief by its use—Old Dominion, Portsmouth, Virginia.

Dr. Walter's Balsam of Wild Cherry

We seldom resort to patent medicines, having great respect for the skill of the regular profession, but have thrown into our way the above named medicine immediately after the close of the last session of the Legislature, when our lungs were almost dried up by the highly rarified atmosphere of our State House. The Balsam immediately relieved us of a most harassing cough, which threatened our health in a serious manner. We feel that we are indebted to it for some fifteen pounds of annual weight—which addition once felt, cannot be forgotten.

None genuine, unless signed I BUTTS on wrapper. Agents—Mrs. L. HAYDEN, Quincy; Oliver Perkins, Braintree. 3w Jan. 5.

R. CORBETT'S SYRUP OF SARSAPARILLA EFFECTS WONDERS.

Read this remarkable cure of JOHN DAVIS, Sexton of Rev. Edward T. Taylor's Church, Boston.

I, the undersigned, Sexton of the Church of that name, Father Taylor, state the following facts, which I think should be told a world. I was born in England, and am now forty years of age. My parents were healthy, and I was not afflicted by any disease until the year 1845. I was then residing in Boston, and at that time my skin became subject to a humor, which I had as to skin myself and friends. I was cured and almost completely restored to health. I was then deeply imprinted on my forehead and other parts of my body, and by their excretion I was almost entirely cured. About twelve months ago my afflictions seemed increasing. Deep seated in the face of the face, I had a severe attack of rheumatism, and my eyes became weak, and I was unable to perform the duties of my daily bread. Failing of receiving any benefit from medicine, I procured for me, I resorted to the use of various Sarsaparilla compounds, as advertised, with no benefit. The able and distinguished surgeon and physician, James Ayer, M.D., of Haverhill, who had watched my case, at last advised my using Corbett's Sarsaparilla.

I am happy now to state that my general health is improving, the rheumatism has disappeared, and my skin and face are quite passing away, and not only this, but I have had a hope of a rescue from my grave. To Corbett's Sarsaparilla do I alone attribute this amendment, as not until I had adopted it, (and this in minute quantities) have I for four years found any relief from suffering.

JOHN DAVIS.

Sexton of Rev. Edward T. Taylor's Church, EDWARD BRINLEY & Co. sole proprietors, No. 4 South side of Faneuil Hall, Boston.

Agents—Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy; Oliver Perkins, Braintree. 2w Jan. 5.

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Costiveness.

HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical Faculty and the public generally. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Lozenges are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Costiveness, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Heart Complaint, Diarrhoea, Piles, Dropsy, Debility, Indigestion, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Flatulency, Constipation, Pains in the Bowels, Sciatica, Rheumatism, Women, etc., etc.

These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspeptic symptoms, Female Suppression and Irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for seafarers, persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fever, Bilious Complaints, and chronic or East India Diarrhoea, and is admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and the America.

These Lozenges are recommended by some of the Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All affected with oppression after eating, or rising of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known.

For sale in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Seth Fowler, 138 Washington street, Boston, General Agent.

Special Notice to Consumptives!

S. S. FITCH, of New York city, would inform the citizens of Quincy and vicinity that he has established an Agency Office at 15 1/2 Hanover St., for the sale of his popular Medicine, Consumptive's Supporter, Injuring Tubes for Consumptives, Silice Braces, etc. Dr. Fitch's Guide to Invalids, (a work containing 74 pages) can be obtained by application at his office.

Free in the city can be obtained upon their residence and Shoulder Braces, Supporters, etc., fitted to suit. RICE.

For sale as above Dr. Fitch's Lectures on Consumption and its cure. 3m July 7.

DR. BRIGGS'S SHOULDER BRACES AND PORTETTES are acknowledged by the Medical Faculty of New York to be the best ever invented.

The following letter from Prof. C. P. BRONSON, A.M., M.D., Teacher of Education and Music, Brackets Dear Sir—You ask my candid opinion of your "Suspenders and Shoulder Braces." I am glad to be carried away with new things, nor need to receive without coming highly recommended. I care but little for theory; practice, or the great test; hence I abide by this motto—

"Let all things, and hold fast that which is good." No idea that your Braces will cure my rheumatism, a preventive of disease, I find by my own experience and observation, that it is very particularly such diseases as are incident to the lungs, lungs and spine; because it compels a person to be straight, and thereby the operations of nature. Blessed are the up-bodies as well as mind; and the opposite is true—Cursed are the crooked.

I applied this brace to a great variety of persons, male and female, old and young, and in all cases with decided benefit, especially those in constitutions and slender forms. And I am fully pleased with its structure, conforming, as it is, so entirely to physiological principles; on account of its commendable itself to reason and science, as well as to science. I am acquainted with good many articles of a somewhat similar character, but consider yours preferable to them; as it differs, in some important respects.

Allow me to hope that you will not be only one of the too common modes of "altering" only give it fair trial with reasonable care, and they will need no other recommendation. Yours truly, C. P. BRONSON.

For sale, wholesale and retail, at 15 1/2 Hanover street for Dr. Briggs' Shoulder Braces and Supporters for the New England States.

Daguerreotypes!

Rooms over Mr. BRIERLEY'S STORE. The subscriber would inform the public that he has fitted up a Room for the purpose of taking DAGUERRETYPE MINIATURES, of the first quality, and respectfully solicits your examination of specimens.

Your attention is particularly called to the distinct and life-like expression of the eye; the clearness, boldness and strength with which every feature of the face and drapery is brought out to the fine, clear and even shading, (resembling a fine steel engraving,) and especially to their permanency.

Portraits, Miniatures and Engravings correctly copied and neatly set in Cases, Lockets, Rings, etc.

Pictures of Sick or Deceased persons taken at their residences.

Ladies and gentlemen are invited to call, and they will be treated with civility and politeness, whether they contemplate sitting or not.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

FRANK GREEN—Bacon says "You may take Sarsaparilla to open the liver, Steel to open the spleen, Flour of Sulphur for the lungs, Castor for the brain; but nothing openeth the heart but a true friend." It appears to me that the friend to whom the following lines were addressed, must be fully convinced that if his heart is not opened by this friendly appeal, nothing can ever move him. Let these lines warn that young man who is inclined to be discouraged and to renounce all efforts, if the first or second trial fail, at all times and under all circumstances to persevere—try again. Be a philosopher and say to her whom you love most truly, most tenderly—

You have no heart, you cannot love,
Though you can kindle love in mine—
Strange that the softness of a dove
Round such a thing of air can twine.

NAPOLÉON.

TO THOMAS A. B.—BY W. A. B.
Tune—"Oh, Susanna."

O! you are my dearest friend, Tom,
My friendship you shall see,
For since you will not write me, Tom,
I now will write to thee.
It seems to me a sin, Tom,
That friends both good and true,
Should never write each other, Tom,
As you will never do.
Chorus—I now will write to thee, Tom,
I now will write to thee,
For as you will not write to me, Tom,
I now will write to thee.

In the first place be assured, Tom,
That love is a delicate thing,
Much slyer than a partridge, Tom,
Or a hum-bird on the wing.
To win the hearts we love, Tom,
Requires great skill and care,
And to keep such hearts is harder, Tom,
Than rabbits in a snare.

Chorus—I now will write to thee, &c.

Then if you have a friend, Tom,
Be it mother, brother, wife,
O, clasp him to thy bosom, Tom,
With a grasp as strong as life.
Speak gently to that friend, Tom,
Rule more by love than fear,
Let no harsh word be spoken, Tom,
To those who love us here.

Chorus—I now will write, &c.

We never must forget, Tom,
That the hour is hastening on,
When those we love the dearest, Tom,
Will leave us one by one.
Then let us treat them kindly, Tom,
Nor grieve one care-worn heart,
We shall one day need those friends, Tom,
So never let us part.

Chorus—I now will write, &c.

Do you not now remember, Tom,
How you loved a pretty maid,
In those good old days of yore, Tom,
And how with her you staid;
And how your horse broke loose, Tom,
Scared by some braying jack,
And how you trudged it home, Tom,
With your saddle on your back.

Chorus—I now will write, &c.

And how you raged and raved, Tom,
When the thing was public made,
Declaring it a lie, Tom,
That with Ann you never staid.
And how again you courted, Tom,
That pretty G—m girl,
And how she gave you the "ac," Tom,
Oh, how your head did whirl.

Chorus—I now will write, &c.

For you could scarcely bear it, Tom,
It almost broke your heart,
When that false though loved one, Tom,
Pronounced the word—depart.
Being sad you went from home, Tom,
And staid a month or more,
To Montpelier, Burlington, Tom,
Where you'd never been before.

Chorus—I now will write, &c.

Oh, those were gloomy days, Tom,
When you away did roam,
But like a wounded soldier, Tom,
You sought again your home.
After this you loan'd the clothier's trade
Of Fellows and his wife,
Here I can't get in the tom, Tom,
If it were to save my life.

Chorus—I now will write, &c.

Getting weary of this trade, Tom,
You then commenced another,
And went to making bureau, Tom,
With Robert and his brother.
But this you liked no better, Tom,
And left it in a pet,
And took to peddling tin, Tom,
For the wages you could get.

Chorus—I now will write, &c.

This business you'd have followed, Tom,
For many years to come,
Had it not been for one thing, Tom,
It took you far from home.
At last you settled down, Tom,
On a ten acre lot,
And went to planting 'tatoes, Tom,
And next a wife you got.

Chorus—I now will write, &c.

And now as I have told you, Tom,
As you never was before,
If you will answer my letters, Tom,
I'll never tell you more.
But if more than a month, Tom,
From writing you refrain,
Assured be, my friend, Tom,
I'll tell you over again.

Chorus—I'll tell you over again, Tom,
I'll tell you over again, Tom,
I'll tell you over again, Tom,
I'll tell you over again.

Detroit, Mich. Dec. 1843.

J. A. Holden, School St., Quincy,

WOULD inform the inhabitants of Quincy and Braintree, that he has just received, and will be constantly receiving,

New and Suitable Goods for the Coming Season,

his intention being to have always on hand A VARIETY OF FASHIONABLE GOODS, among which are to be found, a good assortment of German, French, English and American

BROADCLOTHS,

of various Shades and Prices, suitable for DRESS, FROCK AND OVER COATS.

FOR SACKS AND OVECOATS,

Pilot, Davenport Kersey, Tweeds, Cordington and Castor Coths, suitable for men's or boys' clothes.

FOR PANTALOONS,

New DOESKIN FABRICS, and other denominations of FANCY WEAVINGS, which he offers as particularly acceptable

FOR FALL AND WINTER WEAR.

He would also call attention to his AMPLE ASSORTMENT of

VESTINGS,

of the most RICH and BEAUTIFUL STYLES, both as regards quality and pattern.

FURNISHING GOODS,

Consisting of Caps, Stocks, Cravats, Bosoms, Collars, Flannel Shirts and Drawers. Also, READY MADE CLOTHING, at very low prices.

It will be found that he has adopted the ONE-PRICE SYSTEM, a mode which is considered as a guarantee against the fraudulent devices of disreputable dealers, as also against the sometimes interminable process of making a bargain. Should there be any who disfavor such a system, they may, by calling at his establishment, find reasons to alter their opinion. Customers are allowed to return every article which on trial is found to have been misrepresented. But we doubt if they will find occasion to do so.

He DOES HIS OWN CUTTING, which he flatters himself he has no need to boast of, inasmuch as it is now too well known to need any man's praise, and least of all his own.

He invites the attention of such as expect

Punctuality and Good Workmanship, FOR CASH,

such being his rule of business,—the REDUCED RATES at which he sells rendering any other mode impracticable. All who thus employ him, he is confident, will have good reason to be satisfied.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,

it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10, or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS

is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and Durability, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.

A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis,

to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the

Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory

of the Agent in this town.

H. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECON-

OMIST'S, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

—ALSO—

SHEET IRON, TIN AND COPPER WORK done to order.

Of the best Materials, and in a workmanlike manner.

Cold Weather is Coming!!

GET A STOVE!!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE!" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accom- plishing this wish, on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook,—as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

New England Air-Tight Cooking Stove,

both by myself and many of my friends, for the past two years, I can, with the greatest confidence recom- mend it to my numerous customers, with the full assurance that they will find in its use every thing they could desire, and I agree that if any use this and do not find full satisfaction, I will take them back and re- fund the purchase money. I would invite all who are about purchasing this desirable article to call on the subscriber, (who is sole agent for this town,) and examine the above mentioned Stoves; where will also be found a GREAT VARIETY of other Stoves, both

COOK, PARLOR, OFFICE &amp; SHOP STOVES,

among which is a new and elegant

Parlor Stove, for Wood or Coal, with or without Ovens.

Also—FURNACE, BAKERS, BRITANIA & JAPANNED WARE; TIN AND SHEET IRON

WORK Made to Order,

As good as the Best.

MISCELLANY.

LOVE AND MARRIAGE.

Somebody has said, that first love is usually first nonsense; and somebody was nearer the truth in his estimate, than he generally is on matters of importance. To be in love at least once a month, is the privilege of all girls between the ages of twelve and twenty, each new sentiment swallowing all the rest in its intensity, and of course, the only first love. During these years, love and romance are so completely blended, that it would require a nice judgment to discriminate between the two;—therefore, a marriage founded upon so slender a basis, must needs be productive of after misery. Until the age of twenty, no girl, however superior in intellect, can be aware of the capabilities of her own heart. Till that period, dreams must supply the place of reality, and their influence renders the heart more susceptible to passion, than in after years, when a more mature judgment has filled the place of imagination. Every girl has her ideal lover. Now don't look so demure, girls, and pretend to deny it! I have cried down under the great red apple tree at the foot of the orchard to indulge in castle building too often, not to know the precise occupation in which you must delight. You have each of you a hero stowed away in the corner of your heart, whose resemblance to some George or Charles or Harry of your acquaintance is truly wonderful. Perhaps, if you are much given to novel reading, your model for a husband is some wild corsair looking fellow, for whose sake innumerable ladies have pined away and died; or we may believe their biographers, some modern Bluebeard, who has no mercy on poor woman's hearts, than his illustrious namesake had upon their heads. Now this is all wrong. If you think otherwise, look calmly into your own hearts, analyze the models there enshrined, and then say how many of you, in cool dispassionate reason, would be willing to unite a lifelong destiny, with such a fearful creation of a dreamy brain. Some of you will doubtless urge that there is no harm in dreaming of such lovers. But there is harm, dear girls. There is harm in any pursuit which leads the mind from the responsible duties of every day life. There is harm in shutting out the realities of this world, by a too constant association with romance. We are not creatures of fiction, but real substantial flesh and blood, with wholesome affections and sympathies to be provided for, and energies to be nurtured into life and vigor. We are sailing to eternity upon an ocean full of rocks and quicksands and if we allow the energies which God has given as a protection against danger, to be dormant, if we neglect these, to search after romance, the waves of adversity will soon engulf our frail bark. Broken hearts, blighted affections, &c., &c., are imaginary sorrows, with which, I for one, have sympathy. In fact, I regard them the peculiar and individual property of romancers, and having no existence except in their imagination. Every woman possesses, in a greater or less degree, the physical power to overcome an unfortunate attachment; and there are but few instances on record of irrequited love that has lived any length of time in the absence of its object. But were it otherwise, the task of subduing an unfortunate attachment is light to the fearful doom that too frequently follows hasty and impetuous marriages. I cannot imagine a more dreadful picture, than that of increasing coldness between those whose fates are linked together by a tie that nothing but death should sever. And yet how many there are, whose marriage vows have forged chains of dreadful bondage; whose domestic fireside is the scene of perpetual strife. There is scarcely one of us, that cannot recall some such couple within the scope of our acquaintance, and if we trace their history back to its commencement, how few of them but are indebted for their misery to an early or hasty marriage; the fruit of a first love whose very intensity was the fire that consumed its idol. This is a subject which cannot command too much attention. The impetuosity of youth often hurries its victim into errors beyond recall. Women are not so calm and calculating in their affections as men, (no heresy, I trust in the assertion) consequently are more likely to fall into these errors. A breath of suspicion, a light word, or a half concealed insinuation, will arrest the affections of a man; but you know very well, dear girls, the more your idol is abused and vilified, no matter how justly, the more interested you are in his behalf. I verily think, did I belong to that unenviable portion of community called match-makers, my first step in promoting a union between two desirable parties, would be soundly to abuse the gentleman in the presence of his intended. If you would avoid these perils of imagination, rely implicitly on the better wisdom of your parents. To them should be entrusted, in fullest confidence, all your hopes, fears, wishes and affections. They have made your happiness a study for years, therefore in this most important crisis of your fate, their councils should guide, their knowledge judge, their wisdom direct. I do not mean to infer that your own heart should not share in the election of a companion for life, but before you allow affections to be engrossed, their bosoms should become the repository of your secret. Could that degree of restraint existing between parents and children be eradicated, how much misery might be spared to the world; but we never know the value of parental council, till the hard lessons of life have stained the knowledge with tears upon our hearts; we never fully appreciate their anxiety for our welfare, until its influence is lost to us forever. And now girls, you who think of becoming wives, (and who of you do not) guard against sorrow, sidy well the character of the man you are about to marry. You will not love him the less for practicing a little philosophy, or find your after happiness lessened by a previous knowledge of the peculiarities of his disposition. Real love whatever the poets may urge to the contrary, is not so intense, or exacting, as imaginary. If there is an affinity of affection, an affinity of disposition will follow its developments; but you must not always expect the same nice devotion after marriage that is extended to you during the days of courtship; and it would be equally unjust, to imagine, for a moment, that the seeming carelessness arises from waning love. Familiar association of every day life, while it strengthens the cords of love, banishes formality, and is apt to render the husband neglectful of the thousand nameless attentions which were yielded as a right, in days of less freedom and more restraint. I have seen women brood over this apparent neglect until they have forced themselves to believe it unmistakable symptoms of indifference, and following it up by criminations, have brought about the very evil they should have guarded against. Men have their own peculiar perplexities, and the province of a wife should be to make him forget at home the annoyances he meets with abroad. Good humor is the talisman to make a happy home, and being within the reach of all classes, she who possesses it not can have no claim upon the sympathies of the world. Intellectual and physical supremacy are the attributes of man, but the very dependence of woman, with her self-sacrificing devotion, is a mighty charm to win from him a precious boon of affection, forbearance and respect. But my paper is at an end.—Mrs. H. Marion Stephens.

SONG OF THE DECANter.

There was an old decanter, and its mouth was gaping wide, the rosy wine had ebbed away and left its crystal side; and the wind went humming— humming, up and down; the wind it flew, and through the reed like hollow neck the wildest notes it blew. I placed it in the window, where the blast was blowing free, and fancied that its pale mouth sang the quagmire strains to me. They tell me—punny conq'ors! the plague has slain his ten, and war is hundred thousands of the very best of men; but I, 'twas thus the bottle spake, 'but I have conquered more than all your famous conquerors so feared and famed of yore. Then come ye youths and maidens all! and drink from out my cup the beverage that dalls the brain and burns the spirit up, that puts to shame your conquerors that slay their scores below; for this has deluged millions with the lava tide of wo. Although in battle's path the darkest streams of blood may roll, yet when I kill the body I likewise damn the soul. The cholera, the plague, the sword, such ruin never wrought, as I in mirth or malice on the innocent have brought; and yet I breathe upon—they fall before my breath; and year by year my millions tread the horrid road to death.

THE BLUES.

Perhaps, my travelling friend, you are out on an excursion to drive away melancholy. Allow me, then, a word about the "Blues." They are the most uncomfortable, unreasonable, and unprofitable of all companions. They are often times the creatures of habit, and live only by toleration. Bad digestion, a cloudy day, a fit of sentimentality, beget them, and then, like spirits of ill omen, they fit around us, putting grim gogles on our eyes, and weaving about us an invisible web to check our progress. But a magic word dispels them as the crowing of the cock does the spectres of the night. An old gentleman once told me that he had made a discovery, which had been for many years of infinite value to him, and that was, that the Blues never ride on horse back. So you will find, my friend, they never go on a brisk walk—they never visit a gymnasium—they play no wicket or foot ball—they never read Charles Lamb, or Theodore Hook, or Tom Hood. They may saunter along with you beneath the solemn elms, or through the quiet walks of a cemetery—they will bend with you over the pages of Byron, or Bulwer—they may inspire your solitary musings anywhere. But action—resolve, society, eager pursuit—healthy, vigorous thought—all these are their enemies, and from these they will always fly.

There is an affection of melancholy quite prevalent among young men. There is something so very intellectual about it. They have read of Byron's white hands and high pale forehead, and they fancy they have, but to lean their empty heads upon their palms, to be mistaken for genuine Sons of Genius. Of all mere affections this is one of the most shallow, contemptible, and disastrous. Shallow, for it is a deception as transparent as air—contemptible for it is an effort to pass off as genuine the basest kind of counterfeit—and disastrous, for it prevents those well directed efforts, which might save them from disgrace and elevate them to mediocrity.

There is a sadness, such as an angel might feel in looking at the sufferings of humanity—such as Christ felt when he wept over Jerusalem—such as every right minded man finds sometimes stealing over him, unchecked, unbidden, when he contemplates his career, his destiny. A sadness like this, sincere, profound, well becomes a reflecting mind and is at once both child and parent of true Wisdom. But to the 'Blues,' properly so called, there is no more need of having them than there is of wearing a red coat. At least, my friend, so thinks your humble servant.—Horn's U. S. Gazette.

GOOD AND BAD LUCK.

There are men who, supposing Providence to have an implacable spite against them, bemoan in the poverty of a wretched old age the misfortune of their lives. Luck ran forever against them, and for others. One, with a good profession, lost his luck in the river, where he idled away his time a-fishing, when he should have been in the office. Another with a good trade, perpetually burnt up his luck by his hot temper which provoked all his employers to leave him. Another, with a lucrative business, lost his luck by amazing diligence, at every thing but his business. Another, who steadily followed his business, as steadily followed his bottle. Another, who was honest and constant to his work, erred by perpetual misjudgments: he lacked discretion: Hundreds lost their luck by endorsing, by sanguine speculations, by trusting fraudulent men, and by dishonest gains. A man never has good luck who has a bad wife. I never knew an early-rising, hard working, prudent man, careful of his earnings and strictly honest, who complained of bad luck. A good character, good habits, and iron industry, are impregnable to the assaults of all the ill luck that fools ever dreamed of. But when I see a tattered demon creeping out of a grocery late in the forenoon, with his hands stuck into his pockets, the rim of his hat turned up, and the crown knocked in, I know he has had bad luck, is to be a sluggard, a knave, a drunkard.

'GRATUITOUSLY.' We often see proceedings of meetings, and doings of various bodies—political, social, benevolent, charitable, &c.—in different newspapers, to which is appended a request to have them inserted "in all the papers of the city if done gratuitously." We often do it gratuitously, and we often do it, gratuitously to those immediately interested; but the public ought to know that there can be no such thing as publishing matter in a newspaper gratuitously. Somebody must pay for it. It is not to be paid for in thanks—thanks will not support composers, pressmen, and their families—it must be paid for with money; and if nobody else does it, the publisher and editor must. Therefore we say, there can be no such thing as publishing proceedings of meetings, notices, puffs, &c., gratuitously. Somebody must pay for them, and it is often the greatest injustice to ask the publisher—who freely gives his space and time in preparing the copy for the press—to pay the actual expense of the work besides. We have thought it due to ourselves and the public to make this statement, so that it may be understood, when an Editor is asked to publish articles gratuitously, it is precisely the same thing as asking him to pay the expenses of the publication, and he must do it or the work cannot be done.—Bunker Hill Aurora.

OUR FASHIONABLE GIRLS.

There are hundreds of girls in every large city who parade the streets in feathers, flowers, silks and laces, whose hands are soft and white as uselessness can make them, whose mothers keep bonders to get a living for their idle daughters. These mothers will cook, sweep, wait on the tables, carry loads of marketing, do the most menial drudgery, toil late and early with very little more clothing than would be allowed to a Southern slave, while their hopeful daughters, spend their mornings lounging in bed, reading some silly book, taking lessons in music and French, fixing finery, and the like. The evenings are devoted to dressing, displaying their charms and accomplishments to the best advantage, for the wonderment and admiration of knights of the yard-stick and young aspirants for the professional honors—doctors without patients—who are as brainless and soulless as themselves. After awhile the piano-sounding simper captivates a tape measuring, law-expounding or pill-making simpleton. The two ninny spend every cent that can be raised by hook or crook—get all that can be got on credit in broadcloth, satin, flowers, lace, carriage attendance, &c.—hang their empty life with no higher purpose than living genteelly and spitting the neighbors. This is a synopsis of the lives of thousands of street and ballroom belles, perhaps of some whose shining costume you have envied from a passing glance.

Thousands of women in cities dress elegantly on the streets, who have not a sufficiency of wholesome food, a comfortable bed, or fire enough to warm their rooms. I once boarded in a "gentle boarding house" in Louisville. There were two young ladies and a piano in the house; halls and parlors handsomely furnished. The eldest young lady, the belle, wore a summer bonnet at $10, a silk and blonde concern that could not last more than two or three months; silk and satin dresses at two, three and four dollars per yard, and five dollars a piece for making them and the entire family, women, boys and babies, nine in all, slept in one small room, with two dirty bags of pine shavings, two straw bolsters, and three dirty quilts for bedding; no sheets, no slips, and there on the wall hung the peagreen and white satin, the rich silk and lawn dresses. These ladies did not work but played on the piano, accordion and cards; and nearly broke their hearts the week before we were there, because another, who I presumed lived just as they did called on them with a great clumsy gold chain on her neck. None of them had one, and Miss Labelinda, the belle, could eat no supper, and had a bad fit of the sulks to console her for the want of a chain. But, dear me! I had no notion of running away off here. I was just thinking how busy you country girls are apt to be in the fall, and this led me to think what a blessing it is you have something to do, and that you think it a disgrace to live idly. It is a great blessing to live in a country where it is a credit to work, for idleness is the parent of vice and misery. So do not get weary or think your lot a hard one when putting up pickles or preserves, apple butter, sausages and sauces for future use.—Mrs. Swissheim.

WHY DON'T THE MEN PROPOSE.

The question is asked by many an anxious mother, as she looks on her daughters growing into womanhood, and by most young ladies who are about to "come out," or who, on leaving some fashionable boarding school, look forward to a round of dissipation, and whose standard for a husband has been carefully marked out by parents in the length and depth of the purse, while in many instances the heart, talents, character, and physical resources are totally disregarded. In our large cities the difficulties of young men entering into the marriage state are on the increase, and the consequences are, that they throw away much valuable time in the apparently selfish pursuits of their own individual comfort or convenience. These causes, real or imaginary, should lead us to examine into their origin, and also to use every effort to prevent marriage from being reduced from a sacred tie, to a mere legalized barter and sale of human beings, soul and body, for a comfortable establishment, a handsome equipage, or fine clothing.

In former times, young ladies and gentlemen dressed with taste, and not extravagance, and were educated to enjoy home comforts. A young man was esteemed for his character, industry, and attention to business, and a just exercise of the talents given him by the Creator; while a young lady was taught that to be admired, she should have a knowledge of the daily duties of her own home; that music, dancing, &c., were to be acquired not merely as accomplishments, but to enliven and render home happy, and frown down the advances of any mere creature, whose only recommendation was his aping foreign manners, and wearing a fine coat. We hear among politicians, of 'Free Soil,' a horror of negro slavery, but who has yet exposed a slavery, daily and hourly consummated in our midst? The slavery of a marriage of convenience, of marriage a la mode!—Men and women meet—on the one side beauty, virtue, and accomplishments; and on the other wealth—the union thus consummated is a mockery, yet the world is quietly endorsing all this legalized slavery!

The negro slave can curse her owner, and in her praying pray for deliverance from her misery; but the fair and confiding woman who marries (a la mode) either to please her family

by a "good match," or barter away her independence for wealth, either to a young or old man, is worse than the negro slave. For is she not the wife the property of our civilized man of the world? She must bless her owner, and intercede for him before the world, and feign for him respect. She has sacrificed herself to him, and lost her self-respect. And to those around her not even she to whom the dear name of mother is due, must know all; and why? Because that mother has painted before the young mind of that suffering daughter the advantages of a "good match!"

The reverse of the picture is true, though the coloring is not so dark as to the mental disquietude of the male sex. For to woman "love is all;" her position in society debars out-door duties; while man in the rough contact of the world becomes blunted, and is forced to conceal his feelings; women is joined for life to one who may be a good husband, but her heart yearns for sympathy, more than is shown in placing her, like a bird, in a time house or cage, and covering her person with jewels. To her such a union is a moral and physical death.

Go ask the medical men what are the causes of the increase of nervous diseases, and why so amiable, loving and happy a wife (to the world's eye) sank rapidly to the grave? If he is honest and dare risk the loss of a patient, he will answer that marriage without love is self murder, and the surrender of the affections and the suppression of love and confidence, with the endeavor to conceal from the world the disappointments resulting from an unequal marriage, disturbs and breaks up the delicate machinery of the nervous system, while the physical formation succumbs, and the poor sufferer dies from a legalized suicide! But where is the remedy? Let the youth of both sexes, when pledged with each other, and before they meditate marriage, study each other's character and disposition, think less of wealth, and begin life where their parents left off; and let the female portion of our community make it fashionable to marry for character and industry and they will see more marriages and more happy people they ever dreamed of or figured in the whirl of the giddy dance or fashionable routs! For "nothing lovelier can be found in woman than to study household goods, and good works in her husband to promote."

HEALTH OF CHILDREN.

Rising early is a habit of high importance to fix in children; and in forming it there is far greater facility than in other cases. There is a natural propensity in children generally to early rising, which needs only to be gratified and encouraged. They usually retire to bed some time before their parents and at daylight or at least sunrise, are generally awake and anxious to rise. Many of them are actually bred up with difficulty to the habit of taking a morning nap, which when once formed, generally prevails through life. Let his father deny himself so far as to retire early and become an early riser also. His health, enjoyment and usefulness, he may depend upon, will be perceptibly benefited. And this may be connected with another preventive disease—active employment. The morning is the season for activity: the frame invigorated by repose, is prepared for exertion and motion gives pleasure. The pure atmosphere, so much more bracing than at other hours so much sweeter and more exhilarating than the air of a confined chamber, has been prepared to be breathed, and like all nature's medicines, it is superior to any which science can produce. Early rising and early exercise may more properly be called food than medicine, as they are designed for daily use, and to protect us from disease rather than to remove it. Everything except mere sloth, invites us—may requires us—to train up our children to use them. The morning is the most favorable season for exercising the frame, as well as for making useful impressions on the mind and heart, and whoever tries to conduct the education of his child independently of this practice, will lose some of the most favorable opportunities.

Promising young men. Not one in a thousand of the tribe ever attains to the dignity of a really useful man in society. The name spoils 'em? Just put in the green grass noddle that its owner is 'something above common'—is really smart—will one day be distinguished—in short, assure him that he is promising and from that hour you make a confounded ass of him, and he'll be apt to write himself so for life. He will have no need to labor manually or intellectually—not he! His talents are to carry him through. All knowledge will come to him intuitively; and the circumstances of existence are to bow before his talents. He isn't in a hurry to bring those talents into exercise.—There is time enough for that! In the end the 'promising man' turns out at thirty, to be a liquor-loving creature with a red nose, soured temper, little knowledge, bad habits, and no money.

Out-Door Exercise. Our ladies do not take sufficient exercise in the open air. They should walk more, and with a quicker and more active step. There is no better exercise than walking; but a slow languid, drawaway movement, fatigues without producing a free and active circulation of the blood. It may not be altogether genteel to walk energetically, but we should see fewer pale cheeks and hear less complaint of ill health if the ladies would adopt our advice.

VALUABLE TESTIMONY FROM THE SOUTH.

Make, at all times, to give credit when credit is due, and it is the same time can relieve the distressed, we are deeply gratified; we therefore give following voluntary testimony as to the beneficial effects of Watson's Balsam of Wild Cherry, by the use of the Columbus South Carolina, who appears here with a great relief by its use—Old Dr. Watson's Balsam of Wild Cherry.

Dr. Watson's Balsam of Wild Cherry. We solemnly testify to the medicinal value, having great credit for the skill of the regular profession, but none three years ago was the above named medicine, immediately after the close of the last season of a legation, when our legs were almost dried up by the highly torrid atmosphere of our state, and the State House. The Balsam immediately relieved us of a most harassing cough, which threatened our health in a serious degree. We feel that we are indebted to it for some ten pounds of annual weight, which addition was not, cannot be forgotten.

None genuine, unless signed BUTTS on wrapper. Agents—Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy; Oliver Perkins, Braintree. Jan. 5.

R. CORBETT'S SYRUP OF SARSAPARILLA EFFECTS WONDERS.

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Constipation. HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years trial by the Medical Faculty and the public generally. This medicine is a Laxative, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Peristaltics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities prove the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Constipation, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Nervousness, Dropsy, Piles, Dropsy, Debility, Indigestion, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation, Irritation, Pain in the Bowels, Scirrhus, The Doublet, Worms, etc.

These Laxatives are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspepsia symptoms. Female Suppression and Irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine causes no irritation of the bowels, and is a most agreeable and healthy medicine, which is given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for sale, persons, who should always have a supply. An introduction of the Peristaltics prevents Fevers, Biliousness, and chronic or East India Diarrhea. They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West India and the Americas.

These Laxatives are recommended by some of the Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All afflicted with oppression after eating, or loss of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known.

The undersigned, Son of the Church of that name, Father Taylor, writes the following facts, which I think should be told to a world. I was born in England, and am now forty years of age. My parents were healthy, and I was not afflicted by any disease till the year 1845. I was then residing in Boston, and at that time my skin became subject to a humor, which had no tendency to subside, and I was in great distress. I was now deeply imprinted on my forehead other parts of my body, and by their excruciating pain, even into the lungs. About twelve months ago a still more alarming increasing. Desperate and of the foulest character came out on my arms, back, and even attacked my eyes. I became weak, and unable to perform the duties of life for many months. Failing of receiving any benefit from medicine, I was now almost at the point of death. I was now almost at the point of death. I was now almost at the point of death.

Special Notice to Consumptives!

Dr. S. S. FITCH, of New York city, would inform the citizens of Quincy and vicinity that he has established an Agency Office at No. 15 1/2 Hanover St., Boston, for the sale of his popular Medicine, Adam's Supporters, Tackling Tubes for Consumptives, Shoulder Braces, etc. Dr. Fitch's Guide to Invalids, (a work containing 74 pages) can be obtained gratis, by application at his office.

Ladies in the city can be waited upon at their residences, and Shoulder Braces, Supporters, etc., fitted by Mrs. RICE.

Also For sale as above Dr. Fitch's Lectures on Consumption and its cure. 3m July 7.

DR. BRIGGS'S SHOULDER BRACES AND SUPPORTERS are acknowledged by the Medical Faculty of New York to be the best ever invented. Read the following letter from Prof. C. P. BRONSON, A. M., M. D., Teacher of Education and Music.

Dr. Briggs: Dear Sir—You ask my candid opinion of your "Suspender and Shoulder Brace." I am not apt to be carried away with new things, nor accustomed to receive whatever comes highly recommended. I care but little for theory; practice, or use, is the great test; hence I abide by this motto—

"Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good." I have no idea that your Brace will cure many diseases, but as a preventive of disease, I find by considerable experience and observation, that it is very valuable; particularly such diseases as are incident to the digestive organs, lungs and spine; because it pleasantly compels a person to be straight, and thereby aids the operation of nature. Blessed are the upright, body as well as mind; and the opposite is equally true—Cursed are the crooked.

I have applied this brace to a great variety of persons, male and female, old and young; and in most of these cases with decided benefit, especially those of feeble constitutions and slender forms. And I am particularly pleased with its structure, conforming, as it does, so entirely to physiological principles; on which account it commends itself to reason and common sense, as well as to experience. Blessed are the upright, body as well as mind; and the opposite is equally true—Cursed are the crooked.

Removal.

THE subscriber takes this method to inform his customers and the public, that he has moved to the new building lately erected by Mr. Samuel Corbridge, it being more commodious and better adapted to his business; and also, would tender his sincere thanks for the liberal share of patronage which he has received during the past year. His former customers and the public generally are invited to call, where will be found a variety of Stoves, among which is the

New England Air-Tight, embodying in the highest degree of perfection, every essential quality requisite for any latitude. This Stove presents itself externally in a plain dress, with just and admirable proportions, giving it the appearance of a chest and tastefully made piece of Cabinet Furniture. Intrinsically, the location and capacity of the Fire Chamber, as well as to remove effectually the objections often made to Air-Tight Cook-Stoves for country use. The Oven proves itself to be precisely what its projectors intended it should be, viz., the largest and most perfect ever constructed in a family Stove. The Flues, upon which the general safety, and reputation of a stove depends, differ from any ever before used, and are of such construction and capacity as to ensure the most perfect draught, without liability to fill up, and are easily kept clean. Nearly one hundred of this stove have been sold the past year, and all have given the utmost satisfaction.

Also—A variety of PARLOR, OFFICE and CYLINDER STOVES, together with a good assortment of TIN, BRITANIA, SHEET IRON and Japaned Ware.

New York City.

MISCELLANY.

RAISING THE WIND AND DUST.

'We're out of funds,' sighed Digges.

There was no denying this.

But at this moment, a very respectable clad personage, who was going down Broadway at

New York speed, tipped his hat, and said

'Good morning, Mr. Digges.' When he said

this, he was gone, but his words made a deep impression on the mind of Bob.

'Who's that?' he asked.

'Don't know his name; he belongs to my Lodge. A very clever fellow.'

Your lodge? he echoed—'You are an Odd

Fellow, then?'

'Yes.'

'And a Son of Temperance?'

'Yes.'

'And a Rechabite?'

'Yes.'

Bob's face grew radiant.

'Are your dues paid up?'

'Yes; why do you ask?' exclaimed Digges,

astonished at the sudden delight of his friend.

'How much do these societies give to a sick

brother?'

'Some three, and some four dollars a week.'

'What proof do they require of his sickness?'

'The certificate of a respectable physician,' answered Digges.

A pause ensued. Bob seemed running over with a superabundance of delight.

'And with these facts before you my misguided Digges, you have perished in the enjoyment of good health?'

'Never was sick a week in my life, only'—he paused; 'only in a pocket.'

Without another word, Bob took the arm of Digges within his own, and led him into a neighboring oyster cellar. Seated within the box, he closed the curtains, and said, in a tone

of great feeling:

'Digges, you really ought to take care of yourself! You now exhibit all the premonitory symptoms of a bilious attack—'

'Eh? cried Digges jumping from his seat.

'Your skin is sallow, your tongue furred, and eyes feverish. In an hour, my friend, you will be delirious. To-morrow you will not be expected to live, and next week—'

'Next week?' echoed Digges, becoming pale.

'Next week,' resumed Bob, 'you will—'

'you listen?—you will draw at least twelve dollars from these societies. I will sign your certificate. And as you will be sick a great many weeks you will continue to draw twelve dollars per week for a considerable time. Digges, I pity you.'

At these words the countenance of Digges became over spread with a mild resignation. He laid upon a bed, his cadaverous face appearing above the edge of the coverlid.

After a few moments they would leave, first placing in the hands of Bob, the sum due his sick friend.

And after the committee had left, and gone down stairs, Bob would give orders that his patient should not be disturbed. He would then approach the bed and address his patient

in these words—'Digges, my boy, will you take your toddy hot or cold?'

To which the patient, flinging off the bed clothes, and jumping out of bed, would respond—

'I'll take it hot, Bob.'—Pittsburg Chronicle.

A QUAKER WEDDING.

The Newark Daily Advertiser gives the following account of a public marriage somewhere

in New Jersey.

The room was crowded by a very promiscuous audience. At the appointed time the benches of the elders were filled with a score of old men,

'on whose calm faces the dove sat visibly brooding.' Their eyes wandered occasionally.

I observed to 'behold the vanity' of the young people, who thronged the body of the house. It was far from being what dear Charles Lamb describes as 'a silence deep as that before the winds were made,' for the irreverent intruders

kept up a constant buzz.

Presently the staid dignified couple entered,

(they were both quite aged) and with that quiet gravity that always rests so gracefully on a Quaker face. She was attired in immaculate satins, and his straight coat would have gladdened the eyes of Penn himself. There was something a little strange and yet impressive exceedingly in the sight of this venerable pair viewing their perpetual fellowship for the short remnant of their lives.

After waiting a long time for the motions of inward monitor, the bridegroom slowly drew off

his gloves and gave his hand to his meek companion; they rose up in their places, and I could barely here him say 'I, Geoffrey Crayon,

do in the presence of this assembly take Bridget

Lamb to be my loving and lawful wife until death shall separate us.' The lady repeated faintly another sentence of the same import, and they took their places again, and the simple ceremony was ended. Nothing was wanted

but for another placid member of the fraternity to rise up and read a parchment certificate of the marriage, to which the parties affixed their names.

One of the oldest Friends present then moved to the front and said—'The audience may now retire.' The whole ceremony was most primitive and beautiful. Adam must have been married pretty much in the same way—

having the certificate—which somewhat mars the solemnity of the proceeding now, with its

'I know all men by these presents,' its 'afors-

said,' and other surrogate's office terms and phrases. Though this letter may never reach the venerated pair in their far-off home,

yet as their entire into matrimonial life was so publicly made, they will permit me thus publicly to wish them lengthy days, prosperity and honor.

A SCOLDING WIFE CURED.

David Price, a man of meek and kindly spirit, had long suffered from the clatter-patter

ever-resting tongue of his wife. One day,

an herb-doctor greeted David with a—

'Well, Master David, how be you?'

'Oh, I be very well, thanks to ye, but my wife is not so very nicely.'

'Indeed,' said the gatherer of simples, 'with a quick ear for an ailment, 'what may be the matter wi' her, Master David?'

'Well,' said David, in his usual quiet way,

'she have a bad breaking out about her mouth

every now and then, that troubles her and me

How to Get up a Row with your Wife.

First Plan. Take her to the theatre. Select the prettiest girl in the house, and keep your eye glass pretty constantly fixed on her. Remark to your wife that that is the style of beauty you admire. Wife will get fidgety and cross.

Observe what an odd thing it is no woman can bear to be told of any body being prettier than herself. The row will thus be put in good train, and you can make it more or less strong,

as you please.

Second Plan. Wait until your wife is at her toilet, preparatory to going out. She will be sure to ask you if her bonnet is straight. Remark that the lives of nine tenths of women are passed in thinking whether their bonnets are straight, seasoning the observation by a general

series of reflections on the whole sex, as being a set of dressy humbugs, and winding up with a remark that you never knew but one girl who had common sense about her. Wife will ask who that was. You will sigh, reply, 'Ah! never your mind.' Wife will ask why you did not marry her; then you say abstractedly,

'Ah! why indeed? The row is safely under way.

Third Plan. Tell your wife you are going traveling for a month. She will ask to accompany you. Reply that that is out of the question, you are going upon business. Wife will ask what business. Answer that that is secret which you are not justified in revealing. Wife will say, 'Ah a pretty sort of business that you're afraid to tell your wife of.' Do you now keep silent, and the lady will finish the operation of getting up a row herself.

POLITENESS IN DEATH. The great chain, with which the voluptuous King Charles II. sustained such a hold on the affections of the mass of the English people in spite of his licentiousness

and tyrannies, lay in his remarkable affability

and politeness. And this is a striking illustration of the power for good or evil which is capable of being acquired by winning manners.

Charles had come upon his dying bed. All the distinguished men attached to his court, and all the important persons of his household had crowded into his apartment to witness his expiring agonies. These they had watched during the whole night. The morning light began to peep through the windows of Whitehall. Charles desired the attendants to pull aside the curtains that he might have one more look at the day. He remarked that he was in full possession of his faculties. Hence, probably from the force of his habitual politeness, and with no consciousness of levity, he apologized to those who had stood around him all night, for the trouble which he had caused them, and said he had been a most unconscionable time dying; but he hoped they would excuse it. Soon after this his speech failed him.—Macaulay.

THE BOY THAT SMOKES. What shall I say of the boy that smokes? Shall we pronounce any judgement upon him? Shall we say that he is acquiring an evil habit? that he is becoming a slave to a master, who by and by will be very cruel to him; that is, that he is becoming a slave to a habit, who by and by will

be very cruel to him; that is, that he is be-

coming a slave to a habit, who by and by will

be very cruel to him; that is, that he is be-

coming a slave to a habit, who by and by will

be very cruel to him; that is, that he is be-

coming a slave to a habit, who by and by will

be very cruel to him; that is, that he is be-

coming a slave to a habit, who by and by will

be very cruel to him; that is, that he is be-

coming a slave to a habit, who by and by will

be very cruel to him; that is, that he is be-

coming a slave to a habit, who by and by will

be very cruel to him; that is, that he is be-

POETRY.

YET.

Yet we labor, ever hoping,
Though misfortune mocks endeavor—
Down disaster's desperate sloping
Yet we struggle, hoping ever—Wearily.

Even as the stream is flowing
To the sea with ceaseless motion,
Never wane its current knowing,
Pass our lives to sorrow's ocean, Consciously.

Weep'st thou, Woe! unhappy mother,
O'er thy dead child's misery?
Let us sit by one another,
And our moan shall echo thee Dreadfully.

Yet, though Hope herself were dying,
In despite of Love and Glory,
Our crush'd lives besides her lying,
Should maintain the same high story Steadfastly.

But, Oh Hope! thy ghost shall lead us
Thro' the grave of Time's commotion,
Till the Eternal Watchers heed us,
Till they give to our devotion Victory.

WINTER.

Worse the walking, worse the weather,
Tries one's soul—and worse the leather.
Now we catch it!

Take good care, ma'am,
Like a hatchet
Cuts the air, ma'am;
With the mercury down to zero,
If you stand it you're a hero.
Butter the night is—stir the fire up—
Crack the walnuts—bring the cider;
To the hearth, now, all draw nigher up—
'Bill, there's a bill—sit close beside her—Fiddling, dancing
Bright eyes glancing,
Chatting, jesting, joking, sporting,
Glorious time to do up courting!—
You may either love or love it!
Such is weather—'vel rot of it'!

CONSTANCY.

Julia need I say I love thee?
Have loved the long, and loved thee well?
If so, I swear by all above me
I love thee more than words can tell!

And wilt thou never, never turn,
And leave me, dear, to mourn and weep?
Will thy affection ever burn,
And never for a moment sleep?

Believe me, dearest, I'll be true
Through all the scenes of life's short race,
If friends be many or be few,
If fortune smile or hide her face.

Enough! forgive a maiden's tear—
You will not, sure, inconsistent prove;
I cannot think you insincere
With such assurance of your love.

[ONE WEEK LATER]

Julia, what news? I think you spoke
About a letter from your mother, Julia.

O, very sad; my father's broke,
So I'm dependant on a brother.

Your father's broke? (he's broke my heart!)
The news, my dear, must give you sorrow—
It's getting late, and we must part;
I'll call again, perhaps, to-morrow.

ANECDOTES.

The late professor Vince, one morning, several years having been blown down the night previous, meeting a friend in the walks of St. John's college, was accosted with—
'How do do, sir? quite a blustering wind this.'
'Yes,' answered Vince, 'it is a rare mathematical wind.'
'Mathematical wind?' exclaimed the other, 'how so?'
'Why,' replied Vince, 'it has extracted a great many roots.'

An English sailor in the Mediterranean, called out to his shipmates one morning, when there happened, after six months' clear weather, to be a slight fog—
'Turn out, boys! turn out! Here's the weather as it is; weather; none of your infernal blue sky!'

A young lady engaged in writing, observed to a clergyman present, that she was a Scribe. To which the man in orders, with a sagacity and clerical discernment truly creditable, replied: 'And fair I see.' (Pharisee.)

A shrewd farmer in the Vermont Legislature declined answering a speech of a member who was remarkable for nothing but his freethy and pugnacious impudence and self-conceit, thus—'Mr. Speaker, I can't reply to that "ere speech, for it always wrecks me terrible to kick at nothing.'

A negro's idea of love, as given by one of the Ethiopian Serenaders—'Ah, nigger! feel as if I was up in the clouds between two hot buckwheat cakes, and all the angels were pouring down "lasses on me."

An urchin in a country school, was reading the verse in the New Testament which reads thus—'And he saw Abraham after off with Loturus in his bosom.' The boy gravely spelt it out thus—'and he saw a broom stick off with leather-ears in Boston.'

What do you lay here for? said a watchman to an individual who occupied a horizontal position on the sidewalk. Why, look here old fellow, said the party addressed, lay here some of the eggs I took in my nog this evening.

The Circassian Oil.

THIS OIL has now obtained a celebrity worthy its high intrinsic merits. The sales have lately increased and in public estimation it supercedes all other preparations for the HAIR. The proprietor is constantly receiving testimonials of its great efficacy in restoring the hair in cases of baldness, and it has also been signally successful in curing the various scrofulous affections to which the head and hair is subject. Parents will find the Circassian Oil an article of incalculable benefit to children, in laying the foundation of a

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE, it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.
Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.
A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory of the Agent in this town.

E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIST'S, and various other patterns of Cook Stoves, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

—ALSO—
SHEET IRON, TIN AND COPPER WORK done to order, Of the best Materials, and in a workmanlike manner.

FURNISHING GOODS, Consisting of Caps, Stocks, Cravats, Bosoms, Collars, Flannel Shirts and Drawers. Also, READY MADE CLOTHING, at very low prices.

It will be found that he has adopted the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, a mode which is considered as a guarantee against the fraudulent devices of disreputable dealers, as also against the sometimes interminable process of making a bargain. Should there be any who disfavor such a system, they may, by calling at his establishment, find reasons to alter their opinion. Customers are allowed to return every article which on trial is found to have been misrepresented. But we doubt if they will find occasion to do so.

He DOES HIS OWN CUTTING, which he flatters himself he has no need to boast of, inasmuch as it is now too well known to need any man's praise, and least of all his own.

He invites the attention of such as expect Punctuality and Good Workmanship, FOR CASH, such being his rule of business,—the REDUCED RATES at which he sells rendering any other mode impracticable. All who thus employ him, he is confident, will have good reason to be satisfied.

THE WEDDING RING.

'Louisa,' said a gentleman to his daughter,
returning to the room which he had quitted a minute before, 'there is a woman waiting to see you down stairs—go to her at once.'

'La, papa! I dare say she is in no hurry,' replied the young lady, without rising from the easy-chair into which she was sunk.

'My dear, do not keep her waiting; the time of a workwoman is her capital, and you have no right to defraud her of it.'

'Defraud, papa; what hard words you use!
I am sure I always pay them their bills—what more can they ask?'

Her father had not waited for the conclusion of the sentence; and Louisa, seeing he was gone, proceeded with her breakfast, intending,
when she had done, to send for the woman,
who she knew was bringing her some artificial flowers to inspect. While sipping her coffee, her eye fell on a new publication which her father had been that morning examining. She seized upon it, and soon engrossed in its pages, forgot the artificial flowers, the artist, and her father's admonition. An hour passed, when she was interrupted by the entrance of some young friends, whose visit of course detained her in the drawing-room. After a great deal of lively but rather empty chat, one of her visitors observed that there was a woman in the hall as they passed with a basket of the most exquisite fancy flowers she had ever seen. She longed to examine them all. With a slight blush Louisa, recollecting her father's words, rung for the forgotten tradeswoman; and the next hour was consumed by the young ladies in turning over the beautiful specimens contained in the baskets, trying them on their heads before the glass, and wishing earnestly that they could afford to purchase them. They were good-humored, pretty, elegant girls, well and expensively dressed, and they seemed just fitted to be the inhabitants of the apartment
where this scene was passing. It was a handsomely-furnished room; the walls hung with paintings, the tables spread with costly books,
the consoles and marble brackets covered with tasteful ornaments; perhaps the value of only a few of those China vases would have formed a fortune to many a poor family. The pleasant morning air, which breathed through the light muslin curtains, and waved the rich damask drapery, was scented with the perfume of heli-otrope and jessamine, and the gleam of sunshine which fell on the glass globe, where the gold fish swam, was reflected back upon the rich-cut chandeliers, and made them look like fragments of rainbow. All was in keeping with the gay girls, who gazed at themselves in the tall pier-glasses—all except the pale, anxious, careworn face of the owner of the flowers.
Dressed in widow's weeds, which time had rendered shabby, although evidently preserved with care, her look, as she handed out one graceful wreath after another, was so so sadly in contrast with her customers' gaiety, that, had they been aware of her thought on her they must have felt some pity. But they neither looked at nor noticed her, except to enquire the price of some beautiful specimen, exclaim at its dearth, wish they could buy them all, and declare they would learn to make them, it must be such charming work. Finally, after having disarranged the whole of her stock, one of them discovered that it was time to go to the portrait-painter to whom she was sitting, as that gentleman never waited a moment, and she should lose the only hour he could give her. Louisa made some trifling purchase, for she had changed her mind
on the subject and desired some other ornaments; and the young party hastily quitted
the house, leaving the poor widow to replace her injured goods, and return home at her leisure.

'And Miss Singleton's wedding wreath!'
said the daughter. 'How can I finish that unless I have the materials I require? Only two shillings for four hours walking and waiting!
Ah mother, mother, how little they know the value of time to us! Will you buy the white and green silk with that money.'

I spent my child, in buying food. I knew we had nothing in the house, and your boy will be wanting his dinner presently. Is he asleep?'

'Yes, see how soundly he sleeps,' answered
the young woman; and removing a slight covering, she exhibited on the bed beside her a small fair boy, apparently about a twelve-month old, who peacefully slumbered in the happy indifference of infancy.

Both gazed at the child till tears brimed to their eyes; but after a few minutes, the young mother turned away and said, 'What can we do? This wreath must be finished, or in another week we shall all be houseless.' She paused a moment, and a crimson spot, which told of some internal struggle, appeared upon her cheeks, whilst her thin lips grew paler than before; then drawing from her finger her wedding-ring, she held it out to her mother. 'It is but a short time,' she murmured; 'and what matters it? Why should I feel so bitterly at parting with the symbol, when the reality has been torn from me? For our child—his child's sake—it must be done! And what does it signify what is thought of me? It was a sacrifice
she could not have asked, but which she saw to be inevitable; for they did not possess another superfluity. Silently, therefore she took it and left the room; whilst her unhappy daughter,
when left alone catching up the orange flowers,
exclaimed, 'Happy, happy girl! when you wear this wreath, how little will you suspect
the bitter tears, the weary fingers, and the aching hearts which have accompanied its growth!
And I was once as happy. Who would have imagined the miserable reverse I now present? But am I not giving way to envy? Because my prospects are blighted, would I wish hers to be dimmed? Heaven forgive me!'— and sinking on the bed beside her still sleeping boy, she continued silent and motionless until her mother's return.

The elder widow, meanwhile, with weary steps and heavy heart, pursued her way to fulfil this painful errand; but deeply engrossed in her own mournful reflections, that she scarcely noticed where she was wandering, until she found herself at the door of a large jeweler's shop in a fashionable street. She entered timidly; and waited until she saw one of the shopmen disengaged, before she ventured to explain her errand and exhibit the ring.

'It is not our practice, madam, to buy second hand goods,' was the reply; 'and if we do, we can only give you the value of the gold.'

'And what may that be?' faltered she.
'I suppose about half a crown,' he carelessly answered.

'And is that the utmost you can give me?'
repeated she in a pleading tone. 'I am in distress, and have not another sixpence in the world.'

'Are you not the person who sells artificial flowers?' inquired a gentleman who had been for some minutes watching her, and was interested by the sweetness and propriety of her manners.

'She replied in the affirmative.
'And did you sell nothing this morning?'
again asked he.

'One young lady purchased a two shilling
flower,' replied the poor widow; but she detained me so long, that I displeased an excellent customer by failing in punctuality. The gentleman bit his lip, and hastily crossing the shop,
he returned in another minute, leading in Louisa; for he was her father, and she had been occupied in selecting a new pair of bracelets
for herself at the opposite counter.

'Repeat what you have just said to my daughter,' said Mr. Frizell. 'I ask it as a favor for her, sake entirely.'

'Excuse me, sir, and forgive the young lady,' replied the widow firmly. 'She was probably not aware of how much value an hour is to a tradesperson; but I do not wish to complain of her for that.'

'Permit me at least to rectify her errors,' continued the father; 'but as our business can be better transacted in a more private place, suffer
me in the first instance, to convey you home.
You have probably walked far this day.' It was in vain that she offered any opposition;
in another minute she was seated beside Louisa in Mr. Frizell's elegant equipage, to the great mortification of that young lady, who lunged herself into a corner, and did her utmost to conceal herself from view, lest any one should recognize her with such a companion.
They could not approach the lodging very closely in the carriage; but Mr. Frizell, nothing dismayed by the narrow street or dry staircase, resolutely drew on his reluctant daughter and the child of wealth and luxury—the gay, the elegant, the fashionable Louisa Frizell—for the first time stood face to face with the worn and waisted sufferer from want and disease.

Never could she forget the thrill with which she glanced round the miserable room, and eyed
the feeble sufferer stretched upon that bed.
Poverty! till then she had not known what it was; and yet this was poverty in its least repulsive shape; for though bare and desolate,
the room was clean; and though feeble and emaciated, the invalid was tidy in her person;
whilst the beautiful little boy who sat beside her, bending his dark pensive eyes on the strange visitors, as it to question their object, gave a degree of grace and elegance to the group. When Louisa saw the gratitude with which her father's purchases were acknowledged and the satisfaction with which the sum of only twenty shillings was received, she began to understand a little of the value and power of money. But the glow of still deeper feeling which the restoration of the wedding ring occasioned was so touching, that she felt for the moment that she would willingly sacrifice half her trinkets to be the author or receiver of such a glance as that.

Happy as was this encounter for the two widows it was eventually a far happier one for Louisa herself. They were in fact raised from a situation of most depressing and heart-breaking poverty to a degree of comfort, which to their moderate wishes seemed like affluence. But she was aroused from a far more lamentable state—
from a poverty of feeling, a death of compassion, a want of kindly charity to her neighbors, which, but for some such lesson as this, might have starved and destroyed every amiable sentiment in her nature. But the lesson was effectual; and the once thoughtless Louisa Frizell
now sets an example to her young companions
both of consideration towards those people she employs, and of moderation and self-denial in the use of the ornaments and expenses which her station in life appears to justify or require.

NORMON CREED.

'The Latter-Day Saints,' after immersion, lay on hands in the name of Jesus Christ for the gift of the Holy Ghost, according to ancient pattern. They are then considered saints, or members of the Church of Christ, a full follow-ship and communion. They are taught to observe all things as required or commanded by Christ or his apostles—such as meeting together often to sing, to pray, to exhort, to testify, to prophesy, to speak with tongues, to interpret, to relate their visions revelations, &c.;
and, in short, to edify and perfect each other, by a free exercise of all the gifts of God, as set in order among the churches. We also teach them to walk in all the ordinances of God blameless, such as the partaking of bread and wine, in remembrance of his broken body and shed blood, on the first day of the week; and also to send for the elders of the church when any of them are sick, that they may pray for them and lay their hands on them in the name of Jesus, or anoint them with oil in the name of the Lord, that they may be healed according to the Scriptures. We also teach them to abstain from all immorality—such as injustice,
pride, vanity, dishonesty, evil speaking, falsehood, hatred, envy, avarice, intemperance, adultery, fornication, lasciviousness, &c.; and to practice all the virtues—such as love to God
and good will to man, brotherly kindness, temperance, industry, &c. He that has two coats let him impart to him that has none, and he
that has food let him do likewise; but he that will not work neither shall he eat. In short, we teach them to do all the good in their power
—to visit the widow and fatherless in their affliction, and to keep themselves unspotted from the world.'

SIR, A SECRET MOST IMPORTANT.

'I'll tell you what it is, Burley, I've no business here.'

'I came for business, you for pleasure.
'True, but it was for a day and you have made a week of it. Here I am, twenty five miles from the city—'

'An awful distance, truly, that you may accomplish on the railroad in forty five minutes.'

'Yes, but I might as well be with the Kham of Tartary, as here, inasmuch as nobody at home knows of my visit to this city of spindles.'

'We will be back to day—this hour if you like.'

'This hour we must, if at all. In a short time
we were shooting over the Boston and Lowell Railroad. It was the last trip for the day and when we reached the city it was nearly or quite dark. Baggage I had none, so refused the im-portunities of a score of hackney coachman,
and looted it alone up to Leverett street.'

'Very mysterious,' I overheard a knot of men say, at the corner of Barton street.'

'About twenty five years of age,' said one of the group at the corner of Vernon street. Just my age exactly. 'The body was found in the water yesterday,' said another. 'Indeed, and they know it was he?' 'Yes, by his clothing; the face was so terribly disfigured that his friends
could not recognize it.'

'Another case of suicide, thought I. Well, I shall know all about it, when I get home, but I stopped again, before a store in Green street, where a man was reading from the evening paper aloud a paragraph about the suicide; the name I did not hear. 'A young man of respectable connections—retired and modest in timidity in his manners, and of irreproachable private character. No possible reason except temporary insanity, can be assigned for the deed. He has left a wife and two children.'

'Poor fellow!' I sighed, and pushed on. Let me see—the tenth hour passed, and my helpmate, through a very good woman in her way,
will not fail to give me a pretty affectionate bit of a lecture for my week's indulgence of a transient disposition. Bitter though such a visitation may be, it is no provocation of appetite—and I took the precaution to drop into an eating-house
thus to take my wife's lecture on a full stomach. The curtain drawn upon me, I was too busy for a few moments to notice anything out of the four feet square box in which I was discussing a pretty substantial supper. Presently, appetite somewhat appeased, I became less occupied in creature comfort, and involuntarily listened to the conversation of two persons from whom I was divided by the low partition.

'He must have been intemperate.'

'No, he was not.'

'In debt, then.'

'No, I was well acquainted with him.'

'And I knew that voice, but I could not immediately recollect whose it was. He proceeded.'

'I was well acquainted with him. He was remarkably economical—prudent to a fault, yet
very benevolent—acutely sensible to the sufferings of the unfortunate about him—very sensitive—yearning for sympathy in his sombre moods, and always anxious to impart his pleasure to those about him. He would deny a friend, or even a mere acquaintance, nothing.'

'My picture to the life, thought I, as I nibbed
at the last fragment of flesh on a drumstick.
Hope my good feelings will never lead me to suicide. Paid my scat and exit, just as the enologist of the dead emerged from his cell.'

'When I reached—' street, a crowd was turning into it. I joined the tail of the throng, and hearing a discourse upon the universal topic the suicide, wondered which of my neighbors it was, and wished I had staid at Lowell until at least, 'seven of the nine days of wonder'
had passed over. But thought I, out of evil, good may come—and, upon the whole, I am glad he lived in this street. My wife, from the circumstance, may be acquainted with his family, and there will, of course, be a diversion of her attention from her delinquencies. Wonder if she has heard of it? If not, such a delightfully interesting and authentic peace-offering. So thinking, I turned down a court—made a circuit, and reached my door before the crowd.
Took out my key, entered the hall, and put my hand upon the sitting room door, which stood an inch ajar. Unusual noises there, made me hesitate.

'Will they bring him home to night? sobbed my rib—and then she bust into a fit of outrageous weeping, which would have prevented the possibility of her hearing, had a reply been attempted—and all the women, of whom I supposed there must have been a dozen at least accompanied her, but in a more dutiful regulated and complaisant pitch.

Her old hysteric's again, thought I. Hang it but she's the compassionate—she could hardly weep with a better relief for myself. A tap on the outer door—and as I looked out at the side lights, I saw the whole posse of charitable neighbors, idlers, and others who upon any mournful occasion crowd themselves forward, solely because they think none at such a time will have the nerve to kick them back. One of them brushed by me to open the door—in walked a clergyman as pioneer—then came a coffin. I stopped for no word but bolted for the kitchen stairs. At the head stood the only member of my kitchen cabinet—a dusky wench, who the moment I came near enough for the light of the lamp she held to fall upon my features, sat up
a howl, and rolled down the flight backward.
She had hardly touched the floor, but bounded up again, and made her escape at a back window, taking the sash with her to be sure, I suppose, for an aperture to creep in at, on her return.

'I began to have my misgivings, and sat down in the kitchen to consult myself how to act in the dilemma. A man descended the stairs.

'Can you tell me sir, whose body they have brought to the house?'

'Yes—it will kill his wife—takes on shockingly.'

'But who was he?'

'Who?'

'Yes!—who?'

'Beautiful family—pity it was broken up.'

'Will you tell me who is the drowned man or not?'

'Why, don't you know?'

'I caught up the tongs.'

'It is Mr. Albert Easy—and I expect I'll have to make a coffin for his wife too—poor woman.'

'Upon my honor, my friends have done well
to drown, and make preparations to bury me,
without my knowledge.'

'Through the Reverend Parson, my wife was apprised of my actual existence, the coffin and corpse to the contrary notwithstanding—through the care of the family physician, she escaped death from the surprise—and through the grief I had given her, and the joy sequent upon its removal I escaped upbraiding. The clothes which the defunct wore were once mine
—that was a fact; but I had made him a present of them but a week before, without my wife's knowledge for in all such disposals of property, I have found it safe to consider her my left hand, and to obey the scripture injunction, not to let the left hand know what the right hand doeth. The corpse removed to a city building, I hastened to find Burley; detailed the whole affair, and ended by telling him
I held him guilty.'

'How?'

'You persuaded me off and would not even hear of my notifying my family of the journey.'

'I expected to return the same day; but,
young man, I shall for what you have suffered,
in your own person and that of your wife you twain being one flesh, amply compensate you.'

'I won't hear of such a thing.'

'Yes, but you will; it costs me nothing, and will vastly benefit you. I shall impart to you a secret.'

I stood attentive thinking I was about to hear of an anticipated rise or fall of some stock, or of some other mood of making money, known only to the knowing ones.

'During my acquaintance with you, I have discovered your entire ignorance of one of the most simple but useful things in the world; nay
it is indispensable to property and would have saved you the whole of your late vexation, if put in exercise, when I asked you to leave the city unprepared.'

'Well, and what is it?'

'The nonpayable NO, often necessary for your friends than your enemies. The latter knowing and suspecting that you know the relation in which you mutually stand, seldom give you opportunity to deny them anything; but friends do every day. Stop and sup with me, and—'

'No!'

ALLEGED BURYING ALIVE. In the midst of exaggeration and invention, there is one undoubted circumstance which formerly excited
the worst apprehensions the fact that bodies were often found turned in their coffins and the grave-clothes disarranged. But was ascribed, with seeming reason, to the throes of vitality,
which mimics, by its mechanical force, many of the movements of life. So powerful is this gas in corpses that have lain long in the water that
M. Doyere, the physician to the Morgue, at Paris, and the author of a text-book on legal medicine, says, that unless secured to the table,
they are often heaved up and thrown to the ground.

Frequently strangers, seeing the motion of the limbs, run to the keeper of the Morgue, and announce, with horror, that a person is alive. All bodies, sooner or later, generate gas in the grave; and it constantly twists about the corpse, blows out the skin, till it rends with distention, and some times bursts the coffin itself.
When the gas explodes, with a noise, imagination has converted it into an outcry, or groan;
the grave has been re-opened; the position of the body confirmed the suspicion; and the laceration been taken for evidence that the wretch
had gnawed his flesh in the frenzy of despair.
So many are the circumstances which will constantly occur to support a conclusion that is more unsubstantial than the fabric of a dream.

ENJOYMENTS. The enjoyments which neither injure ourselves, interfere with the happiness of others, or violate the laws and decorum of society, are in fact themselves most effectual barriers against the indulgence of those criminal propensities which at one and the same time undermine our own happiness and destroy that of others. Give to mankind innocent amusements, and they will be far less likely to seek for guilty pleasures. But it will generally be found that those who whet their appetites
by rigorously abstaining from one enjoyment, are the most voracious in the gratification of others; and he who rails most loudly at the ninety nine innocent pleasures of life most commonly selects the hundredth as an exception,
and converts it into a vice by excessive indulgence.

In this distressed state I was ordered to try your remedy for CONSUMPTION. I did so, and in the course of a few weeks, I was restored to comparative good health, so that I have since been able to attend to ordinary business. Indeed my present state of health far exceeds my most sanguine expectations.

Special Notice to Consumptives!

Dr. S. S. FITCH, of New York city, would inform the citizens of Quincy and vicinity that he has established an Agency Office at No. 15 1/2 Hanover St., Boston, for the sale of his possible Medicines, Shoal Supporters, Inhalant Tubes for Consumptives, Shoulder Braces, etc. Dr. Fitch's "Guide to Invalids," (a work containing 74 pages) can be obtained gratis, by application at his office.

Ladies in the city can be waited upon at their residences, and Shoulder Braces, Supporters, etc., fitted by Mrs. RICE.

DR. BRIGGS'S SHOULDER BRACES AND SUPPORTERS are acknowledged by the Medical Faculty of New York to be the best ever invented. Read the following letter from Prof. C. P. BRONSON, A. M., M. D., Teacher of Education and Music, Da. Braces: Dear Sir—You ask my candid opinion of your "Suspenders and Shoulder Braces." I am not apt to be carried away with new things, nor accustomed to receive whatever comes highly recommended. I care but little for theory; practice, or use, is the great test; hence I abide by this motto—"Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good." I have no idea that your Braces will cure many diseases, as but as a preventive of disease, I find by considerable experience and observation, that it is very valuable; particularly such diseases as are incident to the digestive organs, lungs and spine; because it thereby assists a person to be straight, and thereby aids the operations of nature. Blessed are the upright body as well as mind; and the opposite is equally true—Cursed are the crooked.

I have applied this brace to a great variety of persons, male and female, old and young, and in most of these cases with decided benefit, especially those of feeble constitutions and slender forms. And I am particularly pleased with its structure, conforming, as it does, so entirely to physiological principles; on which account it commends itself to reason and common sense, as well as to science. I am acquainted with a good many articles of a somewhat similar character and purpose, but consider yours preferable to any of them, as it differs in some important respects from all others. Allow me to hope that you will not resort to any of the too common modes of alluring purchasers; only give it fair trial with reasonable persons, and they will need no other recommendation.

Yours truly,

C. P. BRONSON.

Dorchester and Milton

Extension Railroad Company.

NOTICE is hereby given, that a meeting of Edward P. Tilton, Nathan Caruth and Edward King and their Associates, (they having been made a corporation by an act of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts approved the first day of May 1849, entitled "An Act to incorporate the Dorchester and Milton Extension Railroad Company,") will be held at the office of Nathaniel F. Safford, in Milton, on MONDAY, the 4th day of February next, at 3 o'clock P. M., for the following purposes, to wit:

1st. To determine whether they will accept the Act aforesaid.

2d. In the event of such acceptance, to proceed to the organization, and the Election of the Officers required by law.

3d. In the event aforesaid, to determine whether they will said time and place proceed, and if so determined, to proceed to the making of By-Laws for the government of the Company.

4th. To determine what measures, if any, shall be taken at the time and place aforesaid, to procure subscriptions to the Capital Stock of the Company and to construct the Railroad authorized to be built under the Act aforesaid, and to take such action in regard to the location of said Railroad as shall be judged expedient.

5th. To determine whether, and how they will appoint and with what authority and power they will invest a Committee to confer and arrange with the Directors, Stockholders and Company of the Boston and Providence Railroad Corporation on the subject of their rights and interests acquired under the Act aforesaid.

6th. To determine whether they will petition the General Court of Massachusetts for an extension of the time within which, by the provisions of said Act, the location of said Railroad, and the alteration, amendment or extension of the charter, or for such alterations and amendments of charter, and for such other powers and privileges as shall be deemed requisite, and to take such measures as may accomplish said purposes.

7th. To do and execute all such other acts, matters and things which, ever, necessary for the organization under said Act, and for the maintenance of the powers and privileges vested in them by said Act, and for the extension of the time for the location and completion of said Railroad, or the alteration, amendment or extension of charter, or for such other purposes as may be deemed necessary.

For the execution of the purposes above named.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

FRIEND GRACE.—The following has been used but not published, for the reason that Leavitt was not hanged; but as some still hold on to hanging, if you see fit you may print it.

TO THE FRIENDS OF THE GALLOWS.

Ye who profess to love the Lord,
Come let your Christian deeds be known,
Ye pious priests prepare the cord
And meekly walk to Plymouth town.
There you may glut your raven beaks
In hapless Leavitt's purple gore,
And while the Law its vengeance wreaks,
Applaud the deed, for Leavitt's poor.

Ye pious deacons, all awake!
The heart sick priest's her god see;
Jesus, who spoke as man ne'er spoke,
The sinner's friend, commandeth thee.
But when you creep into his cell,
(Perhaps you'll not go near the door,)—
Assure the wretch he'll go to hell,
A thing of course, for Leavitt's poor.

Thus did not Christ; his friendly hand
Poured balm into the sinner's heart;
But you, perhaps, can't understand
How he could feel for others' smart,
And pray for that infatuate crew
Who made his precious blood run o'er;
The secret may to some be new,
He pitied 'em on the guilty poor.

Though sin the human brow defaced,
The Savior's piercing eye could see,
And where his Father's seal he traced,
His bosom yearned with sympathy.
When some a guilty woman brought,
Whose doom was death by Jewish law,
His keen rebuke conviction brought,
To their own hearts and she was taught
God's mercy—"Go and sin no more."

Ye Rulers of the Commonwealth,
And all the pious Council too,
In the warm blood of this poor elf
Will you your lily hands imbue—
Stand by and see your brother bleed
'Till life's last quivering pang is o'er,
While Moloch's priests applaud the deed
Because the wretched man was poor?

For many months poor Leavitt laid
A sufferer in his lonesome cell,
A victim to that cursed trade
Licenced the gallows drop to sell;
No friendly object met his eye,
And scarce a priest came near the door,
Those brother sinners pass'd him by,
Would it know the reason—Leavitt's poor.

I saw him in his lonely cell,
The tears were coursing down his face;
I mark'd his trembling bosom swell,
Where hope could find no resting place;
I saw the lone forsaken one,
Fast hark'ning to th' eternal shore,
And ask'd, must vengeance here be done?
It must, but why?—the victim's poor.

Had priestly power or wealth been thine,
Justice had scarcely drawn her sword
E'er every pulpit sent its whine,
To save their patron from the cord;
But silent are your pulpits now,
Their dumb dogs neither bark nor roar,
Vengeance prepares to strike the blow
And none hath pity on the poor.

Come hither ye of vampire brood,
And take your fill of blood to-day;
Come ye who boast hyena blood,
The Commonwealth prepares your prey.
But when you to your homes retire
The pictured scene will go before,
And on your brain with pen of fire
Shall memory write—"I hanged the poor."

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

ANECDOTES.

A Dutchman married a Yankee wife who turned out to be an intolerable vixen. One day when irritated beyond endurance by her tongue, the poor fellow began to rail a little in turn. He tried indeed to call the woman by that very offensive but expressive epithet which signifies the female of the canine species, but shocked at the thought of using so unbecoming a phrase to a lady, he gave vent to his wrath in an ingenious circumlocution, by swearing that she was the wife of a tam log!

One of our townsmen, meeting with one of the strolling organ players, was inclined to engage in conversation with him, and asked him—
"What part in the great drama of life do you perform?"
"I mind my own business," was the brief and pointed reply.

"Do you believe in predestination?" said the captain of a Mississippi steamboat to a clergyman who happened to be traveling with him.
"Of course I do."
"And you also believe that what is to be will be?"
"Certainly."
"Well, I am glad of it."

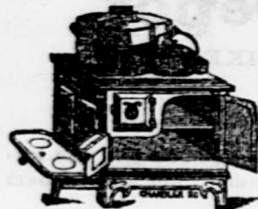

Why? I intend to pass that boat ahead in fifteen consecutive minutes, if there is any virtue in pine knots and loaded safety valves. So don't be alarmed if the biler ain't to be burst, they won't.
Here the Divine began putting on his hat, and looking very much like backing out, which the Captain seeing, he observed:
"I thought you said you believed in predestination and what is to be will be?"
"So I do, but I prefer being a little nearer the stern when it takes place!"

"Pa, what makes the people go to hear Webster, if they have all got to be put in iron?" "To be put in iron." "Sinner, what do you mean?" "Why the papers say that at his great speech to-day, the entire audience were chained to the spot."

"Is that clean butter?" asked a grocer of a boy who came to market. "I should think it ought to be brought in," replied the boy. "For man and calf were more than an hour picking the hairs and motes out of it."

Removal.

patronage which he has received during the past year, among which is this

New England Air-Tight,

embodying, in the highest degree of perfection, every essential quality requisite for any latitude. This Stove presents itself externally in a plain dress, with just and admirable proportions, giving it the appearance of a chaste and tastefully made piece of Cabinet Furniture. Initially, the location and capacity of the Fire Chamber is such as to remove effectually the objections often made to Air-Tight Cook-Stoves for country use. The Oven proves itself to be precisely what its projectors intended it should be, viz: the largest and most perfect ever constructed in a family Stove. The Flues, upon which the great responsibility and reputation of a stove depends, differ from any ever before used, and are of such construction, and capacity as to ensure the most perfect draught, without liability to fill up, and are easily kept clean. Nearly one hundred of this stove have been sold the past year and all have given the utmost satisfaction.

Also—A variety of PARLOR, OFFICE and CYLINDER STOVES, together with a good assortment of TIN, BRITANIA, SHEET IRON and Japaned Ware.

1 OPEN COLUMN PARLOR STOVE. 1 new New England Air Tight Cooking Stove. Apply to JOSIAH BRIGHAM & Co. Quincy, Dec. 8.

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE, it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 5, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is especially designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove. A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the

Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory

of the Agent in this town.

E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIST, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

—ALSO— SHEET IRON, TIN AND COPPER WORK done to order, Of the best Materials, and in a workmanlike manner.

LIFE IN BOSTON.

Mr. Editor.—We have a great variety of lives here, such as merchants, lawyers, physicians, teachers, legislators, musicians, and last, though not least, mechanics live.

Our Legislature are in full tide of successful sittings, that is, during the forenoon, for you know men can scarcely afford to work all day for the public good. Governor Briggs, now for the seventh year, I think, is in the gubernatorial chair and has not yet got a collar on.

The Custom-House is finished, and it has cost Uncle Sam a good sight of money, I assure you; but it is no matter, as he is rich. He employs a noble lot of fellows to do his business, connected with this huge pile of your best granite. I advise you and your townsmen to come to the city of Notions and see what a noble appearance it makes.

The Cockade (you know, it used to be called Long Pond, but has now a very classical Indian name) water is no mean affair to this city, and if you will just pass up by our State House and see those two noble fountains flowing in front of it, you will say so too. They look nobly; but it is said, they frighten horses.

We have had some lively times with sleighing this winter. It is doubtful whether there was ever better sleighing with so little snow, and our city bucks and lasses improve it well.

It is now the time of concerts, parties, levees, entertainments, clubs, lyceums, associations, etc. We have had some excellent lectures this winter. Mr. Curtis, on "the Constitution," before the "Lowell Institute," has gone back to those days which "tried men's souls," and bodies too, and made us look and see what has been. They have been superb. Dr. W. M. Cornell, formerly of your town, lectured the other evening before the "Mechanics' Library Association," on the "Physiology of the Human Skin." He was critical, minute and interesting; and showed the wonders and utility of the covering which the creator has spread so wonderfully and beautifully over our bodies. Such a lecture would be of great value to any people.

We have many religious lectures by different denominations of Christians. The Orthodox, Unitarians, Baptists, Methodists, Universalists, and Catholics have all been trying their hands at it, and, no doubt, much instruction will be communicated and much good done.

As to papers, perhaps you know as much about them, as we in the city. The Atlas, Post, Advertiser and Courier, all seem to 'hold on the even tenor of their way,' save only, that the Advertiser, the half of it which Mr. Hale sold a few years since, he has recently bought again; and most think the Courier has not yet fully recovered from the shock occasioned by the withdrawal of its old and tried editor, Mr. Buckingham. It is not every man who can wield a pen as he could.

As to the lesser papers, such as the Daily Traveler, Transcript, Chronotype, Times, Mail, Journal, etc, not much progress or falling away is to be noticed, save only, that the Transcript is not supposed to have improved as much as it was thought it would, by exchanging an editor for an editor; and the Chronotype has ceased before time. It was a spirited and high minded little thing. There are new papers and periodicals being born and expiring almost weekly, which shows that periodical literature is far from receiving that efficient support to which it is entitled.

Our Hotels are doing a first rate business this winter. They are all crowded and there is scarcely room to put your head into one of them; indeed, it is said to be the best business in Boston. More anon.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, FEB. 2, 1850.

John A. Green, Editor.

THE SCALPEL, a journal of health adapted to popular and professional reading, edited by Edmund H. Dixon, M.D.

We have perused the February number of this pungent and racy little Quarterly, with peculiar interest. The contents fully justify the title-page. Its articles are written with great humor and effect, and the ridiculous systems of medical quackery are held up to view with singular truthfulness and power. We consider the Scalpel as precisely the journal for the present age. Medically speaking "the times are of joint," and we run no hazard in saying that if Mr. Dixon, will continue to lop off increasing and ugly excrescences of quackery from the body medicale, by the use of this Scalpel, which he handles with such skill, he will not fail to secure the merit due so just a science. We advise the people as well as the profession to patronize "The Scalpel."

PUGNACIOUS. A bill has been introduced into the Georgia Legislature, "to strengthen the military arm of the State, and to enable the Governor to provide for the defence of the people," &c. It authorizes the appropriation of $200,000 to the arming and equipping of 300,000 soldiers and directs the Governor to ascertain what means are in the possession of the State for casting cannon, making muskets, swords, &c.

BOSTON CUSTOM HOUSE. Eight or ten subordinates in the Boston Custom House have been discharged.

THE LYCEUM. Notices of the lectures of Rev. Theodore Parker and Rev. Dr. Putnam, prepared for this week's paper, are unavoidably postponed till our next issue.

CHEAP POSTAGE. We have received a Circular from the New York Cheap Postage Association, treating on this subject. The Circular states that cheap postage would more than double the number of letters the very first year. It did so in England, where the weekly number of letters which in 1840 was 2,102,281, became 4,335,237 in 1841. It is proposed that Petitions be signed and forwarded to Congress, praying for the alteration of the postage law, and a reduction to two cents per half ounce for prepaid letters. It is believed, with that reduction the net amount would be fully equal to what it now is, and thousands would be better accommodated.

PROFIT IN PEARS. In the fall of 1848, says the New England Farmer, a gentleman of Plymouth bought two dwarf pear trees, (on quince stocks,) at one dollar and twenty five cents each. He set them that fall, and in less than a year from planting the trees, he took a dozen pears from them, and exhibited them at the annual show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, for which he received a premium of six dollars, and he sold the pears for three dollars—making a dividend of nine dollars on the small investment of only two dollars and fifty cents. The pleasure and reputation of so successful cultivation will pay the time and trouble. The variety was the Loise Bon de Jersey.

DARK AND COLD. In an account of the recent expedition in search of Sir John Franklin, it is stated they were eighty days without seeing the sun, and had the thermometer fifty degrees below zero. They served out their rations of fifth proof brandy by chopping it up with a hatchet, it being frozen solid.

DR. WEBSTER'S TRIAL. The Boston Times learns that this important trial will commence in the second week in March. Judge Wilde has notified Dr. W.'s counsel that the court will be ready, and they have consented that it come on at that time. There will be no arraignment until then.

CONGRESSIONAL. Neither branch of Congress was in session on Friday and Saturday.

Mr. Webster, on Monday, in the Senate, presented a petition in favor of granting land to actual settlers. Mr. Hamlin presented a petition for the reduction of the postage on all prepaid half-ounce letters, to two cents each.

On Tuesday, Mr. Clay introduced compromise resolutions upon the subject of slavery, and spoke at length in their support. The first resolution declares that California should be provided with suitable boundaries and admitted into the Union as a State. 2d. That it is inexpedient for Congress to oppose the restriction of slavery. 3d. The western boundary shall commence one league from the Rio Grande, and running thence to the southern line of New Mexico. 4th. Government to pay the debts of Texas before the annexation, Texas to relinquish all claim to New Mexico. 5th. Inexpedient to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, without the consent of the State of Maryland and the people of the District. 6th. Expedient to abolish the traffic in slaves, in the District, of such as are brought from without. 7th. Provides for a more effectual provision for the restitution of fugitives. 8th. That Congress has no power or control over the slave trade between the States.

Messrs. Rusk, Davis, of Mississippi, and Mason, opposed the resolutions.

Mr. Clay replied to each, and a long debate ensued. The resolutions were made the order of the day for Tuesday next.

In the House, a bill was introduced in favor of admitting Canadian produce into the United States free of duty, provided Canada reciprocates; the bill was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

LEISURE. On Friday of last week, the bill providing for the election of members of congress and Presidential Electors by a plurality of votes, after an able and protracted debate, was sustained in the House, 146 to 114. But little has been done of public interest in either branch the present week.

In the house, a bill for prohibiting the running of trains on railroads on the Sabbath has passed to a third reading. It provides a penalty of $10 for each train run, except steamboat and mail trains used for the sole purpose of conveying persons to and from public worship, or trains run from necessity and charity.

A bill has been reported to legalize marriages solemnized and wills executed on the Sabbath Day.

THE POULTRY BOOK. A treatise on the breeding and general management of Domestic Fowls; with numerous original descriptions, and portraits from life—by John C. Bennett, M.D. This work will be found to embrace more practical matter in regard to fowl-breeding, than is contained in all other American works together. It contains about fifty Portraits of choice varieties, some forty of which are from life, of the most important breeds, and several of them are from very recent importations.

The above work is in rapid progress, and will be ready in a few days. Phillips, Sampson & Co, Boston, Publishers.

BOSTON CUSTOM HOUSE. This work has been in progress about thirteen years, the Commissioners having held their first meeting on the 5th of September, 1836. The persons under whose direction the work was commenced and has been completed, are S. S. Lewis and Robert G. Shaw, with whom the Collector of the port, ex officio, has been associated. The entire cost of the structure has been $1,677,371 43, leaving a balance in the appropriation of $1102 53.

A MAINE ENTERPRISE. Soon after the news of the California discoveries reached this country, a Mr. Kimball, of Frankfort, (Me.) conceived a plan for the settlement of a township in that region with hardy and industrious families from his native State. The plan embraced the building and equipment of a ship, which was to carry the colony thither, and which was afterwards to be employed in the Pacific trade. This ship has now arrived at Boston preparatory to taking her departure for the land of gold. The members of this company number about one hundred. They carry with them their wives and daughters, and a considerable number of unmarried females.

The entire cost of the structure has been $1,677,371 43, leaving a balance in the appropriation of $1102 53.

A MAINE ENTERPRISE. Soon after the news of the California discoveries reached this country, a Mr. Kimball, of Frankfort, (Me.) conceived a plan for the settlement of a township in that region with hardy and industrious families from his native State. The plan embraced the building and equipment of a ship, which was to carry the colony thither, and which was afterwards to be employed in the Pacific trade. This ship has now arrived at Boston preparatory to taking her departure for the land of gold. The members of this company number about one hundred. They carry with them their wives and daughters, and a considerable number of unmarried females.

PROFIT IN PEARS. In the fall of 1848, says the New England Farmer, a gentleman of Plymouth bought two dwarf pear trees, (on quince stocks,) at one dollar and twenty five cents each. He set them that fall, and in less than a year from planting the trees, he took a dozen pears from them, and exhibited them at the annual show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, for which he received a premium of six dollars, and he sold the pears for three dollars—making a dividend of nine dollars on the small investment of only two dollars and fifty cents. The pleasure and reputation of so successful cultivation will pay the time and trouble. The variety was the Loise Bon de Jersey.

DARK AND COLD. In an account of the recent expedition in search of Sir John Franklin, it is stated they were eighty days without seeing the sun, and had the thermometer fifty degrees below zero. They served out their rations of fifth proof brandy by chopping it up with a hatchet, it being frozen solid.

DR. WEBSTER'S TRIAL. The Boston Times learns that this important trial will commence in the second week in March. Judge Wilde has notified Dr. W.'s counsel that the court will be ready, and they have consented that it come on at that time. There will be no arraignment until then.

THOMAS PAINE. The admirers of this celebrated man observed his 113th anniversary on Tuesday last. A salute was fired on Boston Common in his honor in the afternoon. He was born in Thetford, England, in 1737, came to this country in 1774, and soon plunged into the revolutionary ferment and rendered great service to the American cause by his writings. After the peace he went to England, where he was persecuted for sedition, and fleeing to France was there chosen a member of the National Assembly, and afterwards persecuted by the Terrorists, and all but executed. At the fall of Robespierre he was liberated, and in 1802 Mr. Jefferson had him brought to this country in a vessel of war. He died in 1809, and ten years afterwards his remains were disinterred and taken to England by Cobbett.

OAK HALL ROTUNDA. This is the finest salesroom in the country, and is filled with boys' clothing of every kind and quality. Some of the neatest patterns of children's dresses ever displayed in Boston can be found in this room. Prices asked for a complete suit are from $3 to $5. The materials are good, and they are made fashionably.

FIRE IN SCITUATE. The barn of Michael Jacobs caught fire from the carelessness of a smoker, one night last week, and was destroyed, with several tons of hay. Fourteen sheep and eight cattle also perished. The building was insured for $200.

FIRE IN ROXBURY. On Monday morning last, a fire broke out in a cottage belonging to the estate of the late Joseph Adams. Loss about one thousand dollars, which was insured. The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary, as the building was unoccupied.

To BAKE APPLES. Take sour apples, those of a keen acid, and to every square tin filled with them, pour over a tea-cup-full of water and one tea-cup-full of sugar. Bake them slowly till done. Eat them with cream and the juice which cooks from them. Nobody knows much of baked apples who has not eaten them in this way. No quince, pear, peach or plum preserves are equal to this simple dessert.

ADDITION TO BOSTON. There is a good deal of discussion in Boston respecting the proposal to annex a large territory to that city, from the towns of Roxbury and Dorchester. Should the division be made upon the line now selected, it would bring into the city about ten thousand inhabitants. It is said that there is but little objection to the movement from any quarter.

RETRENCHMENT. The Collector of New York has commenced the work by reducing the number of employees in the Custom House. One hundred seventy one were notified to quit on the 1st inst., and others have been put down to lower situations with less salaries. The saving by this reduction will be about one hundred and fifteen thousand dollars per annum, or about one fifth of the entire cost of the Revenue service at that Port.

REVENUE OF SAN FRANCISCO. The first report from the Collector of San Francisco has been laid before the Committee of Ways and Means. The Collector commenced the discharge of his duties on November 13th, and the duties received to November 30th, eighteen days, were 113,000 dollars; expenses in collecting, ten thousand dollars. He is to pay twenty nine thousand dollars per annum for a building of four rooms in which is transacted the custom house business.

GROWTH OF CATHOLICISM. The first Catholic Church in New York was opened in 1786. The eighteenth and nineteenth were opened in 1849. The Catholic population of the city is estimated at one hundred thousand. The Catholic Priests now in the United States, including California and New Mexico, number 1141—and the churches 1123. The Catholic population of the Union, including the territories, is 1,523,350. The accessions to Catholicism are due mainly to immigration.

THE Church is too apt to lift its eyes unto heaven and thank God it is not as others; it loves to repose on velvet cushions; to regale its refined senses with the rich and melting tones of the organ; and to roam through the gorgeous palaces of the imagination in the stately train of some sentimental moralist. The Church is too much occupied with 'things above' to trouble itself with the sufferings and the crimes which throng in our streets and concentrate in our prisons.

THE AGE OF IMPROVEMENT.

One of the most important discoveries of the age, in ameliorating the condition of this large class of suffering humanity, Consumption, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. What time establishes and concentrates, what experience adopts and confirms, what all men in all places unite in saying is good and valuable, is, no doubt, a prophecy of its success. It is so easy to treat so deep and strong, that time cannot destroy it. The success which has attended this medicine for several years past, has overcome the prejudices of all respectable and sensible men, and the article has taken a stand among the first class discoveries and blessings of the age; and when resorted to in season, eradicates the diseases for which it is recommended.

Dr. A. H. Moenir, of Turbino, North Carolina, writes as under, dated February 14, 1847, that he has used Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, in his practice the last eighteen months, and considers it the best preparation of the kind he ever saw, and knows of none so deserving the public patronage.

MORE CURES.

Effected by Dr. Corbett's Shaker Syrup of Sarsaparilla.

The following is from Jacob P. Eastman, of Concord, N. H., extensive and known as an efficient Railroad Contractor and Builder, throughout the New England States.

Boston, March 8, 1849.

Messrs E. Binley & Co. Gentlemen:—Happy am I to inform you of the wonderful effects of Corbett's Sarsaparilla upon a little daughter of ours, who was poisoned, when at the age of about three years by vaccination. Eruptions of the skin covered the whole body for more than two months, discharging the most offensive matter. We were compelled for months to oblige our little sufferer to wear mittens while in bed, and to adjust her night-dress by closing the openings at the hands and feet so as to prevent her from tearing her flesh. But even with these precautions, she would, at times, release her hands by gnawing her mittens about the finger ends, and then scratch and lacerate herself severely until the blood would flow.

She is now nearly restored to health, having used no other medicine for the last two years than "Corbett's Sarsaparilla." The effect of this powerful alternative is most signal, serving to cleanse the whole system and eradicate all disease. The skin of our little girl is now fair as that of infancy, and free from every mark of impurity and disease to perfect health, and this I know is the result of the use of Corbett's Sarsaparilla only.

Special Notice to Consumptives!

Dr. S. S. FITCH, of New York City, would inform the citizens of Quincy and vicinity that he has established an Agency Office, at No. 15 1/2 Hanover St. Boston, for the sale of his popular Medicines, Almond Syrup, Inhalant Tubes for Consumptives, Shoulder Braces, etc., etc. Dr. Fitch's "Guide to Invalids," (a work containing 74 pages) can be obtained gratis, by application at his office.

Ladies in the city can be waited upon at their residences, and Shoulder Braces, Supporters, etc., fitted by Mrs. RICE.

DR. BRIGGS'S SHOULDER BRACES AND SUPPORTERS are acknowledged by the Medical Faculty of New York to be the best ever invented. Read the following letter from Prof. C. P. BRONSON, A. M., M. D., Teacher of Education and Music.

Dr. Briggs: Dear Sir—You ask my candid opinion of your "Suspenders and Shoulder Braces." I am not apt to be carried away with new things, nor accustomed to receive whatever comes highly recommended. I care but little for theory; practice, for me, is the great test; hence I abide by this motto—"Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good."

I have no idea that your Braces will cure many diseases; but as a preventive of disease, I think by considerable experience and observation, that it is very valuable; particularly such diseases as are incident to the digestive organs, lungs and spine; because it pleasantly compels a person to be straight, and thereby aids the operations of nature. I disavow the upright body as well as mind; and the opposite is equally true—"Curved are the crooked."

I have applied this brace to a great variety of persons, male and female, old and young; and in most of these cases with decided benefit, especially those of feeble constitution and slender forms. And I am particularly pleased with its structure, conforming, as it does, so entirely to physiological principles; on which account it commends itself to reason and common sense, as well as to science. I am acquainted with a good number of persons of similar character and purpose, but consider yours preferable to any of them; as it differs, in some important respects from all others. Allow me to hope that you will not resort to any of the too common modes of alluring purchasers; only give it fair trial with similar persons, and they will need no other recommendation.

Yours truly, C. P. BRONSON.

Quincy, Jan. 26. 1f

To the Hon. the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled.

THE subscriber, in behalf of the Braintree and Weymouth Turnpike Corporation, requests that the Act of Incorporation passed March 3, 1850, may be so far altered and amended as to authorize said Corporation to erect two half toll gates on said Turnpike, one at or near a place called David Richard's meadow in the town of Weymouth, and the other between the house of the late Joseph Richards, Esq., deceased, in the town of Braintree, and the dividing line between the towns of Braintree and Quincy, and also that said Corporation be authorized to take toll from all persons who may pass either the toll gates on said Turnpike road excepting those who go to or coming from the meeting house or houses which they usually attend in the towns of Braintree, Weymouth and Quincy, on the Sabbath days, for religious purposes, and also for attending funerals within said limits; and that your Hon. body would appoint a Committee to view the same.

And as in duty bound would ever pray,

MICHAEL THAYER, President of the Corporation.

Braintree, Jan. 17th, 1850.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

In SENATE, Jan. 22, 1850.

ON the Petition aforesaid, Ordered, That the Petitioners cause an attested copy of their petition with this Order thereon, to be served on the Clerks of the towns of Braintree and Weymouth and published twice in the Quincy Patriot, said service to be fourteen days at least and said publication to be two days, at least, before the 15th day of February next, that all persons interested, may then appear, and show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted, and that Messrs. Pliny Merrick, Myron Lawrence of Belchertown, and John C. Gray of Boston, be a Committee to view the premises and report thereon on or before said 15th day of February next.

Sent down for concurrence.

CHARLES CALHOUN, Clerk.

In the HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, Jan. 23, 1850.

Borchester and Milton

Extension Railroad Company.

NOTICE is hereby given, that a meeting of Edmund P. Treston, Nathan Carruth and Edward King and their Associates, (they having been made a corporation by an act of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts approved the first day of May 1847, entitled "An Act to incorporate the Borchester and Milton Extension Railroad Company") will be held at the office of Nathaniel F. Safford, in Milton, on MONDAY, the 4th day of February next, at 3 o'clock P. M., for the following purposes, to wit:

1st. To determine whether they will accept the Act aforesaid.

2d. In the event of such acceptance, to proceed to the organization, and the Election of the Officers required by law.

3d. In the event aforesaid, to determine whether they will at said time and place proceed, and if so determined, to proceed to the making of By-Laws for the government of the Corporation.

4th. To determine what measures, if any, shall be taken at the time and place aforesaid, to procure subscriptions to the Capital Stock of the Company and to construct the Railroad authorized to be built under the Act aforesaid, and to take such action in regard to the location of said Railroad as shall be judged expedient.

5th. To determine whether and how they will appoint a Committee to confer and arrange with the Directors, Stockholders and Company of the Boston and Providence Railroad Corporation on the subject of their rights and interests acquired under the act aforesaid.

6th. To determine whether they will petition the General Court of Massachusetts for an extension of the time within which, by the provisions of said act, the location of said Railroad is to be filed and said Railroad is to be completed, and for such alterations and amendments of charter and for such other powers and privileges as shall be deemed requisite, and to take such measures as may accomplish said purposes.

7th. To do and execute all such other acts, matters and things whatsoever, necessary for due organization under said act, and for the maintenance of the powers and privileges vested in them by said act, and for the extension of the time for the location and completion of said Railroad or the alteration, amendment or renewal or extension of charter, or requisite or needful for the execution of the purposes above named.

E. P. TRESTON, Nathan Carruth, in the name of the Corporation.

NATHAN KING, Attest Incorporation.

POETRY.

THE MERRY SLEIGH.

Jingle! jingle! clear the way,
Tis the merry—merry sleigh!
As it swiftly scuds along,
Hear the burst of happy song,
See the gleam of glances bright,
Flashing o'er the pathway white,
Jingle! jingle! how it whirls,
Crowded full of laughing girls!

Jingle! jingle! fast it flies,
Sending shafts from hooded eyes,
Rough archers, I'll be bound,
Little heedings who they wound,
See them with capricious pranks,
Ploughing down the drifted banks;
Jingle! jingle! 'mid their glees,
Who among them cares for me?

Jingle! jingle! on they go,
Capes and bonnets white with snow,
At the faces swimming past,
Nodding thro' the fleecy blast;
Not a single robe they fold,
To protect them from the cold;
Jingle! jingle! 'mid the storm,
Fun and frolic keep them warm.

Jingle! jingle! down the hills—
O'er the meadows—past the mills—
Now 'tis slow, and now 'tis fast—
Winter will not always last,
Every pleasure has its time!
Spring will come and stop the chime!
Jingle! jingle—clear the way,
'Tis the merry—merry sleigh!

IF YOU'D AVOID BROILS LEARN TO FRY.

This longing after beauty,
This sighing after curls,
This chasing after fashion,
Wherever fashion whirls,
And all that sort of thing,

May do for those who like them,
For those devoid of taste,
For those who barter diamonds off
For diamonds made of paste,
And other blockheads;

But to a wife who truly loves,
Who'd be what she appears,
Who'd spread a sunshine round the man
That keeps away her tears,
And brings her 'aters home,

We'd whisper softly in her ear,
We'd grave it on her heart,
That knowing well to fry a steak
Beats sentiment and ait,
A darn'd night.

THE HYMNS MY MOTHER SANG.

There are no hymns to me more sweet
Than those my mother sang,
When joyously around her feet
Her little children clung.

The babe upon his pillow slept,
My mother sang the while;
What wonder if there softly crept
Across his lips a smile!

And I, a sick and pensive boy,— Oppressed with many pains,
Of felt my bosom thrill with joy
Beneath her soothing strains.

The stealing tear mine eye bedim,
My heart is running o'er,—
The music of my mother's hymns
Shall comfort me no more!

ANECDOTES.

The following occurred in the pit of a theatre in Boston during the performance of Macbeth: "Come, Tom," said the one to the other, "let's go, the witches don't come in again!" "No, no, let's stay," urged his companion, "there's some glorious fencing near the end of it."

"Father," said a lady to her indulgent spouse, as he resumed his pipe after supper one evening, "you must buy our dear Georgina an English Grammar and Spelling Book, she has gone through her French, Latin, and Greek, music, drawing and dancing, and now must commence her English studies."

It was one day told to the Duke of Roquelaure, that two ladies of the court had quarrelled, and very much abused each other. "Have they called one another ugly?" asked the duke. "No," was the reply. "Very well," answered he, "then I will undertake to reconcile them."

An old lady said her husband was very fond of peaches and that was his only fault. "Fault, madam, said one, 'how can you call that a fault?'" "Why, because there are different ways of eating them, sir. My husband takes them in the form of brandy!"

"I hope you will be able to support me," said a young lady while walking out one evening with her intended, during a somewhat slippery state of the sidewalks. "Why yes," said the somewhat hesitating swain, "with a little assistance from your father. There was some confusion, and a profound silence."

"Shon," said a Dutchman, "you may say vat you please 'bout bad neighbors; I has the worst neighbors as never was. Mine pigs and rhine heas come mit der ears split, and toddey day two of them come home missing!"

A preacher, who advised a drowsy hearer to take a pinch of snuff occasionally at service, to keep him awake, was advised in return, to put the snuff in his ear.

An observant editor down south, says, "The march of civilization is onward—onward—like the slow but intrepid tread of a donkey towards a peck of oats!"

"Guilty or not guilty?" asked the Dutch Justice. "Not guilty." "Den vat you do here?" Go about your pizness."

Mrs. E. Hayden,
GRATEFUL for the patronage she has received for more than twenty years, offers to her friends and the public an ENLARGED STOCK of the best

FAMILY MEDICINES,
Selected and Prepared with care.

—ALSO—
Various articles for the use of the sick, among which are, SPOUT DRINKING CUPS; Leech Glasses; Nursing Tubes, of Porcelain, Ivory and silver, with and without Crain's, Ingalls and Chapin's Supporters; Metal and Glass Syringes; Crain's, Ingalls and Chapin's Supporters; Horse Hair Mittens; English Patent Lint and Sigeon's Tow; Spread Plasters, on kid, cloth and paper; Jew David's Plaster, in Boxes; Blistering Paper and Tissue Dressing; European Leeches, &c. &c.

Removal.
THE subscriber takes this method to inform his customers and the public, that he has moved to the new building lately erected by Mr. Samuel Copeland, it being more commodious and better adapted to his business; and also, would tender his sincere thanks for the liberal share of patronage which he has received during the past year. His former customers and the public generally are invited to call, where will be found a variety of Stoves, among which is the embodying, in the highest degree of perfection, every essential quality requisite for any latitude. This Stove presents itself externally in a plain dress, with just and admirable proportions, giving it the appearance of a chaste and tastefully made piece of Cabinet Furniture. Intrinsically, the location and capacity of the Fire Chamber is such as to remove effectually the objections often made to Air-Tight Cook-Stoves for country use. The Oven proves itself to be precisely what its projectors intended it should be, viz: the largest and most perfect ever constructed in a family Stove. The Flues, upon which the great responsibility and reputation of a stove depends, differ from any ever before used, and are of such construction and capacity as to ensure the most perfect draught, without liability to fill up, and are easily kept clean. Nearly one hundred of this stove have been sold the past year and all have given the utmost satisfaction. Also—A variety of PARLOR, OFFICE and CYLINDER STOVES, together with a good assortment of TIN, BRITANIA, SHEET IRON and Japaned Ware.

CHARLES HOLMES.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR
Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,
it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS
is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.
Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air-Tight Cooking Stove.
Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.
A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory

of the Agent in this town.
E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIC, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

—ALSO—
SHEET IRON, TIN AND COPPER WORK done to order,
Of the best Materials, and in a workmanlike manner.

THE DEAD ALIVE.

The subjoined narrative, published in Chamber's Journal, is stated to be from a foreign newspaper. It is in the mind of the reader that the Island pertaining at this day to the English, is colonized by the French, and that consists in a great measure of that nation, to whom by a former treaty the two powers connected, laws and usages were preserved, territorial alteration.

About three or four months ago, Clodomir Francois, a rich merchant, was found dead, and freighted in his own habitation. His body, lying on the floor, with his head by a pistol, and all doubts as to the catastrophe were dispelled by the fatal weapon by the side of the deceased.

"I am ruined!" a villain has twenty thousand livres sterling. I be my portion, and I cannot survive my wife with the task of distributing the means which remain. I pray that God my friends and pardon my self destruction. Yes, I am ruined and I shall be in eternity."

Great was the consternation created event, which was the more the loss alluded to in the note he made public. The deceased had great esteem over the colony, and honor, and was universally lamented widow, after endeavoring to fulfil his last wishes, found her self to mingle longer with the resolution to consecrate her to the services of religion. Two the sad end of her husband, she went, leaving to a nephew of a physician, the charge of completion of the effects of Francois's

A minute examination of the deceased led to the discovery of which the unfortunate merchant had, and this period was found with the date of the disappearance named John Moon, long in the French. Of this man, on who unaccountably fell, nothing could be said; but, shortly after the death of the merchant, John Moon appeared. When taken up and examined cause of his flight, he stated the sent by his master to France, to obtain sum due to the merchant. His mission he had been unsuccessful, or avowed, that if Clodomir Francois correspondence, had through suspicions on him (Moon) but a pretext to account for the merchant himself was the author. This declaration, made seemed to fear no injury, and circumstances remained to appear as they had ever been, had the if it did not satisfy, the examination fell, in a great measure, recollection.

Things remained for a short period, when one morning, the principal creditor of the late Clodomir, a knocking at his gate, hour. He called up one of his went down and opened the door, and returned with the intelligence, who seemed desirous of being concealed, wished to speak with private. ## MISCELLANY.

THE DEAD ALIVE.

The subjoined narrative, published originally in Chamber's Journal, is stated to be translated from a foreign newspaper. It is necessary to remind the reader that the Island Maurities, ap-pearings at this day to the English, was originally colonized by the French, and that the population consists in a great measure of persons of that nation, to whom by a formal treaty between the two powers concerned, their ancient laws and usages were preserved without material alteration.

About three or four months ago, the Sieur Clodomir Frencois, a rich merchant of the Island, was found dead, and frightfully disfigured
in his own habitation. His body was discovered lying on the floor, with his face mutilated
by a pistol, and all doubts as to the cause of the catastrophe were dispelled by the discovery of the fatal weapon by the side of the corpse, as also of a paper in the hand writing of the deceased.

"I am ruined!—a villain has robbed me of twenty thousand livres sterling, dishonor must be my portion, and I cannot survive it. I leave my wife with the task of distributing among my creditors the means which remains to us, and I pray that God my friends and enemies may pardon my self destruction. Yet another minute and I shall be in eternity.

CLODOMIR FRENCOIS.

Great was the consternation caused by this tragic event, which was the more unexpected as the loss alluded to in the note had never been made public. The deceased had been held in great esteem over the colony, as a man of strict honor, and was universally lamented. His attached widow, after endeavoring faithfully to fulfill his last wishes, found her grief too powerful to mingle longer with the world, and took the resolution to consecrate her remaining days to the services of religion. Two months after the sad end of her husband, she entered a convent, leaving to a nephew of the merchant, a physician, the charge of completing the distribution of the effects of Frencois among his creditors.

A minute examination of the papers of the deceased led to the discovery of the period at which the unfortunate merchant had been robbed, and this period was found to correspond with the date of the disappearance of a man named John Moon, long in the employment of Frencois. Of this man, on whom suspicion had unnaturally fell, nothing could be learned on inquiry; but, shortly after the division of the merchant's property Moon appeared in the colony.
When taken up and examined respecting the cause of his flight, he stated that he had been sent by his master to France, to recover a certain sum due to the merchant there, in which mission he had been unsuccessful, and he further averred, that if Clodomir Frencois, in his existing correspondence, had thrown any injurious suspicions on him (Moon) the whole was but a pretext to account for deficiencies of which the merchant himself was the sole cause and author. This declaration, made by a man who seemed to feel no injury, and whose worldly circumstances remained to appearance the same as they had ever been, had the effect of silencing, if it did not satisfy, the examiners; and the al-fair soon fell, in a great measure, out of the public recollection.

Things remained for a short time in this condition, when one morning, Mr William Burnett
principal creditor of the late Clodomir Frencois, heard a knocking at his gate at a very early hour. He called up one of his servants, who went down and opened the door, and immediately returned with the intelligence that a stranger, who seemed desirous of keeping his person concealed, wished to speak with Mr. Burnett in private. Mr. Burnett arose, threw on his dressing gown and descended to the parlor. He saw there a stranger of tall person seated in an easy

and familiar attitude upon a sofa, with a number of the Morning Post in his hand. The back of his visitor was turned to Mr. Burnett as he entered. Rather surprised to see a stranger conduct himself so like an old friend of the house, Mr. Burnett said aloud, "Sir, may I beg to know your business with me?"

The stranger turned round and advanced to salute his host warmly and courteously. Mr.
Burnett started back, and uttered a loud exclamation of surprise and alarm. Well he might;
for before his eyes stood his friend and debtor, Clodomir Frencois, whom he had beheld nearly a year before, a mutilated corpse—whom himself had followed to the grave!

What passed at that interview, between Mr.
Burnett and his strange visitor, remained a secret. Mr. Burnett was observed to issue several times, pale and agitated, from his dwelling, and to visit the magistrates charged with the conduct of the criminal processes of the colony.
In the course of the day, while John Moon was regaling himself with tea under the palm trees
of his garden, with a Circassian female whom he had bought some time previously, he was arrested and taken to prison by the officers of justice. On the following day he was brought before the criminal court, accused of robbing the late Clodomir Frencois, the crime being conjoined with a breach of trust and violence.

Moon smiled at the charge, with all the confidence of a man who had nothing to fear. The judge having demanded of him if he confessed
the crime, the accused replied that the charge
was altogether absurd; that clear testimony
was necessary to fix such a charge upon him;
and that so far from there being any such evidence producible, neither the widow of the deceased, nor any one person in his service, have ever heard the pretended robbery even once mentioned by Frencois during his life.

"So you then affirm your innocence, repeated the judge, gravely, after hearing all that the other had to say.

"I will avouch my innocence, even before the body of my late master, if that be necessary."
(Such a thing often took place under the old Colonial law.)

"John Moon, said the judge, in a voice broken by some peculiar emotion, "it is before your late master that you will have to assert your innocence; and may the God of justice make the truth appear."

A signal from the judge accompanied the words, and immediately a door opened, and Clodomir Frencois, the supposed suicide, entered the court. He advanced to the bar with a slow and deliberate step, with his eyes calmly
but firmly fixed on the prisoner, his servant.
A great sensation was caused in the court by his appearance. Uttering shrieks of horror and alarm, the females fled from the spot. The accused fell on his knees in abject terror, and shuddering, confessed his guilt. For a time no voice was heard but his. However, as it became apparent that a living man stood before the court, the advocate for the prisoner gained courage to speak. He demanded that the identity of the merchant be established, and the existence be explained. He said that the court should not be biased by what might prove to be a mere accidental likeness between a person living and one deceased, and that such an avow-
al as that of the prisoner, extracted in a moment of extraordinary terror, was not to be held of much weight.

"Before being admitted here as an accuser or witness," continued the advocate, addressing the resuscitated merchant, "prove who and what you are, and disclose by what means the tomb,
which so lately received your body, mingled with bullets, has given up its tenant, and restored you to the world in life and health."

This first appeal of the advocate, who continued steadfast to his duty under circumstances
that would have closed the lips of most men, called forth the following narrative from Clodo-mir Frencois.

"My story may soon be told and will suffice to establish my identity. When I discovered the robbery committed by the accused, he had then fled from the Island, and I speedily ran all attempts to retake him would prove fruitless.
I saw ruin and disgrace before me, and came to the resolution of terminating my life before the evil day came. On the night in which this determination was formed I was seated alone in my private chamber. I had written the letter which was found on my table, and had loaded my pistol. This done I prayed for forgiveness from my Maker for the act that I was about to commit. The end of the pistol was at my head, and my finger on the trigger when a knock at the door of the house startled me. I concealed my weapon, and went to the door. A man entered, whom I recognized to be the sexton of the parish in which I lived. He bore a sack on his shoulder, and in it the body of a man newly buried, which was designed for my nephew, the physician, then living with me. The scarcity of bodies for dissection, as the court is aware, compels those who are anxious to acquire skill in the medical profession to procure them
by any possible secret means. The sexton was at first alarmed at having met me.
"Did my nephew request you to bring this body?"
No replied the man; but I knew his anxiety to obtain one for dissection, and took it upon me to offer this body. For mercy's sake," continued the sexton, "do not betray me sir, or I shall lose my station and my family bread."

While the man was speaking, a strange idea entered my mind, and brought to my despairing bosom hopes of continued life and honor. I stood for a few moments absorbed in thought and then recollecting myself, I gave two pieces of gold to the resurrectionist, the sum which he expected. Telling him to keep his own counsel, and that all would be well, I sent him away, and carried the body to my cabinet. The whole of the household had been sent out the way on purpose, and I had time to carry into execution the plan which had struck me. The body was fortunately of the same stature as myself, and like me in complexion. I knew the man; he had been a poor offender, abandoned by his family. "Poor relic of mortality!" said I, with tears in my eyes, "nothing which man may do can now injure thee; yet pardon me if I rudely disfigure thy lifeless substance. It is to prevent the ruin of not one but twenty families.

And should success attend my attempt, I swear that thy children shall be my children, and when my hour comes, we shall rest together in the tomb to which thou shalt be born before me."

At this portion of the merchant's narrative,
the most lively interest was excited in the court and testified even by tears from many of the audience. He then proceeded:

"I then stripped off my clothes, and dressed the body in them. This accomplished, I then took up my pistol, and with a hand more reluctant than when I applied it to my person, I fired it close to the head of the deceased, and at once caused such disfigurement as rendered it impossible for the keenest eye to detect the substitution which had been made.

"Choosing the plainest habit I could get, I then dressed myself anew, shaved off the whiskers I was accustomed to wear, and took other means to alter my appearance, in case of being subjected by any accident to the risk of betrayal. Next morning saw me on board a French vessel, on my way to a distant land—the native country of my ancestors. The expectation of this scheme was not disappointed. I knew John Moon was the man who had robbed me, and who now stands at the bar of this court, and that he had formed connections in this Island which would in all probability bring him back to it as soon as the intelligence of my death gave him
the promise of security. In this I have not been disappointed. I have been equally fortunate in other respects. While my unworthy servant remained here in imaginary safety, I have been successful in discovering the quarter
in which not daring at first to betray the appearance of wealth, he lodged the whole of the money. I have brought it with me, and also sufficient proofs, supposing his confessions of this day to be set aside altogether, to convict him
of the crime with which he stands charged.
By the same means," continued Clodomir Frencois with a degree of honorable pride in which all who heard him sympathized, "I will be enabled to restore my family to their place in society, and to redeem the credit of a name on which no blot was left by those who bore it before me, and which please God, I shall transmit unimpaired to my children and to my children's children."

John Moon, whose guilt was thus suddenly and strangely laid bare to the world, did not retract the confessions which he made in the extremity of his terror, and without separating,
the court sentenced him to confinement in the prison of the colony.

The news of Clodomir Frencois's reappearance spread rapidly, and the high esteem in which his character was held led to an universal rejoicing on the occasion. He was accompanied from the court to his house by a dense multitude, who welcomed him with prolonged shouts. It would be vain to attempt any description of the feelings of the wife, who had thus restored to her the beloved being for whose sake she had quitted the world. She was released from her ecclesiastical vows and rejoined her husband, no more to part till the grave really claimed one or the other of them as their due.

DRESS OF INFANTS.

Many mothers we fear, are influenced by unworthy motives—motives which an affectionate mother ought to be ashamed to avow—such as a desire to imitate other people, who dress their children so as to expose their beautiful breasts and round arms. Do these parents love that their children should have cancrs, eruptions, violent colics, &c., one would suppose they did.
Or are they prepared to answer this question—
whether to have their child un fashionably dressed is a greater misfortune, than to have it tossing about in all the agonies of disease, and threatened every hour with suffocation and not unfrequently finding repose only in the sleep of death. What we would ask has fashion to do with children or they with fashion? It is enough for mothers and adult daughters to be the victims of fashion by parading with bare shoulders
and tightly-corseted waists and paper soled shoes, without inflicting punishment on young beings who, insensible to the admiration of the idle and silly, find no compensation
for their sufferings in gratified vanity.

Another flagrant contradiction in the style of dress of infants, is in their being made to wear caps; as if covering a head which has a natural protection in the hair and which in all after life is so much exposed were to compensate for leaving the breast bare, which is so sensitive to cold, which has no other means of protection against vicissitudes of temperature than by clothing, and which in after-life, moreover,
is, at least in the male sex, habitually covered with more than one garment. In brief it would seem that the head is partly covered with a cap in order that this part may after a time be able to do without it; and that the breast and arms
are left naked and exposed to cold and moisture
in order that they may be prepared for comfortable and constant clothing.

THE FAITHFUL NURSE.

"A few years after Boston and its neighborhood were settled by the English, a party of Narragansett Indians, who were out hunting, stopped at the house of Mr. Minot, in Dorchester, and rudely demanded food. On being refused, they went away with evident marks of displeasure, and Oquamebad, their chief, threatened to be revenged. For this purpose he left in the bushes, near the house, an Indian named Osamee, who had long been known in the neighborhood for his uncommon ferocity.

The next morning Mr. and Mrs. Minot went to Boston, a distance of only three miles; the Indian saw them from his hiding-place, and prepared himself for an assault upon the house,
which he supposed was left without any defence.
However, although Mr. Minot had no apprehension of an attack of this kind he had taken the precaution to give strict charge to the maid-servant to confine herself, with his two little children, to the house, and to open the door to no person until his return.

The girl was trusty and watchful, and she soon espied the Indian drawing cautiously towards the house. After looking about apparently to make sure that there was nobody near,
he rushed furiously against the door, but it was so securely bolted, that it withstood his force,
and he next attempted to get in through the window. The young woman had hidden her master's children under two brass kettles, charging them not to stir, nor make the least noise;
she then loaded a musket belonging to the house, and bravely stood upon her defence.

The Indian, probably guessing her design, fired at her, but missed his mark. The girl
then fired and the bullet entered his shoulder.
Still he persisted in his attempt, and succeeded in getting half through the window, when, with great presence of mind, she seized a pan full of red hot cinders from the stove, and threw them in his face. They lodged in his blanket, and the pain they created was too much even for Osamee. He fled, and his dead body was found next day in a wood on the borders of the town.

The circumstance being made known to the governor of Massachusetts Bay, this courageous young woman was, by their order, presented with a silver bracelet, on which her name was engraved, with this motto, "She slew the Narragansett hunter."

CODEFISH! ARISTOCRACY.

We are very aristocratic here in our goodly city of Cincinnati. Exclusiveness is fashionable—coeries are formed, who fancy they comprise all the taste, fashion and talent existing. If a daring intruder presumes to enter the charmed circle, he meets a rebuff which tells him that he is looked on as an inferior, no matter what his personal worth and merits may be.
It serves the fool right. What business has he or any one, to suppose that sterling character
and cultivated intellect could constitute a claim to be received into fashionable—laugh! The children of cobblers and tinkers putting on airs aping the manners of foreign aristocrats, and claiming to give tone of character to society!
Fashionable quotha! Why they smell of leather and solder!

A gentleman passenger on a steamboat from New Orleans to Cincinnati on the trip up, was introduced to a young lady on board by a gentleman relation of hers. The young lady was charmingly lovely, and amiable in manners; the gent was witty; sentimental and amusing, his manners noble, his figure manly—such an one
as would catch a lady's eye.

Thrown together in each other's society and mutually attached, it is not to be wondered at that they grew quite familiar. They had inter-ales on the guards, promenaded the decks arm
in arm, the gentleman whispering soft non-sense in the lady's ear. The passengers pronounced it a case of love at first sight, the ladies were more respectful to one whom they thought so soon to be matron, and chambermaids (as cham-bermaids always do) waiting on no one else but the bride. Miserable prophets—it was not fated to be a match.

The boat at length arrived at her place of destination, the association of the two loving ones
was at an end, and they were obliged to separate. Whispered adieus, with a soft entreaty from him, was answered by her thrusting a card
into his hand, and thus they parted, she to her father's marble halls, and he to the East, whither business imperatively called him. The hope of seeing her on his return filled his heart with joy.

She made an astonishing discovery shortly after her return home. A friend of her's who supported mustachios and a goatee, quizzed her most unmercifully for losing her heart to a mechanic who was going to Washington to get a patent for a new plough. This was very provoking to her. She protested that she thought he was a gentleman, or she never would have accepted his attentions.

Six weeks flew by and the young mechanic was on his return home. His heart bounded with joy as he approached Cincinnati. Visions of grace, beauty and loveliness floated through his brain. Oh, what pleasure to meet La Belle of the Queen City. Her charms had made a deep impression on his susceptible heart. His foot touched the wharf, and away he flew to the mansion of his beloved. He was ushered in, and his name announced. The young lady floated into the room. O, how lovely!
But what is the matter? She does not know him, bestows no glance of recognition upon the face lit up with pleasure on seeing her again.

"You do not recollect me," said he timidly,
and mortified to think the impression—if one
he had made—was so evanescent.
"I do not sir," replied she in a cold tone and with an air of hauteur such as a tragedy queen affects.

He reminded her of their previous acquaintance on board the steamer.

"O, yes, yes—a steamboat acquaintance!
Good morning sir," and with this answer she left the room.

Her old papa had heard the name of his visitor when announced, but thought his presence would be mal appropos at their first meeting, so
the good-natured old gent remained in his room.
He knew the real position and standing of his visitor, and hugged himself at the prospect of marrying the Hon. Mr. —, M. C. rich and distinguished. Mustachios had humbugged Julia. She, because he was a mechanic, had given him an unpardonable insult.

The reader may fancy Julia's mortification and her father's rage when they had a mutual explanation. Go it, codfishes.—Cincinnati Nonpareil.

VIOLINS AND FIDDLES.

Near Pittsfield there lives an aged Dutchman, named Jacob Heinman, who has by his industry accumulated a large property. The old man is at all times, ready to yield up his substance liberally for the support of schools.
He regards it his duty to do this, feeling the want of early education in his own case.

A gentleman called upon Jacob not long ago,
to ask his aid in establishing an academy in an adjoining country, and in the course of his appeal to the old man's philanthropy, he casually observed that there were many words in the English language which signify the same thing,
and that it was necessary for boys to learn
them from books.

"Schopt—schopt—I know dat," said Jacob.

"Now I tell you how I knows dat. Som decent years ago, I goes down to Filadelfy mit
my ragon, to kilt some koots for de Pittsburk merchants. Vell, I kiltis him, and up in de top of de mountain, my ragon he dicks fast in de mud. Den I dakes off all my koots, and luts him by the side of de road. Vell, mishter school master, I feels one tight parrell, and I say to minself, 'Dure, tem pays in Measles-ter's store in Filadelfy, play on me anoder tick-
—day send me one empty parrell, py me clear to Pittsburk. Vell, I dakes de parrell, and I buis him on het up, and see him marked 'Violins.' Den I say it was one drick because I knows dat was no such man in ull Pittsburk,
as Mishter Violins; and I kiltis so mad mit myself for kein made such a fool of, dat I shoost take mine axe and I prake de empty parrell all into little smashes. Now, Mishter Schoolmaster, vat you dink vas in dat parrell mark to Mr.

THE BARKEY'S RIDE.

Cesar, had been a faithful servant at one of our country inns for many years. His master was kind to him, fed and clothed him well, and told him he should always be well cared for in his old age. Cesar took it in his head one day, that he should like to go on a ride, put up at an inn, be waited on as he had done to others, and put things through in style.

"Well, Cesar, you shall have my best horse and chaise, and take Phillis with you; and here is a five dollar note for you to expend. So you may go and blow it straight," said his good master.

Cesar and his lady were soon "done up" in their best "fixins." They jumped in, and drove off in high glee. They pulled up at an inn, at the next village; Cesar gave his horse in the charge of the ostler, with directions to give him
a peck of oats and rub him down well—he then waited upon Miss Phillis into the house, called for a room, a pack of cards, a bottle of brandy,
and a good dinner.

As soon as the dinner was over, the brandy used up, and they tired of playing "high-low-jack," Cesar called for his team and bill. The horse harnessed, and the "Items" placed in Cesar's hand; he could not read, but when the landlord told him the amount was ten dollars
and half, the eyes of our ebony hero

"In their relaxing circles rolled in white!"

in utter astonishment.
"Is dat all?" he exclaimed. "Wall, if dat
ere be the case just you take out de hoss rub
down, gib him anoder beck and send up anoder dinner, bottle ob brandy and cards, for I've on a blow out, you see and massa gib me de V
to do it up brown."

The Happy Girl. A happy girl is to be known by her fresh looks and buoyant spirits.
Day in and day out she has something to do,
and she takes hold of work as if she did not fear to soil her hands or dirty her apron. Such girls we love and respect, wherever we find them—in a palace or a hotel. Always pleasant and always kind, they never turn up their noses before your face, or slander you behind your back. They have more sense and better employment. What are firts and bustle-bound girls in comparison with these? Good for nothing but to look at; and that is rather distasteful. Give us the industrious and happy girl, and we care not who worships fashionable and idle simpletons.

"FASHIONABLE" MUSIC. What's that? It's music. Well, that's a scientific too, it's scientific, they say it's done by rule. Just took at that gal at the piano: first comes a little German thunder:—Oh! good air and seas, what a crash! it seems as if she'd bang that instrument all to pieces. I guess she's vex'd at somebody, and is a peggin' into the piano out of spite. Now comes singin'; see what faces she makes; how she stretches her mouth open, like a barn door, and turns up the white of her eyes like a duck in thunder. She's in a musical ecstasy, is that gal; she feels good all over; her soul is goin' out with that music. Oh, it's divine, and she's an angel, ain't she? Yes, I guess she is, and when I'm an angel, I'll fall in love with her; but when I'm a man, at least what's left of me, I'd just as soon fall in love with one that's a leetle, just a leetle more of a woman, and a leetle, just a leetle less of an angel. But holla! what about the sun is the about? Why, her voice is goin' down her own throat, to gain strength, and here it comes out as deep-toned as a man's, while that dandy feller along-side of her, is singin' what they call falsetto. They're actually changed voices! The gal sings like a man, and that screamer like a woman. This is science: this is taste; this is fashion; but hang me if it's natur.—Sam Slick.

POOR OLD BACHELORS. Bachelors are a class of men entitled to much sympathy altho' they don't always get it. A portion of their miseries in winter has been thus graphically described by a member of the rusty fraternity: "For a man of phlegmatic temperament—a bachelor—it requires a mighty effort to go to bed of a cold and freeze night—a mightier to turn over when he gets there—but mightiest of all to get up again. Before he goes, he warms and turns and warms—pokes his toes to the fire, and then his heels—rubs his hands—bakes his shins, and then sneaks off to bed. Then if a shank happen to stray over the linen six inches from the warm place where it was originally planted, he snatches it back as though it was snake-bitten. But when day comes—when the breakfast dishes begin to rattle on the table—here we must be excused, for 'tis no joke."

ONE THING AT A TIME. Step among your neighbors, reader, and see whether those who have got along smoothly, and accumulated property, and gained a good name, have not been men who bent themselves to one single branch of business;—who brought all their powers to bear upon one point, and built on one foundation. It must be so.

Go out in spring, when the sun is yet far distant, and you can scarcely feel the influence of his beams, scattered as they are over the wide face of creation; but collect those beams to a focus, and they kindle up a flame in an instant. So the man that squanders his talents and his strength on many things, will fail to make an impression with either; but let him draw them to a point—let him strike at a single object, and it will yield before him.

ABOUT RIGHT. Some years ago, when a man's respectability depended much upon his taking a newspaper, a certain shrewd old fellow was one morning enjoying the luxury of his paper, (although he labored under the great disadvantage of not knowing a single letter of the alphabet,) when a more knowing neighbor of his happened in—perhaps to borrow his paper—observed to him that he had his paper wrong end up. The old gentleman, drawing himself up in all the pomposity of affronted dignity, exclaimed—"I would have you know, sir, that if I take a paper and pay for it, I have a right to read it which end up I please."

A CURIOUS FACT. In leaden coffins it is customary to make a number of holes, underneath the coffin-plate, to give egress to the gasses, which would else, by their accumulation, first bulge and then burst the coffin. When this precaution is neglected, considerable danger ensues to the grave-diggers, who have on many occasions been seized with asphyxia, or even killed on the spot, by the poisonous gasses emitted from a suddenly burst coffin. To escape these hazards, they not unfrequently 'tap' the coffins, and let out a jet of gas which, being ignited, burns from ten minutes to half an hour.

SET THE TIME AND KEEP IT. Keep it punctually—don't vary a hair's breadth. When you say Monday, mean Monday. When you say Tuesday or Wednesday, mean Tuesday or Wednesday. When you say six o'clock, mean six o'clock. When you say twelve, mean twelve, not twelve and a half, but twelve. Time is precious, infinitely; gold cannot purchase it. Better rob your neighbor of gold, or precious gems, than to rob him of a moment. Set the time and keep it!

A STEAM MAN. A mechanic in Russia is said to have succeeded in making a steam man. It is probably one of the most interesting inventions ever offered to the public. It is a colossal statue, the feet of which are placed upon wheels upon a railroad, and he goes thundering over the course; the steam comes puffing out of his nostrils in a manner to give the appearance of Satan as pictured in Revelation.

FREE SUFFRAGE. At the recent election in Wisconsin, the question of free suffrage was voted upon, and decided in the affirmative; the vote showing 4000 for, 3603 against it. This establishes the right of every male citizen, of whatever color, over the age of twenty-one years, to vote at all elections in the State.

RATES OF POSTAGE. Letters, not exceeding half an ounce, not over three hundred miles, five cents; over three hundred miles, ten cents. Over half an ounce and not exceeding an ounce, double those rates. Any fractional excess over an ounce is always counted as an additional ounce. Ship Letters delivered where received, five cents; if conveyed by mail, two cents added to the usual postage. On letters deposited in a post-office for ship, one cent. Hand-bills, Circulars and Advertisements not exceeding one sheet, (unsealed,) any distance, three cents, pre-paid. Newspapers sent from the office of publication, not exceeding 1900 square inches, under 100 miles, or within the State, one cent; over 100 miles, out of the State, one and a half cents. Over 1900 square inches, the same as pamphlet postage. Transient newspapers, the same rates pre-paid. Pamphlets of all descriptions, not exceeding one ounce, two cents and a half per copy; for each additional ounce, one cent. A fractional excess less than a half ounce, is not counted; if a half ounce or more, it is counted an ounce. Drop letters, two cents. Letters advertised are charged the cost of advertising, not to exceed four cents.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, FEB. 9, 1850.

John A. Greer, Editor.

THE LYCEUM.

The fourteenth lecture was given before this institution by Rev. Theodore Parker, of Boston. His subject was 'Progress.' It was a most masterly oration and displayed the superior intellect of the speaker in a manner at once natural and irresistible. It was an effort worthy of a truly great and extraordinary thinker. It breathed a pure and liberal spirit of Philosophy, echoed with the sublime teachings of History, and blazed with the impassioned fire of eloquence and the pyrotechnic beauties of Poetry.

Commencing with man at the creation, the lecturer traced him to his present state of unsurpassed attainment and power. From the naked and destitute savage, whose only inheritance was wrapped up in his body, and circumscribed by his skin, he traced man to his present wonderful state of embellishment, civilization and power. He explained the origin of human thought and human labor,—the wonders of invention in the arts and sciences of life,—the introduction, establishment and operation of human slavery, and the growth of nations and of civilization upon the earth. The career of man has been ever progressive. The discovery that dry wood would burn, and a hollow log rot, were great achievements for the age that projected them as the application of steam by Fulton, and the invention of the lightning-rod by Franklin, for the age in which they lived. The great inventions of art and discoveries in science mark the progress of 'the ages' in civilization and power. The discovery of Printing evidenced the progress of a preceding age no less than the invention of the Electric Telegraph signified our 'age of improvement.' Progress is written upon every page of the world's history. One nation takes up the line of civilization and carries it to a certain point of elevation, and there leaves it for some other nation more young and vigorous, and aspiring perhaps, to raise it yet further towards its destined height. Such has been the progress of the world. Greece and Rome carried civilization to a lofty summit, before the dark ages, but England and America have since carried it to a yet greater elevation.

Tracing history backwards, we see this position confirmed. From Queen Victoria to Elizabeth, from Elizabeth to Henry VIII, from this whimsical king to the Norman William, and thence to the original Saxons, we discover the web of civilization and refinement growing coarser and coarser till lost in complete savagism.

Looking from a proper point, to the civilization of man, we shall observe its true march. Thus for a period of a thousand years it apparently made no progress, but seemed buried in forgetfulness. But such was not the fact. Like the Palm tree, which at certain seasons makes no progress upward, but strikes its mighty roots deeper and broader into the earth, till its energies are replenished and then at one giant leap springs Heavenward, so civilization in the dark ages of the world making no apparent ascent was planting itself deeper and stronger in the soil of Time, again to rise ascendant in the Heavens.

The lecturer next proceeded to consider some of the obstacles to human progress. At this point, Mr. Parker's remarks assumed a variety and power peculiar to his own original and independent intellect.

The party spirit of the age was treated in a manner at once ludicrous and severe. The political contests of the nation were portrayed with singular effect.

The unproductive labor of the country in the cultivation and use of tobacco and rum, was considered a great hindrance to the progress of our civilization. Much statistical information and financiering ability was displayed upon this point and the position was incontrovertibly established. But of all the obstacles to our progress the institution of slavery was considered the most dreadful and enormous.

The genius of this institution was most admirably displayed and most thoroughly repudiated. Its effects upon the nation were pictured with a master hand. The comparison between the free and slave States was beautiful and true, and the causes of New England's superiority over the States where slavery exists, were given with a candor and a truthfulness, too serious for distrust. What are the resources of Massachusetts? What are her natural products? Rocks, lumber and ice. These are her only original capital, and from these have her industrious and hardy sons and daughters gathered their rich harvest of gold and greatness. How sterile her soil, how meagre her inheritance compared with her sister States of the more genial and 'sunny South' or the luxuriant and fertile West? Still she outstrips them all in the comparative energy of her pursuits, in her inventions and in her national support. From the Revolution to the present day, Massachusetts has been foremost in the march of Freedom and Civilization. Compared with South Carolina in the struggle for Independence she stands preeminent. In the beautiful language of Webster, in his memorable eulogy upon South Carolina and Massachusetts, "Shoulder to shoulder they went through the Revolution, hand in hand they stood around the administration of Washington and felt his own great arm lean on them both for support." How glorious and just tribute! South Carolina furnished six thousand men for the struggle, and Massachusetts eighty three thousand. Thus they went "shoulder to shoulder" through the Revolution and thus did the great arm of Washington "lean on them both for support."

Thus we see the difference between the slaveholding and the non-slaveholding States of our confederacy. Whence come the inventions which multiply to bless and ennoble our nation? From the slave States? No. From the free States almost entirely. Whence come the intelligence of the nation, the Historians,— Bancroft, Sparks and Prescott? All north of Mason & Dixon's line. Whence are born and bred the Poets of the land,—the Whittiers, the Bryants, the Denys, the Longfellow and the Osmonds? All north of Mason & Dixon's line. Whence come the Jurists of America,—Webster, Story and Shaw? All from the same quarter. Why is it so? Slavery is a choke-damp to every thing great and good. No moral harvest can possibly flourish under it. The spirit of freedom can alone nourish and protect the education, invention and intelligence of the nation.

We regret we have not the ability to do justice to Mr. Parker's remarks upon slavery. We feel that we have but faintly hinted at some of the most prominent ideas of the lecture upon this important theme. In conclusion, we cannot refrain from endeavoring to present a few of the excellent and philosophical suggestions of Mr. P. in relation to Education.

The most effectual bulwark of America is her Schools. The cheap spelling book, or the vane on her school-house is a better symbol of the nation than the "Star Spangled Banner"; the Printing Press does more than the cannon,—the Press mightier than the sword. None of the States of this Union have ever given this matter the attention it demands. When we legislate about public Education, this is the question we ought to discuss—Shall we give our paternity the richest blessing which a people can inherit? Shall we give them power to create wealth in every form, to multiply ships and roads of earth or of iron; to subdue the forest, till the land, chain the rivers, hold the winds as its vassals, bind with an iron yoke the fire and water, and catch and tame the lightning of God? Shall we bequeath them the power to make them sober, temperate, healthy and wise; which shall keep them at peace abroad and at home, organize them so wisely that all shall be united and yet each left free, with no tyranny of the few over the many or the little over the great? Shall we enable them to improve, to multiply and to preserve the political, social and personal blessings they now possess? Shall we give them power to create and perpetuate all forms of human welfare or shall we make no provision for them? Such is the question for our legislators to answer.

There are some men even of humble birth, whom Nature has endowed with such gigantic mental and physical organism that they will acquire an education,—nay, a mastery culture even; men whom no poverty can degrade or make dull, whom no lack of means of education can keep from being wise and great; men "before the splendor of whose genius others must bow with respectful deference." Such men are even now among us. We must not legislate for them. God will legislate for such god-like spirits.

If there had never been a free public school in New England, we need not stay to tell what would now be the condition of agriculture, manufactures and commerce in Massachusetts. They would have been perhaps even behind South Carolina. Where would be the free churches and the republican institutions of Massachusetts which now unke her rugged shores echo with thanksgiving and praise, and her sterile soil smile with luxuriance and plenty?

Such was the character of Mr. Parker's eloquent remarks upon this most important theme. We wish every body could have heard them for they were given in

"Thoughts that breathe and words that burn."

Without intending the least disparagement to the many useful and beautiful lectures which have been pronounced before the Lyceum during the season, we must be permitted to call this address of Mr. Parker's the lecture of the course. In our opinion it was "head and shoulders" above the rest. It was a remarkable production of a truly remarkable man. Its Alpha was truth, and its Omega power. We would here suggest to the President and Directors of this valuable institution, the propriety of procuring the services of this distinguished writer and divine as valedictorian for the present course of lectures, which course has been conducted with so much energy and discrimination during the season. We hope the suggestion may merit the approbation of the Lyceum.

AWFUL CALAMITY. On Monday morning, a terrible explosion which convulsed the whole neighborhood, occurred in New York city. The boiler of a steam engine of forty horse power in the machine shop of A. B. Taylor & Co. manufactures of steam presses and engines. Exploded, flying into fragments, throwing the foundations apart and bringing the whole edifice upon the heads of those employed within. The immense works of Messrs Taylor requiring large fires, the mass of ruins became immediately ignited and the flames spread at once to the buildings next door. In the establishment were employed more than an hundred persons, the greater number of whom were probably collected in the several shops and work-rooms. The fall of the building was so instantaneous that none, or at least very few of them, were able to extricate themselves, but the whole were buried in the mass of timber machinery, etc. By their own and the exertions of the by-standers, however, many were extracted, without exception more or less injured.

At the last accounts, forty five bodies had been taken out and forty-five are still missing.

STATE LUNATIC HOSPITAL REPORT. The seventeenth annual report of the State Lunatic Hospital at Worcester, just published, contains some facts and suggestions well worthy the attention of the community. In the past year, 632 persons have been patients in this Hospital. The average number for the year has been 420—larger by 45 than a proper compliment. The financial condition of the Institution is prosperous, the report of the Treasurer showing a balance on hand of $4722 98.

THE GUIDE. The Pathfinder Railway Guide, for February has been issued, duly corrected. It presents, in a compact form, time-tables of the several New England Railroads, with the distances, fares, and such other information as is necessary to make it a complete Traveller's Guide for the New England States. It contains a map worth double the price demanded for the book, and being published by authority of the railroad superintendents, who furnish the means of keeping it correct, its accuracy cannot be disputed. Price, 5 cents for a single copy, or 50 cents a year; a handsome discount to the trade.

ANTI SLAVERY. We see by a notice in the Liberator that Miss Lucy Stone, an agent of the Massachusetts Anti Slavery Society, will lecture at Milton Railway Village on Wednesday next, Feb. 13th, in this town on the 16th and in South Braintree on the 15th. Parker Pillsbury will lecture at South Weymouth on Tuesday Feb. 19th, and at Weymouth Landing on the 21st inst.

A quarterly meeting of the Norfolk County Anti Slavery Society will be held at Neponset, in Union Hall, on Thursday, Feb. 28th.

THE TOWN SCHOOLS. The attention of the public, especially of parents, is called to the notice of General School Committee of this town. Parents should all attend these examinations, and not from hearsay, see whether the Committee have done their duty, or the Teachers faithfully their very high trust, but whether they have been guilty of the greatest neglect to their children. Go parents, and see for yourselves.

COURSE OF LECTURES. On reference to our advertising columns, it will be observed that a course of interesting lectures are to be delivered in Franklin Hall, in this town, the first of the series commencing on Friday evening ensuing. The abilities of the lecturer,—which our citizens admired before the Lyceum,—the praiseworthy object, in view, and the laborious lesson of instructive intelligence all can expect, we have no doubt well crowd the hall with an attentive auditory. One of these lectures will be delivered by O. A. Brownson of Boston,—a name that needs not a word from us to gather a multitude of hearers. These methods of advancing morality should be encouraged—no line of difference should be drawn.

THE SOCIAL ASSEMBLES. These meetings, "To trip on the light fantastic toe," which have been held for the few weeks past, at the Hancock House in this town, have been very numerous attended—the most excellent of music furnished, and through the judgment of the Managers the best of order preserved. Next Friday evening the last one will probably take place, and from the present board of managers all agree even more may be expected, without disparagement to their predecessors. Bartlett's Band, we hear, is engaged, and such music will "take the entranced soul and wrap it in Elysium."

FIRE AT NORTH BRIDGEWATER. On Wednesday morning, a large two story wooden building in North Bridgewater, owned by Mr. Ruel Richmond, was entirely destroyed by fire, together with all the contents, which consisted of a large stock of material belonging to Mr. Richmond, wheelwright, and the stock of Mr. Sargent, carriage painter. It was insured for $1200 dollars by the Weymouth insurance Company.

FROM CALIFORNIA. The Empire City arrived at New York on Wednesday night, with 2,100,000 dollars in specie, and 272 passengers. The following is a summary of the news:—Great Fire at San Francisco, and a destruction of a million and a half dollar's worth of property.—Col. Fremont and Wm. Gwin elected U. S. Senators, and on their way to Washington.—Collision at Acapulco between Americans and Mexicans.—Fight between Chilians and Americans at the Mines.

ROBERT IN BRAINTREE. The dwelling house of Mr. Levi C. White, at Braintree, was visited on Sunday by robbers, who, during the absence of the family, at church, stole $95 from a table drawer.

THE NAPOLEON MONTH. The month of December embraces many of the most important of the anniversaries connected with the history of the Emperor Napoleon and his family, and is therefore called by the French the Napoleon month. On the 1st of December, 1807, Jerome Bonaparte was made king of Westphalia; Dec. 2, 1804, Napoleon was crowned; Dec. 2, 1805, the battle of Austerlitz occurred; Dec. 4, 1808, Napoleon entered Madrid; Dec. 10, 1848, Louis Napoleon elected President of France; Dec. 13, 1799, Napoleon was named First Consul; Dec. 15, 1840, the remains of Napoleon arrived in France; Dec. 16, 1809, Napoleon was divorced from Josephine; Dec. 17, 1847, Maria Louisa, widow of Napoleon, died; Dec. 18, 1812, Napoleon returned to Paris from Moscow; Dec. 20, 1806, Napoleon fought the Russians at Gernovo.

CALIFORNIA. Mr. Ichabod Lindsay, of Charlestown, recently delivered a lecture in that city, upon what he learned and saw in California, having spent the past year in that country. Mr. L. condemns the gold business, the beauties of the climate, the country, etc, etc, as essentially a humbug, originated by Col. Fremont and the army and navy officers, who first went there and bought up all the old missions and best tracts of land for speculation.

NEW YORK STATE PRISONS. In the three prisons in New York—at Sing Sing, Auburn and Clinton—there were last year 1484 prisoners,—174 more than the previous year. The expenses of the three prisons were $188,996; income, $158,000. In Auburn prison, about half the prisoners are foreigners, 555 were temperate, 330 moderate drinkers, 775 tobacco chewers! and 264 had been gamblers.

OAK HALL, Boston, stands unrivalled as a depot for clothing. Its garments are made from the best of materials in a style to suit the most fastidious, at prices which render it an inducement for strangers to visit the establishment.

MAGAZINES. Fowler's Phenological Journal, and the Water Cure Journal, for February, have been received,—very excellent numbers. The first contains a very fine portrait of John Adams, second President of the United States, with a biographical sketch.

ONLY ONE WEEK. Mr. Brown, who takes such beautiful Daguerreotype Miniatures, at Franklin Hall, requests us to say that his stay in town is limited to one week longer. Improve the opportunity.

FIRE IN WEYMOUTH. On Thursday morning last, fire was discovered in the tin ware shop of G. A. Freiermuth, Weymouth Landing—which was destroyed with its contents. Insurance on the building $350—on the stock, $300—both at an office in Roxbury.

The flames communicated to the adjoining premises of John Rolie, tailor, whose stock and furniture were principally destroyed. Insured at Dedham for $750.

During the conflagration there was great apprehension that buildings in the range of the wind might take fire, but to the efficiency of the citizens, and especially to the Amazon Engine Company under their most excellent and energetic Foreman, Gilman Thompson, was most of the danger prevented.

The cause of the fire we have not been able to learn.

OUR DEES. Much has been said in reference to those who owe for sometime; if they find their accounts in the process of legal collection no fault must be attached to us.

CONGRESS. No definite action has been had in Congress on any of the important matters before it. Mr Webster's resolution in favor of giving lands to actual settlers, called forth some debate. Mr. Clay commenced on Tuesday a speech on his compromise resolutions. "He said if Congress attempted to interfere in behalf of the abolition of slavery within the States, his vote would then be for war and the South would be called upon for resistance. Mr. Clay said the subject of slavery within the States was not debatable."

The most important matter before the House, with the exception of the slavery question, is Mr. Merditt's request for more money to meet the expenses of collecting the revenue. No definite action has been had thereon. A vote was taken on Monday, on Mr. Root's resolution to instruct the Committee on Territories to bring in bills prohibiting slavery. The motion was to lay it on the table, which was carried.

THE AGE OF IMPROVEMENT.

One of the most important discoveries ameliorating the condition of this large humanity, Consumption, is Dr. of Wild Cherry. What time establish craters, what experience adopts and craters in all places unite in saying is so, no doubt. A popularity of the city its roots so deep and strong, it destroy it. The success which has attended for several years past, has overcome all respectability and sensibility. It has taken a stand among the fires and blessings of the age; and this season, eradicates the diseases for which it is famed.

Dr. A. H. Macmillan, of Taunton, writes us under date of February 14, used Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry the last eighteen months, and preparation of the kind he ever saw, as deserving the public patronage.

None genuine, unless signed E. B. B. Agents—Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy, Mass., Braintree.

MORE CURES.

Effected by Dr. Corbett's Shaker Syrup. The following is from Jacob V. P. Corbett, N. H., extensively known as a coal Contractor and Builder, from England State.

BOSTON.

Messrs. E. Brinley & Co. Gentlemen:—Happy am I to be able to state the effects of Corbett's Shaker Syrup upon my daughter, who was, for some time, about three years by consumption, skin covered the whole body for months, discharging the most offensive matter for months to oblige us to wear mittens while in bed, and to dress by closing the openings at the feet, to prevent her from tearing her hair with these precautions, she would end, and then scratch and lacerate until the blood would flow.

She is now nearly restored to health, no other medicine for the last two years but a Sarsaparilla. The effect of this medicine is most singular, seeming to cleanse the system and eradicate all disease. Little girl is now fair as that of infants, rapidly changing from impure complexion, and this I know to be the effect of Corbett's Sarsaparilla only.

THE AGE OF IMPROVEMENT.

One of the most important discoveries of the age, in ameliorating the condition of the large class of suffering humanity, Consumption, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. What time establishes and consecrates, what experience adopts and confirms, what all men in all places unite in saying is good and valuable, is so, no doubt. The success which has attended this medicine for several years past, has overcome the prejudices of all respectable and sensible men, and the article has taken a stand among the first-class discoveries and blessings of the age; and when resorted to in season, eradicates the diseases for which it is recommended.

Dr. A. H. Mearns, of Taunton, North Carolina, writes us under date of February 14, 1847, that he has used Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, in his practice the last eighteen months, and considers it the best preparation of the kind he ever saw, and knows of none so deserving the public patronage.

MORE CURES

Effected by Dr. Corbett's Sarsaparilla of Sarsaparilla. The following is from Jacob P. Eastman, of Concord, N. H., extensively known as an efficient Railroad Contractor and Builder, throughout the New England States. Boston, March 8, 1849.

Messrs. E. Brinley & Co. Gentlemen—Happy am I to inform you of the wonderful effects of Corbett's Sarsaparilla upon a little daughter of mine, who was poisoned, when at the age of about three years by vaccination. Eruptions of the skin covered the whole body for more than twelve months, discharging the most offensive matter. We were compelled for months to oblige our little sufferer to wear mittens while in bed, and to adjust her night-dress by closing the openings at the hands and feet so as to prevent her from tearing her flesh. But even with these precautions, she would, at times, release her hands by gnawing her mittens about the finger ends, and then scratch and lacerate herself severely until the blood would flow.

She is now nearly restored to health, having used no other medicine for the last two years than Corbett's Sarsaparilla. The effect of this powerful alternative is most singular, seeming to cleanse the whole system and eradicate all disease. The skin of our little girl is now fair as that of infancy, and her system rapidly changing from impurity and disease to perfect health, and this I know to be the result of the use of Corbett's Sarsaparilla only.

POETRY.

MECHANICS' SONG.

The following song was first published some forty years ago.

Ye merry Mechanics, come join in my song,
And let the brisk chorus go bounding along;
Though some may be poor, and some rich there may be,
Yet all are contented and happy and free.

Ye Tailors! of ancient and noble renown,
Who clothe all the people in country and town,
Remember that Adam, your father and head,
Though lord of the world, was a tailor by trade.

Ye Masons! who work in stone, mortar and brick,
And lay the foundation deep, solid and thick,
Though hard be your labor, yet lasting your fame,
Both Egypt and China your wonders proclaim.

Ye Smiths! who forge tools for all trades here below,
You have nothing to fear while you smite and you blow,
All things you may conquer so happy your lot,
If you are careful to strike while your iron is hot.

Ye Shoe-makers! nobly from ages long past,
Have defended your rights with your awl to the last;
And Cobblers, all merry, not only stop holes,
But work night and day, for the good of our souls.

Ye Cabinet makers! brave workers in wood,
As you work for the ladies, your work must be good,
And Joiners and Carpenters, far off and near,
Stick close to your trades, and you've nothing to fear.

Ye Hatters, who oft with hands not very fair,
Fix hats on a block, for a blockhead to wear;
Though charity covers a sin now and then,
You cover the heads and the sins of all men.

Ye Coach makers, must not by tax be controlled,
But ship off your coaches, and bring us home gold;
The roll of your coach made Copernicus reel,
And fancy the world to turn round like a wheel.

Ye Carders, and Spinners, and Weavers, attend,
And take the advice of poor Richard, your friend;
Stick close to your home, your wheels and your card,
And you never need fear of the times being hard.

Ye Printers! who give us our learning and news,
And impartially print for Turks, Christians and Jews;
Let your favorite tint ever sound in the streets,
The freedom of press and a volume in sheets.

Ye Coopers! who rattle with driver and adze,
And lecture each day upon hoops and on heads;
The famous old ballad of Love in a Tub,
You may sing to the tune of your rub a dub dub.

Ye Shipbuilders, Riggers, and Makers of Sails, Already the New Constitution prevails;
And soon ye shall see our proud swelling side,
The ships of Columbia triumphantly ride.

Each Tradesman turn out with his tool in his hand,
To cherish the Arts and keep peace through the land.
Each Apprentice and Journeyman join in my song,
And let the brisk Chorus go bounding along.

FOURTH OF JULY PROPHECY.

Of one thing, reader, be thou sure—the Yankee eagle
one day
Will stretch his wings from Behring's Straits beyond
the Bay of Fundy,
And from the Pole to Panama, when sleeping I and
you lie,
Will all belong to Uncle Sam some future Fourth of July.

ANECDOTES.

"A down east skipper, who with a boy was trying to manage a small sloop, when the master of a Liverpool Packet, who had been dodging out of their way in increased at their awkwardness cried out—

"What ship is that?"
"The Sally, from Maine," responded the Yankee lubber.
"Who commands her?"
"Wall," replied the skipper, "I undertook to but I screw, she's too much for me!"

A lover, wishing to concentrate his ardor into one burst of passion, exclaimed—"Oh, Angelina Augusta, I feel towards you just like the burning bush that Moses saw—I'm all afire, but am consumed!"

A young lady having purchased an assortment of music in a warehouse, on returning to her carriage recollected a piece she had forgotten. "Sir," she said re-entering the shop, "there is one thing I have omitted." "What is that madam?" said the lad. "One kind has been one part," on which the youth vaulted over the table and saluted the fair stranger.

"I do not love you," said a gentleman to a bright little girl whom he was tormenting. "But you will have to," was the arch reply. "How so?" "Because," said she, "the Bible says you must love them that hate you, and I am sure I hate you!"

An old lady once said that her idea of a great man was, "A man who is keener of his clothes, don't drink spirits, kin read the Bible without spelling the words, and can eat a cold dinner on wash day to save the winking folks from cooking."

A man boasting in company of ladies that he had a very luxuriant head of hair, one of the fair damsels remarked that it was owing entirely to the melancholia of the soil.

A clergyman, who reading to his congregation a chapter in Genesis, found the last sentence on the page to be—"and the Lord gave unto Adam a wife." Turning over two leaves together, he found written, and read in an audible voice, "and she was pitched without and without!" He had unhappily got into the middle of a description of Noah's Ark.

"My son," said an old turbaned Turk one day, taking his child by the hand, in the streets of Cairo, and pointing out to him on the opposite side a Frenchman just imported in all the elegance of Parisian costume, "my son, look there! if you ever forget God and the prophet, you may come to look like that!"

"I tell you, Susan, that I will commit suicide if you won't have me."
"Well, John, as soon as you have given me that proof of your affection, I will believe that you love me."

Mrs. D. Hayden.

Removal.

THE subscriber takes this method to inform his customers and the public, that he has moved to the new building lately erected by Mr. Samuel Copeland, it being more commodious and better adapted to his business; and also, would tender his sincere thanks for the liberal share of patronage which he has received during the past year. His former customers and the public generally are invited to call, where will be found a variety of Stoves, among which is the embodying, in the highest degree of perfection, every essential quality requisite for any latitude. This Stove presents itself externally in a plain dress, with just and admirable proportions, giving it the appearance of a cheap and tastefully made piece of Cabinet Furniture. Internally, the location and capacity of the Fire Chamber is such as to remove effectually the objections often made to Air-Tight Cook-Stoves for country use. The Oven proves itself to be precisely what its projectors intended it should be, viz. the largest and most perfect ever constructed in a family Stove. The Flues, upon which the great responsibility and reputation of a stove depends, differ from any ever before used, and are of such construction and capacity as to ensure the most perfect draught, without liability to fill up, and are easily kept clean. Nearly one hundred of this stove have been sold the past year and all have given the utmost satisfaction.

Also—A variety of PARLOR, OFFICE and CYLINDER STOVES, together with a good assortment of TIN, BRITANIA, SHEET IRON and Japaned Ware.

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE, it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 5, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove. A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory of the Agent in this town.

E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIST'S, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

—Also— SHEET IRON, TIN AND COPPER WORK done to order, Of the best Materials, and in a workmanlike manner.

MISCELLANY.

THE EXCHANGED GARMENT.

"It is a very extraordinary thing Susan, that the laundress never will send home my things right. Every week there is sure to be some mistake."

"I'm sure I'm very sorry, mem! I always desire her to be so particular."

"She seems to pay no attention then to what you say to her. Last week she lost one of my best cambric handkerchiefs; the week before,
she could not account for that pretty fichu, and now there's another article missing."

"Indeed, mem! Why, I counted the linen over when it came home, and it quite agreed with the bill. I'm sure the number was all right."

"The number—yes—perhaps so; but what what do you call this? This thing certainly can't be mine. It looks as if it belonged to a man!"

"Good gracious me, mem, and so it does;
Well, I never! As sure as I live, it's a gentleman's—what's his name. How could it have got there?"

"Through the woman's carelessness, of course. Look at it, Susan, and see if there's any name or mark upon it, that you may discover where it is."

"Oh dear me, mem, I should not like to touch
it. I know nothing about gentlemen's wearing apparel."

"You know my things from other people's I hope. Stuff and nonsense, do as I tell you.
I dare say it belongs to the person's husband."

"Oh no, mem, that it can't. They're very poor people, mem. He could not afford to wear anything half so good as this. Look at the fineness of the lining, mem, and then the frill
is real British lace!"

"Indeed! it's marked, I suppose?"

"Oh, yes, mem, here in the corner. Gracious goodness, if it isn't a crownet most beautifully worked, and the letter N under it. To think of that!"

"A coronet, indeed! and the letter N! Do you know who she washes for?"

"Oh dear me, no, mem—I never asked such a question."

"Well, make a point of asking now. Take the thing away, and be sure you desire Mrs.
Jones if she's her name to take it back directly and send home my proper garment. It's perfectly ridiculous."

The above colloquy took place one morning in the dressing room of Mrs. Trevelyan, a very pretty young widow who occupied the first and second floors of fifty-three Harley street. In early life—when barely eighteen—she had made a marriage of convenience, or rather it had been made for her, for she had no voice in the matter, an uncle, upon whom she depended, being the sole arbiter of her fate.

The gentleman who espoused her in spite of his sixty years, and disparities not less remarkable than age, looked forward to a long life of happiness with the beautiful Ethelinde Maltravers; and such was the charm of her disposition, and the natural sweetness of her temper, that he might not have been deceived, but for one of those accidents to which flesh is unfortunately heir to, and which grow thicker round
our path as it draws nearer to the goal; the fact is, he died one day of influenza, after a brief union of a little more than a year.

That he was sincerely attached to Ethelinde,
the manner in which he disposed of his property
made sufficiently clear. He left her sole executrix, and the succession consisted of a fine landed estate in Devonshire, and the sum of twenty thousand pounds in the three per cents.

But Mrs. Trevelyan did not come into the property without opposition; the will was disputed by the nearest male relative, and a law-suit was the consequence. This was the cause of her being in a temporary residence in London
at the time when the preceding conversation occurred, for had she consulted her own inclination, her footsteps would never have wandered in the month of June from her beautiful groves

and gardens at Torcombe, in spite of the attractions of the London season. In London, however, she was; and much of her time was taken up in interviews with lawyers and men of business, so that except a late drive in the park, or an occasional party to dinner, or at the opera, Mrs. Trevelyan saw little of the gay life in which she was so well qualified, both by nature and accomplishments, to shine. Of the claimant to her late husband's estates, she knew nothing more than that he was a young man of rank, who, like many of his class, was in want of money, to meet expenses and relieve incumbrances, and she believed he was abroad, though probably hastening homeward, as the period drew near for bringing the lawsuit, in which he had embarked by the advice of friends, to a close. Though naturally unwilling to forego all the advantages of her position, which she had gained by her own exemplary conduct, and conscious at the same time that her retention of Mr. Trevelyan's bequest was no ruinous deprivation of the rights of the next heir, Ethelinde would willingly have agreed to an amicable compromise, by the advance of any reasonable sum of money to meet the alleged necessities of the young nobleman, her antagonist. But the affair was so entirely in the hands of the lawyers that no opportunity offered of proposing terms to the principal, and moreover, Mrs.
Trevelyan was so uncertain of his "whereabouts," that she could find no direct means of communicating with him.

Matters were, therefore, left to take their course.

Half-past seven was striking by the clock of St. James's Church as Lord Norham dismounted
at the foot of the steps leading into the Albany in Piccadilly. After glancing pleasantly at the beautiful thorough-bred bay which he had ridden, and examining, with some care, one of the animal's shoulders, which seemed less glossy
than the rest of his coat, Lord Norham patted
the "poor fellow" on the neck, and with a word of instruction, consigned him to his groom
and went in to dress for dinner.

"This," he said, as he walked towards letter
D., where he was housed in a friend's chambers,
"this is one of the great discomforts of civilized life! To be compelled to put on a formal dress for the hours which offer the greatest enjoyment; to case one's self up in a starch cravat and stiff coat, when inclination would lead one rather to throw both aside. These are among the penalties one must pay for living in the society of great cities. Oh, the unpleasant comfort of wearing the loose, easy robes of the east, or the negligence of the shores of the Mediterranean! Oh, the delicious nights on the roof tops of Damascus, on the deck of my own Gulet, or in the patios of Grenada!"

What a contrast to the fettered existence to which I have been compelled to return! But, unluckily, one can obtain nothing in this world without money, and money I certainly want. I wish I could have lingered through another winter in Malta, in Greece, in dearest Naples, anywhere rather than returned home, though it is the season. But those friends, those friends —who will take greater care of your interests
than you do yourself, and who make you follow the customs of the world, accusing you of apathy, disregard of self-respect, and want of consideration for others, if you fail to adopt their views or act up to their wishes. But for them I should never have entered into this troublesome law-suit. What did it signify to me to whom my old cousin, Trevelyan, left his money?

He had a right to do as he liked with it,
for he made the greater part of it in India by the sweat of his brow. And, forsooth, because he succeeded to a landless house—all his patri-mony—and made it, by his wealth, the centre
of a large estate, the lawyers must interpose, and say that the nearest kin has a claim. Not that I should have had the slightest objections to his property, if he had left it to me in his will; on the contrary, for it would have prevented me from doing what, most likely, I shall be obliged one day to do, marry an heiress for the sake of her money; but I hate the bore of a law-suit, ripping up all one's private concerns, and laying them open to the staring public, besides a world of misconstruction as to conduct and motives. I know nothing of Mrs. Trevelyan, but from what I have heard, she always conducted herself very well, and to say the least of it, she deserved some compensation for the sacrifice she made in marrying a man so old and yellow as my uncle. They say, too, she is very pretty; it's the money makes the people say that, I'll be bound. I'd lay a heavy wager, she is not half so lovely as that fascinating creature who was so frightened to-day in the Park. I wonder who she can be! The carriage had only a simple cipher on the panels,
and the servants were in the plainest possible
livery, but she is certainly somebody! So much beauty and such dignity of manner cannot belong to a parvenu. It was lucky I rode up as I did, or that stupid coachman would decidedly have upset the carriage into the Serpentine. I was afraid Conrad had hurt his shoulder, as he rushed by the tree into the water, but we got off with a few plunges and splashes.
She looked pale certainly, but when she smiled
her thanks, her color came back, and even my own loved Damascus roses are not brighter than the glow on her cheek."

Lord Norham had by this time reached his apartments, where his attentive valet-d' chambre, an Italian, who had travelled with him for three years, was in readiness for his toilet. The young nobleman, in a somewhat abstracted

mood, proceeded with his task, but his abstrac-tion was not so great as to prevent him from making a sudden exclamation, when he had got about half-way through the operation.

"Why, what is this, Antonio?" he cried out,
abruptly, "I'm not going to a masquerade!"

"Milor!" ejaculated the astonished valet.

"Yes, you may well stare; see here! Why, it's something you must have picked up in the Levant. What a ridiculous shape! It looks as if it was made for a woman!" And Lord Norham, as he spoke, displayed a very delicately-wrought article of raiment, of the finest linen, with a frill running round the top, of the most transparent cambric, edged with the richest Valenciennes lace. It was, moreover, "curiously cut," so as to give a very graceful contour to the upper part of the garment, and a little way down in the centre appeared two small crimson letters.

"Corpo di bacco!" exclaimed the Italian,
who was a married man, though he led a bachelor's life; "e una camicia da donna!"

"A camicia is it! How the duce did it get here? You did not open Mr. Percival's wardrobe by mistake? that, perhaps, would have accounted for it."

"No, Milor! I could not do such thing, for de Signore Percival take his keys along vid him
ven he lend your lordship his chamber."

"How came it here, then?"

"Upon my word, milor, I do not know. Perhaps de lavandaja shall have made some mistake, and send you home lady's dress instead of your own."

"Well, you must see about it. Meantime give me something that I can wear. Curious to send me such a thing, and you not to take any notice of it! It's very fine looking stuff?"

"Oh, yes, milor, I never see nothing finer,
and my wife, she have a great deal to do in disvay at Napoli."

"After all, the shape is a very pretty one.
I wonder who the owner is! I thought I saw some initials; what are they?"

"Eccole, due lettere—two letters, E. T.—
and some figures, a 2 and a 4."

"E. T. 24!" mused Lord Norham; "I wonder who she is? It would be worth while trying to find out. I say, Antonio, he continued, as he finished the bow of his cravat, for in spite of his objections to modern costume, he piqued himself on the skill of his tie, an accomplishment really acquired at Oxford;
make a point of asking the laundress what the lady's name is, and, do you hear, don't send the cambric back till I tell you."

"I shall recollect, milor," returned Antonio, with a smile. "Your lordship's cab is at de door." And in a few seconds, Lord Norham was whirling through the streets, in his way to Grosvenor Square, the images of pretty women and pretty garments contending in mastery over the claims of salmis and suppres.

The Duke of Derbyshire gave concert that night at Derbyshire House, at which all London was present. Ethelinde was amongst the guests, chaperoned by her aunt, the Honorable Mrs. Rushworth. It was the first great party she had been to since she came to town, for she had refused to go out generally, endente lite, but Derbyshire House is an exception to all rules; no one refuses to go there. It is not merely on account of the fashion which duke's parties confer, the positive agrement which they offer, nor the kind and courteous welcome given by the noble hosts to his guests, though these are nowhere to be met with in a great degree, but because there is a charm about them,
the secret of which has never yet been discovered, which so completely distinguishes them from all others. At Derbyshire House, the light has no glare, the music no noise, the flowers breathe perfume only; every one smiles naturally; there is no genie, no crowd; all wear an aspect of happiness; and as far as society alone can make people happy they are so there.

In spite of the uncertainty of her position, Ethelinde also felt happy. She was young and beautiful, and the buoyancy of youthful spirits drove back those phantoms of the future which are ever drawing near to deform the prospect when they are not then, was an incomplete happiness, and until that pain be felt, happiness is merely an image reflected in a mirror. Was she destined to remain long in this state of ignorance? A few minutes decided the question.

After listening with rapture to strains of the most exquisite music, Mrs. Rushworth and Ethelinde left the concert room, to wander through the range of beautiful saloons which extend on either hand, admiring at every step some charming picture, some perfect piece of sculpture, or some work of art, as such as it was rare. They had nearly completed the tour, when their progress was slightly obstructed by the tall figure of a young man, who was leaning thoughtfully in a doorway. The rustling sound of their dresses, however, recalled his attention, and he drew one side to allow them to pass. In doing so, he turned towards them, and to Ethelinde's surprise, she recognized the gentleman who had come to her assistance that afternoon in the park, and he beheld the lady of whom, in spite of himself, he had since then been constantly thinking.

Mrs. Trevelyan could do no less than bow in recognition of the service he had performed, and it was at least a necessity on the part of Lord Norham to speak.

"I hope," he said, "you have not suffered from the flurry—I suppose I must not say fear—
which your unruly horses excited to-day?"

"Oh, you are right to think I was afraid," replied Ethelinde, earnestly, "for really the situation seemed dangerous."

"I dread, then," Lord Norham smilingly returned, "lest my ignorance or awkwardness
should have contributed to your alarm."

"On the contrary, I feel perfectly certain that if you had not seized the horses' heads, the carriage would have been overturned. It was very kind to venture so much for a mere stranger."

"That was a common impulse, though accident summoned me to do what I would most have preferred. But, after all, in society—in the world—there are no strangers. It was decreed by fate that I should meet you here tonight; the same thing would have happened
had we both been in Rome or in Cairo."

"Are you so much of a predestinarian?"
laughingly asked Ethelinde. "Does nothing happen but what is pre-ordained?"

"Nothing—of consequence."

"But what can be more inconsequential than this casual encounter?"

"Perhaps only that of this afternoon."

"Nay, there you are wrong. I should be very ungrateful if I ranked them equally."

"Forgive me—I ought not to have implied any doubt; but do not fall into an error of overestimating the very trifling service I was so fortunate as to render you."

"Your creed of fatalism does not, I hope, exclude gratitude from the list of voluntary efforts."

"It would be presumptuous to assign it so much scope. Fate only prepares the way; it disposes of those accidents which are material to the mind accomplishes the rest."

"But is not the mind, according to your theory, predisposed?"

"Yes—to the reception of a particular theme;
but the same cause often produces very opposite effects. It is like sowing an unknown seed.
The earth fructifies every germ alike,
whether the plant which is to spring from it be sweet or bitter, a remedy or a poison."

"You have examined these things seriously.
Where have you studied?"

"In the east, not always in solitude, but often far from the haunts of men."

"You have travelled much, then?"

"I have seen many places, and some varieties of mankind, but not enough for the purpose which originally impelled me to travel."

"And you have returned with your objects unaccomplished? What caused you to relinquish their pursuit?"

"I believe," said Lord Norham, looking intently at Mrs. Trevelyan, "yes, I am sure it was fate!"

The Honorable Mrs. Rushworth must have been a lady endowed with great good nature,
or a very rare patience to have allowed this colloquy to endure without offering to interpose a word; but there are limits even to feminine forbearance, and now she spoke:

"I see," she said "you are arguing in a circle; besides, the duke is looking round him, a sign that the music is about to recommence.
Come, Ethelinde, let us go to the concert-room."

Lord Norham bowed to Mrs. Trevelyan's graceful inclination as she passed on; I am not sure, even that their eyes did not meet;
but he did not attempt to follow—at least, not then.

"Who is your new acquaintance, Ethelinde?"
inquired Mrs. Rushworth; "he can only have just returned from abroad, for I don't think I ever met him before."

"I am as ignorant as you, aunt, who my deliverer is, and you know also as much of my adventure."

"He is a very distinguished-looking person,
at all events," said Mrs. Rushworth.

Ethelinde thought he was even something more, but she said nothing.

When the carriages were called that night,
there was at least one attentive listener in the hall with many pillars; and it was not without a thrill of pleasure as he handed Mrs. Rush-worth and her fair companion to their brougham, that Lord Norham heard the footman
give the word:—"Fifty three, Harley-street."

When Lord Norham woke on the morning
after the concert, the first word which he uttered was "Ethelinde," and a long sigh followed the exclamation.

Antonio, who was in the room, busied about his usual avocations, hearing his master stir, presumed that he spoke to him, and therefore addressed him:

"Milor is awake?" He received no answer, but continued, "I have got some news about de camicia. I have discovered to whom it belonged—a very nice lady! very beautiful, very rich!"

"Is that you, Antonio? What are you talking about? I wish you would hold your tongue!"

"Oh, very well, milor. I only thought your lordship would be glad to know about de camicia."

"Hang the camicia," said Lord Norham, rather petulantly; "what can it signify to me,
whose it is?"

"I know were de lady live, milor."

"And I care nothing about it. If he could tell me what I do want to know," he muttered,
"it would be something to the purpose."

"La lavandaja—de vashingwoman—have been here late last night, milor, and she tell me
de owner de de chemise live at Nombare Fifty-three, Harley-street."

"What do you say?" cried Lord Norham

starting up in his bed, with a degree of energy that astonished even the trained Italian, "where?
What?"

Antonio repeated the intimation.

"Make-haste," said Lord Norham, "give me my dressing-gown. Stay, you were speaking of the camicia; you have not sent it back,
I hope?"

"Centamente no, milor. Your lordship say I was to keep him till further orders."

"True—and you have it here?"

"Yes, milor."

"Bring it me, directly."

The order was promptly obeyed; and to any one but a native of a southern clime, accustomed to vehement demonstrations, the eagerness
with which Lord Norham seized the garment, and the thousand kisses he imprinted on the unconscious linen, would have been matter for never ending astonishment. An English valet would have thought of his own safety, or—if he had been awake to it of a commission of lunacy.
Antonio merely waited to see how long the passion would last—it was not quickly over.

"Ethelinde! Ethelinde!" exclaimed Lord
Norham: "yes, here is the dear initial, E.
But what does the other letter mean? T—T!
I heard the name of Rushworth—The Honorable Mrs. Rushworth—that, I suppose, was her mother. Well, it may be so still; her daughter by a first marriage—no doubt of it. What grace! what beauty! I never thought that English woman could be so supremely lovely!
I must find out all about her. I don't think she is engaged—she did not look as if another occupied her thoughts. Well, this law-suit has led to something that the lawyers who devised
it never dreamt of. It may take its own course for what I care, provided I can once more see my own, my dearest Ethelinde!"

But the law is more prosaic than even lovers
imagine, and Lord Norham was sorely dressed before he received a letter from Essex-street, informing him it was absolutely essential to his interests that he should attend that morning, at eleven o'clock to meet that eminent counsel,
Mr. Scatterdust, to discuss finally the question of the succession to the estate of the late Mr.
Trevelyan. The letter was signed "Gabriel Quirk," and prayed his immediate attention.

"What an infernal bore!" he exclaimed as he threw down the missive; "I suppose I must attend—indeed, I may as well go there as anywhere else, at such an early hour. Of course, she is not up yet. Antonio, desire Stevens to be here with the cab at a quarter to eleven,
and let me have some breakfast."

We leave Lord Norham to discuss his meal
with such appetite as love has left him, and return to Harley-street.

It was twelve o'clock, and Ethelinde had not yet left her boudoir, though she had been up hours, and the restlessness which haunted her couch pursued her when she quitted it. She had tried to read, but could not fix her attention on the page, and now she sat at an open secretary, with paper before her and a pen in her hand, but her thoughts refused to flow, or wandered from the subject of her intended correspondence. Absorbed in a reverie, which, to judge by the sweet serenity of her features, appeared a happy one, she had suffered some one to tap twice at her door unregarded, but the third knock roused her attention, and she bade
the intruder come in.

It was Susan, and her countenance bore the signs of recent excitement, for her color was high, and her eyes sparkled.

"What is the matter, Susan?" asked Mrs.
Trevelyan, calmly.

GUARD AGAINST DISEASE OF THE BLOOD.
If you would wish to avoid all its attendant evil consequences such as CONSUMPTION, CANCER, RHEUMATISM, LIVER OBSTRUCTIONS, URINARY TROUBLE, &c. &c.

It is a well known fact, established by the ablest Physicians, that Diseased or Impure Blood is the source of the most wasting and life-destroying Complaints that humanity is subject to. This impurity may be received through various abuses of the system, intemperance to general health, &c.

The late distinguished Dr. Thacher, of Plymouth, thus writes on this subject:—

"How can disease be hoped to yield to any skill, while the blood-current courses through the veins loaded with impurity? Sent to the cellular membranes of the lungs, it gains no healthy vitality, and leaves that delicate membrane of our system only insidiously affected with its impure touch, and then re-courses itself again, till Consumption comes forth developed in its alarming and devastating consequences."

To check this foul destroyer of mankind, and to cleanse the blood thoroughly, this powerful alternative of Dr. Corbett is with confidence given to the public.

It will cure Consumption!—purify the Blood! Clean away all Cancerous Humors!—remove all Urinary Affections!—relieve Constipation of the Bowels!—heal all Scrofulous Affections, and eradicate the im-pure humors, thus giving freshness and healthfulness to the blood, and securing to the system the fullest health.

PROCRUSTINIAN IS THE THIEF OR TIME.

Delay is dangerous—neglect that could and ought a few weeks, and the hope of recovery will be lost to you forever. Let not any pecuniary consideration deter you from trying to save your life and health while there is a chance. Consumption is annually sweeping off thousands to the tomb; no disease has baffled the skill of physicians like it; no physician, perhaps, has ever done more for this large class of suffering humanity, than Dr. Watson. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure; therefore, before your lungs become ulcerated, and so diseased that no human means can save you from an early grave, try in season, try at once, a medicine which has been such infinite value to thousands—obtain a bottle of Dr. Watson's Balsam of Wild Cherry, take it, get another if needed, and you will find it will give you the power to resist the disease entirely, which if neglected will terminate your life. Be not deceived by quacks, with their imitations and counterfeits; buy none but the genuine and original, which is signed I. B. in the wrapper.

None genuine, unless signed I. B. in the wrapper.

POETRY.

TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW.

Don't tell me of to-morrow!
Give me the man who'll say,
That when a good deed's to be done
Let's do the deed to-day.
We may all command the present,
If we act and never wait;
But repentance is the phantom
Of the past, that comes too late!

Don't tell me of to-morrow!
There is much to do to-day
That can never be accomplished,
If we throw the hours away.
Every moment has its duty—
Who the future can foretell?
Then why put off till to-morrow
What to-day can do as well?

Don't tell me of to-morrow!
If we look upon the past,
How much that we have left to us
We cannot do at last!
To-day! it is the only time
For all on this frail earth;
It takes an age to form a life,
A moment gives it birth.

A LOVE SONG

She who sleeps upon my heart
Was the first to win it;
She who dreams upon my breast
Ever reigns within it;
She who kisses off my lips
Wakes their warmest blessing;
She who rests within my arms
Feels their closest pressing.

Other days than these shall come,
Days that may be dreary;
Other hours shall greet us yet,
Hours that may be weary;
Still that heart shall be thy home,
Still that breast thy pillow;
Still those lips meet thine as oft Billow meeteth billow.

Sleep, then, on my happy heart,
Since thy love hath won it;
Dream, then, on my loyal breast—
None but thou hast done it;
And when our bloom shall change
With its wintry weather,
May we in the self-same grave
Sleep and dream together.

OUR OWN FIRESIDE.

Dear is the morn's soft blowing gale
Is budding May;
Sweet in the wild rose-scented vale
The scattered hay!
Dear is the early evening star,
The lover's guide;
But dearer still, and sweeter far,
Our own fireside.

Dear is the linnet's lively song
That cheers the grove;
Dear to the sailor's heart the call
Of land desired;
But, ah! more dear, more sweet than all
Our own fireside.

ETERNITY.

Thou rollest on, oh, deep, unmeasured sea,
Thy length and depth a mystery profound;
Days, weeks, years, centuries, in immensity
Pass on, nor leave a footstep, nor a sound.
Thou lightest up thy smooth, un wrinkled brow,
Beyond the limit of our utmost thought;
A shoreless space—where ages mutely howl
Like bubbles on thy boom, and are not!
We hear a tramp of feet, we see a throng
Of generations flashing through the gloom;
They fade, and others rise, and far along
Thy caverns yawn, and Nature finds her tomb
In thee; but thou, nor young, nor old, art evermore
One all pervading space—a sea without a shore!

ANECDOTES.

An old and respectable physician, who is now a strenuous temperance man, in his young days sometimes patronized the grocer's. On one occasion, having indulged too freely in spirituous decoctions, he mounted his mare and started for home. He had not gone far before the commingling of spirits in his stomach gave rise to such a furious rebellion that he was fain to dismount and come to anchor against a large log by the road side, where he commenced a process of upheaval that was truly alarming. While thus engaged he was accosted by a traveller who, with a true Yankee solicitude, inquired what was the matter. The inebriate gruffly replied, that he had traded horses, and was very sick of his bargain!

'Are those bells ringing for fire?' inquired Simon of Tobias. 'No indeed,' answered Tibe, 'they have got plenty of fire, and the bells are now ringing for water to match.'

'I shall be at home next Sunday night,' a young lady remarked to her wavering beau, as she let him out of her door. 'So shall I,' was the reply.

'What makes your face so red?' 'I'm a Sex of Temperance.'

'Indeed! I thought the Sons drank nothing but water.'

'In general, they don't; but you see I'm a burning and a shining light!'

'Have you any limb horn bonnets?' inquired a very modest young miss of a shop keeper. 'Any what?' 'Any limb horn bonnets?' 'Any—you don't mean leg horn?' The young lady was brought to by the use of proper restoratives.

'I believe the jury have been inoculated for stupidity,' said a lawyer. 'That may be,' said his opponent, 'but the bar are of opinion that you had it in the natural way.'

Mrs. E. Hayden,

GRATEFUL for the patronage she has received for more than twenty years, offers to her friends and the public an ENLARGED STOCK of the best

FAMILY MEDICINES,

Selected and Prepared with care.
—ALSO—
Various articles for the use of the sick, among which are, SPOUT DRINKING CUPS; Leech Glasses; Nursing Tubes, of Porcelain, Ivory and silver, with and without Shells; Pratt's Patent Nursing Shields; India Rubber and Box Wood do.; Bed Pans; Metal and Glass Syringes; Crain's, Ingall's and Chapin's Supporters; Horse Hair Mittens; English Patent Lint and Surgeon's Tow; Spread Plasters, on kid, cloth and paper; Jew David's Plaster, in Boxes; Blistering Paper and Tissue Dressing; European Leeches, &c., &c.

Washington St., rear of Stone Temple.
Quincy, Oct. 20.

Removal.
THE subscriber takes this method to inform his customers and the public, that he has moved to the new building lately erected by Mr. Samuel Copeland, it being more commodious and better adapted to his business; and also, would tender his sincere thanks for the liberal share of patronage which he has received during the past year. His former customers and the public generally are invited to call, where will be found a variety of Stoves, among which is the

embodying, in the highest degree of perfection, every essential quality requisite for any latitude. This Stove presents itself externally in a plain dress, with just and admirable proportions, giving it the appearance of a classic and tastefully made piece of Cabinet Furniture. Intrinsically, the location and capacity of the Fire Chamber is such as to remove effectually the objections often made to Air-Tight Cook-Stoves for country use. The Oven proves itself to be precisely what its projectors intended it should be, viz: the largest and most perfect ever constructed in a family Stove. The Flues, upon which the great responsibility and reputation of a stove depends, differ from any ever before used, and are of such construction and capacity as to ensure the most perfect draught, without liability to fill up, and are easily kept clean. Nearly one hundred of this stove have been sold the past year and all have given the utmost satisfaction.

Also—A variety of PARLOR, OFFICE and CYLINDER STOVES, together with a good assortment of TIN, BRITANIA, SHEET IRON and Japanese Ware.

CHARLES HOLMES.

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air-Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,
it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS
is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air-Tight Cooking Stove.
Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.
A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory
of the Agent in this town.

E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIST'S, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

—ALSO—
SHEET IRON, TIN AND COPPER WORK done to order,
Of the best Materials, and in a workmanlike manner.
Quincy, Sept. 1.

The Circassian Oil.
THIS OIL has now obtained a celebrity worthy its high intrinsic merits. The sales have steadily increased and in public estimation it supercedes all other preparations for the HAIR. The proprietor is constantly receiving testimonials of its great efficacy in restoring the hair in cases of baldness, and it has also been signally successful in curing the various scurfy affections to which the head and hair is subject. Parents will find the Circassian Oil an article of incalculable benefit to children, in laying the foundation of a

A FUNNY LAW. Virginia is famous for many things, but in nothing more than her laws, if the following be a specimen:—At a grand Assembly held at James City, in the year 1616, were passed many acts "to the glory of Almighty God and public good of this his Majesty's colony of Virginia," among which is, Act V. Women causing scandalous suits, to be ducked. Whereas, often times many babbling women often slander and scandalize their neighbours, for which their poor husbands are often brought in to chargeable and vexatious suits, and cast into great damages. Be it therefore enacted by the authority aforesaid, after judgement passed for the damages, the woman shall be punished by ducking; and if the slander be so enormous as to be adjudged at a greater damage than five hundred pounds of tobacco, then the woman to suffer a ducking for each five hundred pounds of tobacco so adjudged against her husband if he refuse to pay the tobacco.—Village Recorder.

THE HONEY-MOON. What is the honey-moon, and whence is the name derived? It is traceable to a Teutonic origin. Among the Teutones was a favorite drink called "metheglin." It was made of honey, and much like the present head of the same name in European countries. The same beverage was in use among the Saxons, as well as another called "morat," which was also made of honey, but flavored with mulberries. The honeyed drinks were used in great abundance at festivals. Among the nobility the marriage was celebrated a whole lunar month, which was called a moon, during which the festival board was well supplied with the honey drink. Hence this month of festival was called the "honey moon," or honey-moon, which means a month of festival.

SINGING SCHOOL.

To be taught by Mr John Newell.

Is it necessary to have a school in Quincy, at this time, for thorough instruction in the rudiments of vocal music and singing, which is the practical application of those rudiments; to be of a general character, to accommodate all who have a gift for such music?

To preserve the several choirs, and all other societies in town, and elsewhere, in a prosperous condition, it is necessary to have frequent recruits of new members, who will enter the seats with interest and spirit, and work well with experienced members to order them; and thus be fitted to take the places of those who are leaving. This is God's plan in his several kingdoms of nature. The younger of all classes and ages are coming up to take the places of the more advanced of their species. Stop this recruiting and we be to that society or kingdom. I believe our choirs are suffering for the want of this necessary aid. It is necessary, also, to preserve the morals of the rising youth. If the friends of youth, will not set them to work and encourage them in it, wicked men will, and always have. "Idleness is the Devil's pack horse."

Which will be the most beneficial to the town? a school of the most scientific and interesting character, the expense of which, for the instructor will be $125, and for hall, lights, fuel &c., doubtless not an unreasonable sum, in addition to the $125, accommodating from 150 to 200 scholars; or to have one of an ordinary kind, for half that sum, which will excite but little general interest. I think a large majority of the citizens will prefer the former.

Mr. John Newell, of Boston, now engaged in instructing the advanced singers in the "Elocution of Music," and well known to many of our citizens as an accomplished and pleasing teacher, can be obtained upon the above terms, if applied to soon.

Mr. N. has an opportunity to teach a similar school in another town, but was previously spoken to upon the subject by several individuals here. He will have a piano, and, at the end of the term will probably have an exhibition, with a suitable number of skillful musicians etc. This school will not injure the day school. A little music keeps the children pleasant and lively and in a better mood for all their studies.

Will the selectman, clergy, general school committee, Teachers of the common schools, superintendents of Sabbath Schools and all the friends of youth and music, please bestow suitable attention upon this subject and if it meet their favor, please use their influence in devising the best plan for the general good etc., that the musical ability of the poor children, also, of the sabbath and day schools, and others, may be brought into public use and, if convenient, be present at the meeting.

N. B. Mr. Newell will hold a public meeting of the citizens, singers, and those who wish to attend the school, to consider the subject, and for singing, in the Lyceum Room, next WEDNESDAY evening, 27th inst., at half past six o'clock. All are respectfully invited to attend.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, FEB. 23, 1850.

John A. Green, Editor.

THE LYCEUM.

The lecture of last Thursday evening was pronounced by Rev. Nelson Clark of Quincy. Subject—Conscience. The lecturer did not fail to render this important theme practical and engaging. Avoiding all metaphysical speculations and theological discussions he confined his remarks entirely to the excellent theme which he had selected and seemed anxious to impress upon his audience the moral power and beauty of that sublime principle which a beneficent Creator has implanted in the universal heart of man. While appetite and passion impel us to wrong, and self-love merely hints at expediency—Conscience, ever watchful, whispers, with a "still small voice," her timely warning into our ears and urges us to duty. If we pass her kind admonitions with contempt and abandon ourselves to the illicit indulgence of appetite or the seductive pleasures of Passion, Conscience, ever true to herself, upbraids us with her clarion voice of constant reproach, and scourges our souls with her scorpion lash of unmitigated remorse.

How beautifully and with what power has the sweet Bard of Avon, nature's great poet, illustrated the character of conscience! See the blood-stained and ambitious Richard, start from his troubled couch exclaiming—

"O, Coward Conscience how dost thou affright me!" Behold Macbeth in his agony after the appalling murder of Duncan.

"How is't with me when any noise appals me?" The power of Conscience is most touchingly portrayed in the great play of Hamlet. Thus in the scene when the players appear before the king. The young Prince Hamlet, watches the effect upon his guilty uncle's Conscience, and says

"I'll observe his looks: I'll count him to the quick; if he do blush, I'll have him whistled to the quick; if he do blush, I'll have him whistled to the quick."

Thus the power of Conscience reigns universal and supreme. It is a beautiful link in the glorious chain of moral science, and will bear lecturing upon now, as properly and as profitably as in the day of Shakspeare. We were pleased to hear the speaker announce this subject, for the times demand its persistence. The conscience of many have become weakened by constant neglect and disuse, and to such this subject, cannot be too urgently presented. As the arm of the smith waxes sinuary and strong by daily exercise at the forge, so may his conscience gain dominion and power in his soul by the same assiduous cultivation.

The importance of educating the conscience of children, was strongly hinted at by the lecturer and many useful suggestions were thrown out to parents which we sincerely hope for the sake of society and the good of children, will be cherished and enforced.

CONGRESSIONAL. The slavery question is the all-absorbing question in Congress, and throughout the country. Until that is settled, there seems to be little chance for the transaction of any other business.

The revenue bill for the relief of the Secretary of the Treasury, and the payment of the Custom House officers has at last passed both Houses. It provided the sum of one million for collection of revenue of customs, fifty thousand for warehouses, twenty-five thousand for Texas and Oregon, one hundred thousand for California, and fifty thousand for new business and new districts—in all one million two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, for the expenses of collecting the revenue for the half of the present fiscal year, ending the 30th June, 1850.

In the Senate during the past week, some sharp words passed between Senators Butler and Hale, growing out of a petition, presented by Mr. Hale, from fourteen hundred women of Dover, N. H., praying that slavery may not be extended to the New Mexico territories.

On the subject of Mr. Clay's compromise, several Senators have spoken among whom are Messrs. Berrien and Davis of Missouri, against the ground taken by Mr. Clay, and strongly in favor of slavery extension.

The President has transmitted the California Constitution to Congress, without a word of comment or suggestion, one way or the other. It was referred in the House, to the Committee of the Whole, on the state of the Union.

In the Senate on the 14th inst., the subject of the reference of the Constitution of California to the Committee on Territories being up, quite a sharp debate occurred, in which Messrs. Foote, Clay and others took part.

In the House, on the same day, in Committee of the Whole, Mr. Hilliard finished a speech upon California, which was full of "sound and fury"—a regular dissolution speech. Mr. Fitch, of Indiana, in the course of a speech said:—

The threats of dissolution, made by members, would not swerve Northern men in their duty. The South were preparing for a battle when there was no foe in the field. Like Don Quixote, they were warring against windmills.

MARRIAGE BILL. A bill is before our Legislature, which provides that a person intending marriage shall give three days notice of his or her intention to the clerk of the town or city where such person may reside and a certificate that such notice has been given, is to be delivered to the clergyman or magistrate, to constitute the authority for solemnizing the marriage. The usual publication of intended marriage is entirely dispensed with.

FIRE IN COHASSET. A building in Cohasset, occupied by Mr. D. Bayley as a grain store, and also as a market by A. A. Faxon & Co., was destroyed by fire on Monday; loss several thousand dollars. Mr. Bayley was insured for two thousand, partly at Worcester.

MURDER TRIAL AT CAMBRIDGE. The trial of Pearson, charged with the murder of his wife and two children, at Wilmington, will take place at the Court House in East Cambridge, on Tuesday next.

QUINCY POST OFFICE. We are requested to give notice, that hereafter, the Post Office will be closed at eight o'clock, upon Sabbath evenings.

"BAY STATE." This is the name of a very able democratic paper published at Lynn and edited by Lewis Josselyn, Esq., who is a writer of great ability, as its columns will show.

LEGISLATURE. The House have voted, by a large majority, that it is inexpedient to legislate on the subject of providing for the election of members of that body by a plurality of votes. Also that it is inexpedient to legislate on repealing the law requiring the Volunteer Militia to perform Camp duty.

The Senate has been occupied chiefly with a discussion upon the plurality bill to elect members of Congress and Presidential electors.

EDUCATION OF THE PEOPLE. We have received a copy of an Oration delivered before the Onondaga Teachers' Institute at Syracuse (N. Y.), by Theodore Parker. Thank the author for the favor. We have perused the work with great delight. The views of Mr. Parker upon the education of the people are here very fully set forth and with that freedom and boldness of thought and speech which characterizes this truly wonderful man. As a clear and original thinker he has few equals. The work is published by Crosby and Nichols, Boston.

OAK HALL, BOSTON. This far famed establishment is the resort of the million who are in want of clothing. The prices are such as to satisfy the most economical. Mr. Simmons is determined not to be undersold by any one, and his long experience, immense purchases, and facilities for manufacturing, give him decided advantages over competitors.

Youth is a glorious invention. While the girls chase the hours, and you chase the girls, the months seem to dance away 'with down upon their feet.' What a pity our summer is so short, isn't it? lovers become deacons and romps grandmothers.

Mr. James Stickney, of the firm of Brown Lawrence & Stickney, of Boston arrived from California in the Empire City, dropped himself Monday morning in Back Bay. He left his home at 6 o'clock, put his clothes under the Railroad bridge, and was found in six inches of water, with his face downward. He had made a fortune in California, and probably committed the deed in a sudden fit of insanity.

GUARD AGAINST DISEASE OF THE BLOOD. You would wish to avoid all its attendant evil consequences, such as CANCER, GOUT, GRAVEL, RHEUMATISM, LIVER OBSTRUCTIONS, URINARY TROUBLE, &c.!!

It is a well known fact, established by the ablest Physicians, that Diseased or Impure Blood is the source of most wasting and life-destroying Complaints that humanity is subject to. This impurity may be removed through various abuses of the system, inattention to general health, etc.

The late distinguished Dr. Thatcher, of Plymouth, thus writes on this subject:— "How can disease be hoped to yield to any skill, while the blood current courses through the veins loaded with impurity? Sent to the cellular membranes of the lungs, it gains no healthy vitality, and leaves this delicate membrane of our system only indolently affected with its impure touch, and then recourses itself again, till Consumption comes forth developed in its alarming and devastating consequences."

To check this foul destroyer of mankind, and to cleanse the blood thoroughly, this powerful alternative of Dr. Corbett is with confidence given to the public. It will cure Consumption—purify the Blood; clean away all Cancerous Habit—remove all Urinary Aggravation—relieve Constipation of the Bowels—beal all Scrofulous Affections, and eradicate the imbedded taint,—thus giving freshness and healthfulness to the blood, and securing to the system the fullest health.

PROCRASTINATE IS THE THIEF OF TIME.

Delay is dangerous—neglect that cold and rough a few weeks, and the hope of recovery will be lost to you forever. Let not any pecuniary consideration deter you from trying to save your life and health while there is a chance. Consumption is annually sweeping off thousands to the tomb; no disease has baffled the skill of physicians like it; no physician, perhaps, has ever done more for this large class of suffering humanity than Dr. Wistar. An ounce of preventive is worth a pound of cure; therefore, before your lungs become ulcerated, and so diseased, that no human means can save you from an early grave, try in season, try at once, a medicine which has been such infinite value to thousands—obtain a bottle of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, take it, get another if necessary, persevere in using it until you have removed the disease entirely, which if neglected will terminate your life. Be not deceived by quacks, with their imitations and counterfeits; buy none but the genuine and original, which is signed I. BUTTS on the wrapper. None genuine, unless signed I. BUTTS on wrapper. Agents—Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy; Oliver Perkins, Braintree. 2w Feb. 16.

THE IRISH BUCCANIER.
Our oars we ply, when seas run high,
And loud the winds are roaring;
Now down the depths, now up the sky,
On eagle billows soaring!

And when we hail the gentler gale,
With glees our stout hearts glowing,
Abroad we spread the spritied sail,
And catch it while 'tis blowing.

For us enough, or fair or bluff,
Waves calm or wildly foaming,
So we may launch, through smooth or rough,
Adventurously roaming!

Unknown to fear, the buccanier,
Self-crown'd the ocean ranger,
Blow high, blow low, his course will steer,
His element is danger!

MY WATERMELONS.

Where Persia's peach in beauty threw
Her showy petals round,
And Erin's cosy murphies grew
All snugly under ground—

'Twas in a field whose every part
Was free from stone or weed,
This hand had planted just a quart
Of watermelon seed.

'Twas my delight, at morn and night,
To watch their young leaves rise—
They were as freshness to my heart,
As greenness to my eyes.

But, oh! that mortal ever should Find grief within his cup!
The rains descend, and the flood
Did wash my melons up.

In tears I stood as statue still;
With sighs I could but say—
"The watermelon where they are My melons, where are they?"

SONG OF THE NIGHT.

Oh come to your window, dearest,
And list to the lay I sing;
My love for you is sincere—
I love you like every thing!
The moon all my ardor is waking,
As it wakes up the tide of the ocean;
Oh, tell me I am not mistaken,
But that for me you're a notion.

Now, dearest, your dad's in the city,
Come down and open the door,
Oh, do give some token of pity,
Nor let me in anguish implore;
While here on the boards I'm a sitting,
The dew falls fast on my head,
My jacket is getting a wetting,
And the hope in it's e'en a most fled.

Such love as mine you've ne'er known, love,
I've never half told it before;
My heart it shall be your own, love,
If you will just open the door.
I love not for jewels or plate, love,
My passion divides not with self;
And credit me true when I state, love,
No female I love like yourself.

THE UNION.

By H. W. LONGFELLOW.
Thou, too, sail on, O ship of State!
Sail on, O Union, strong and great!
Humanity with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate!
We know what master laid thy keel,
What workman wrought thy ribs of steel,
Who made each mast, and sail, and rope,
What anvils rang, what hammers beat,
In what a forge and what a heat
Were shaped thy anchors and thy keel!
Fear not each sudden sound and shock,
'Tis but the wave and not the rock;
'Tis but the flapping of the sail,
And not a rent made by the gale!
In spite of rock and tempest roar,
In spite of false light on the shore,
Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea!
Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee;
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee—are all with thee!

ANECDOTES.

A gentleman jocosely observed to a young lady, that he was about to be married; but his affections were divided between Miss Mary Brickdust and Miss Betsy Primestuff, and he was at a loss which to choose. "I advise you by all means," said the lady, "to take Miss Brickdust—you want polishing."

A trifling sort of a fellow won the affections of the daughter of a bluff, honest Dutchman of some wealth. On asking the old man for her, he opened with a romantic speech about his being a "poor young man," etc. "Ya, ya," said the old man, "I know all about it; but you is a little too poor—you hash neider money nor character."

Jeffries, pleading at the bar, before he was made a judge, a country fellow giving evidence against his client, pushed the matter very strongly. Jeffries, after his usual way, called out to the fellow, "Hark'ee, you fellow in the leathern doublet! what have you for swearing?" To which the countryman replied, "Faith, sir, if you had no more for living than I have for swearing, you might e'en wear a leathern doublet too!"

"Here's your money, do! Now, you intolerable jackass, tell me why your secondly master wrote me eighteen letters about this little, contemptible sum?" said an exasperated debtor. "I'm sure, sir, I can't tell, sir; but if you'll excuse me, sir, I think it was because seventeen letters didn't fetch the cheese."

"I go through my work," as the needle remarked. "But not till you are hard pushed," was the reply.

Removal.
THE subscriber takes this method to inform his customers and the public, that he has moved to the new building lately erected by Mr. Samuel Copeland, it being more commodious and better adapted to his business; and also, would tender his sincere thanks for the liberal share of patronage which he has received during the past year. His former customers and the public generally are invited to call, where will be found a variety of Stoves, among which is the

embodying in the highest degree of perfection, every essential quality requisite for any latitude. This Stove presents itself externally in a plain dress, with just and admirable proportions, giving it the appearance of a chaste and tastefully made piece of Cabinet Furniture. Internally, the location and capacity of the Fire-Chamber is such as to remove effectually the objections often made to Air-Tight Cook-Stoves for country use. The Oven proves itself to be precisely what its projectors intended it should be, viz: the largest and most perfect ever constructed in a family Stove. The Flues, upon which the great responsibility and reputation of a stove depends, differ from any ever before used, and are of such construction and capacity as to ensure the most perfect draught, without liability to fill up, and are easily kept clean. Nearly one hundred of this stove have been sold the past year and all have given the utmost satisfaction.

Also—A variety of PARLOR, OFFICE and CYLINDER STOVES, together with a good assortment of TIN, BRASS, SHEET IRON and Japaned Ware.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,
it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS
is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove. A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the Well Worth Attending. The Musical Entertainment, to be called in our advertising columns to be one of the most agreeable affairs.

Mr. Russell is a son of William Russell, editor of the Journal of Education, valuable school books, and a most of education. The son has not father in this pleasing and important education; and probably there is in the country a more accomplished chimer than he.

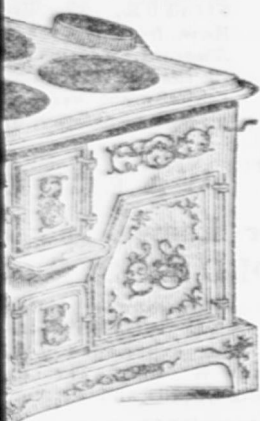

We may, therefore, anticipate in as grand a manner, from the feast of the provided; and we trust that the and the teachers of this town, will avail themselves of the invitation, extended to them.

We understand, also, that the performances of the evening, are to be interest, by the favor of a select group more than once "discussed by our citizens."

The exercises will commence at 7

SINGING SCHOOL.

The meeting on Wednesday evening last, in Lyceum Hall, to consider the expediency of a school for instruction in the rudiments of Vocal Music
was well attended considering the limited notice.

Remarks were made by Messrs. Thayer, George Newcomb, Cummings, Benj. Curtis and others, highly favorable to the object. Mr. Thayer states that he had made inquiry in Boston, and is satisfied that Mr. Newell is an accomplished teacher, and also, a gentleman. The arguments to do away the prevailing error, that if equal pains were taken to teach the young the rudiments and practice of vocal music, as there is in reading, writing and arithmetic
etc., the same success would attend the instruction;
and as all by perseverance, can become acceptable singers. The Swiss were all singers; and noted as the most brave, united and happy Republic in Europe. Their evening songs and sacred hymns are echoed "from the mountain tops and vales," inspiring youth and age with Patriotism and Piety.
Would it not be well to "do likewise?" The Germans mostly are singers.

Mr. Cummings and Newcomb, by request, agreed to head subscription papers, and take the names of those wishing to attend the School. Mr. Thayer was under the necessity of leaving before, but will,
doubtless take the names of all who apply to him.
The subscriber has a paper.

Another meeting of all interested, parents and children, young and old, to complete the arrangements, hear the reports of the Committee etc, will be held, next TUESDAY EVENING, March 5th, at half past six o'clock, in the Lyceum Hall. Let all, especially, who wish to attend the School be present at this meeting. Will our Ministers, Superintendents and Teachers of Sabbath and day Schools, and all others, please use their influence in favor of the object, and attend the meeting. T. K.

WELL WORTH ATTENDING. The "Elocutionary and Musical Entertainment," to which attention is called in our advertising columns to day, promises to be one of the most agreeable affairs of the season.

Mr. Russell is a son of William Russell, formerly editor of the Journal of Education, author of many valuable school books, and a most successful teacher of elocution. The son has not fallen behind his father in this pleasing and important department of education; and probably there is not at present in the country a more accomplished teacher and declaimer than he.

We may, therefore, anticipate instruction as well as gratification, from the feast of taste that has been provided; and we trust that the present clergy
and the teachers of this town, will not hesitate to avail themselves of the invitation, which has been extended to them.

We understand, also, that the Elocutionary performances of the evening, are to be enhanced in interest, by the favor of a select Glee Club, who have more than once "discoursed exquisite music" to our citizens.

The exercises will commence at 7 o'clock.

THOUGHTS FOR A YOUNG MAN, by Horace Mann.
This is a lecture delivered before the "Boston Mercantile Library Association" on its twenty-ninth anniversary in November last. It is a production worthy of the great and philanthropic mind in which it originated. Few, very few, books are calculated to do so much good. The father who wishes well to his son, and to the reputation he shall himself leave behind at death, should place it in possession of his sons "alongside" the Bible. It is full of the best of precepts, most happily expressed. Some means should be devised for placing a copy of it in the hands of every young man in the town, in the State, and in all this great Republic. This Congressional District may well feel proud to be represented in the National Legislature by Horace Mann.

We have found that the accounts are generally well kept, and properly vouched. Much labor and difficulty is found in separating accounts, relating to the Almshouse establishment, from those relating to other town expenses, as the accounts kept by persons through the year for different town purposes, are blended together on their bills: which we think would be avoided by having them kept entirely separate; one against the Overseers of the poor, and Surveyors of highways, and the other against the Selectmen and Assessors.

NEW ROUTE—MAIL AGENCY. We understand that John Goddard Clark, son of Rev. Orange Clark, D. D. of this town, has been recently appointed Mail Agent upon the route between Boston and Fall River, and is now discharging the duties of that office. We consider the appointment one of merit, knowing Mr. Clark to be a young man of much ability, and most exemplary in character.

OUR LEGISLATORS. During the past week, Congress their have been several speeches on California and the slave question.

In General Court, the Senate have defeated the plurality bill, while in the House, little business of an interesting character to the public has been transacted.

The Georgia Legislature have passed a bill to prevent the assembling of negroes for religious worship, unless conducted by white persons, and to prevent the licensing of negro preachers in certain counties.

Two young ladies, have become regular students in the Medical Department of the Memphis (Tenn.) Institute.

No less than eleven newspapers in Canada have openly espoused the cause of annexation to the United States.

The tonnage of Cohasset, is, according to a list in the Hingham Journal, 4,202 tons, consisting mostly of schooners, ranging from twenty-three to ninety-eight tons each.

A New England Art Union, similar to the New York Art Union, is to be established in Boston. Edward Everett, Franklin Dexter, and H. W. Longfellow are among its managers.

The beneficial results of industry, simple food, and regular habits, are seen in the fact that the Society of United Brethren (Shakers), at Enfield (Conn.) numbers two hundred and sixty nine and not a death has occurred among them for fourteen months.

The National Intelligencer has lately published six or seven columns of extracts from the Southern press, all denouncing the movements of the Congressional disunionists.

The Reformed Gambler "Green," has been released at New York—neither of the charges made against him having been sustained.

A new post office has been established at the village of Cohasset, in West Bridgewater. Martin Alger is the Postmaster.

The steamer Mayflower will again resume her trips between Hingham and Boston, on the fifth inst.

Henry Grinnell, a New York merchant, has submitted a proposition to the Secretary of the Navy to equip and fit out two vessels for the purpose of prosecuting the search after Sir John Franklin, upon condition only that the government will lend the sanction of its countenance by appointing proper officers to command them. This offer has been received with favor.

In Wisconsin, a wife recovered one hundred dollars damages of a liquor dealer for selling rum to her husband. Liquor dealers in that State, have to give bonds to pay for all injury growing out of their traffic.

William E. Knowlton, on whom sentence of death was passed by the Supreme Court of this State, for the murder of the girl Prudence S. Arnold, at Uxbridge has had his sentence commuted to imprisonment for life.

Snow fell in Western New York on the 14th and 15th. In Rochester (N. Y.) the 16th, the snow was nearly a foot in depth, and the sleighing good.

POETRY.

"EARLY TO BED AND EARLY TO RISE."

"Early to bed and early to rise"—
Aye, note it down in your train,
For it helpeth to make the foolish wise,
And uproots the weeds of pain,
Ye who are walking on thorns of care,
Who sigh for a softer bower,
Try what can be done in the morning sun,
And make use of the early hour.

Full many a day forever is lost
By delaying its work till to-morrow;
Ten minutes of sleep have often cost
Long years of fruitless sorrow.
And ye who would win the lasting wealth
Of content and peaceful power,
Ye who would couple Labor and Health,
Must begin at an early hour.

We make bold promises of Time,
Yet, alas! too often break them;
We mock at the wings of the King of kings,
And think we can overtake them,
But why loiter away the prime of the day,
Knowing that clouds may lower?
It is not later to make late's day
In the beam of the early hour?

Nature herself ever shows her best
Of gems to be gazed at the lark,
When the spangles of light on Earth's green breast
Put out the stars of the dark.
If we love the purest pearl of the dew,
And the richest breath of the flower,
If our spirits would greet the fresh and the sweet,
Go forth in the early hour.

Oh! pleasure and rest are more easily found
When we start through the Morning's gate,
To sun up our figures, or plough on the ground,
And weave on the ends of Fate
The eye looketh bright, and the heart keepeth light,
And man bethinks the conqueror's power,
When, ready and brave, he chains Time as his slave
By the help of the early hour.

REASONS FOR RISIBILITY.

Sweet coz! I'm happy when I can
I'm merry while I may,
For life's at most a narrow span,
At best a winter's day.
If we could make the sunbeam wear
A brighter, warmer hue,
The evening star shine out more fair,
The blue sky look more blue,
Then I should be a graver man—
But since 'tis not the way,
Sweet coz! I'm happy when I can,
And merry when I may!

If sighs could make us win the less,
Perchance I were not glad—
If mourning were the sage's dress,
My garb should then be sad;
But since the angels' wings are white,
And even the young saints smile—
Since virtue wears a brow of light
And vice a robe of guile—
Since laughter is not under ban,
Nor gladness clad in grey—
Sweet coz! I'm happy when I can,
And merry when I may!

I've seen a bishop dance and reel,
And a sinner fast and pray,
A knave at the top of fortune's wheel,
And a good man cast away!
Wine I have seen your grave ones quaff,
Might set our feet afloat,
But I never heard a hearty laugh
From out a villain's throat;
And I never knew a faithful man
Make and a young maid's day—
So, coz! I'm happy when I can,
And merry when I may!

ANECDOTES.

"How is your son to-day," asked a friend of a broker. "Very ill," replied the old gentleman, struggling to maintain composure, "he's coming down his agitated features; very ill, I would not give ten per cent for his chance for life."

A culprit being asked what he had to say why sentence of death should not be pronounced upon him, replied that he had nothing to say, as there had been quite too much said already.

"Wife, I am going to leave you. The doctor tells me that I can live but a few hours at the most! I shall soon be in Heaven!"
"What! you won't be in Heaven? You?—You'll never be nearer Heaven than you are now? you old traitor!"

"Dolphus?" hoarsely growled the old man—
"Dolphus, bring me my cane, and let me larrup the old trolop once more before I die!"

A man, who was reprimanded by a divine for swearing, replied that he did not see any harm in it. "No harm in it?" said the minister, "why, do you not know the commandment, 'Swear not at all?'" "I do not swear at all," replied the man, "I only swear at those who annoy me."

Said one merchant, "I have done business ten years, and not spent five dollars in advertising." Said another, "I have done business five years, and spent one tenth of my profits in advertising and have made more money than you have made in ten."

A certain lawyer had his portrait taken in his favorite attitude—standing with one hand in his pocket. His friends and clients all went to see it, and every body exclaimed—
"Oh, how like it! it's the very picture of him!"
An old farmer only dissented—"Tain't like!"
Exclaimed every body—"Just show us wherein 'tain't like!"
"Tain't—no tain't," responded the farmer.
"Don't you see," he said, "he has got his hand in his own pocket; 'twould be as like again if he had it in some body else's!"

An excellent old lady, in describing a fearful event of her life, when she was two away with in a two-horse vehicle, wound up with saying that she "put the firmest reliance on Providence until the breaching broke, and then she gave up."

Removal.

THE subscriber takes this method to inform his customers and the public, that he has moved to the new building lately erected by Mr. Samuel Copeland, it being more commodious and better adapted to his business; and also, would tender his sincere thanks for the liberal share of patronage which he has received during the past year. His former customers and the public generally are invited to call, where they will be found a variety of Stoves, among which is the

New England Air-Tight,

embodying, in the highest degree of perfection, every essential quality requisite for any latitude. This Stove presents itself as a plain stove, with just and admirable proportions, giving it the appearance of a chaste and tastefully made piece of Cabinet Furniture. Intrinsically, the location and capacity of the Fire Chamber is such as to remove effectually the objections often made to Air-Tight Cook-Stoves, for country use. The Oven proves itself to be precisely what its projectors intended it should be, viz. the largest and most perfect ever constructed in a family Stove. The Flues, upon which the great responsibility and reputation of a stove depends, differ from any ever before used, and are of such construction, and capacity as to ensure the most perfect draught, without liability to fill up, and are easily kept clean. Nearly one hundred of this stove have been sold the past year and all have given the utmost satisfaction.

CHARLES HOLMES.

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven, while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers, from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,

it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS

is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and Durability, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.
A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the

Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory

of the Agent in this town.
E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIST, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

—ALSO—

to his already WELL-SELECTED STOCK OF GOODS. Those in want of any thing in his line will find it to their advantage to give him a call. They may be sure to be

Fairly and Honorably dealt with.

Gentlemen wishing to have their Garments CUT AND MADE in a FASHIONABLE and SUPERIOR STYLE, by the VERY BEST OF WORKMEN, are invited to give him a trial.

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

Those wishing to purchase Ready Made Clothing FOR CASH, can get them AS WELL CUT, BETTER MADE, of BETTER MATERIALS, and CONSIDERABLY CHEAPER, than at any Store that can be named in the city.

A Good Assortment of Boys' Clothes on hand.

In fact every article of wearing apparel, except Boots, can be obtained at the QUINCY HALL CLOTHING DEPOT.
Quincy, Jan. 26.

The Circassian Oil.

THIS OIL has now obtained a celebrity worthy its high intrinsic merits. The sales have greatly increased and in public estimation it supercedes all other preparations for the HAIR. The proprietor is constantly receiving testimonials of its great efficacy in restoring the hair in cases of baldness, and it has also been signally successful in curing the various scrofulous affections to which the head and hair is subject. Patients will find the Circassian Oil an article of incalculable benefit to children, in laying the foundation of a

HAV'N'T THE CH

It was house cleaning time, colored woman at work scrubbing paint.

"Polly is going," said one of the twilight began to fall.

"Very well. Tell her that to-morrow."

"I think she would like to be for to-day's work," said the girl.

SINGING SCHOOL.

Mr. Newell will commence his school for instruction in the rudiments of vocal music, next Friday evening, 15th inst., at seven o'clock precisely.

The school was appointed next Tuesday evening, but the Methodist Fair is to be held that evening, and Mr. Newell altered the appointment to Friday evening.

Shall the expense of this school be paid by a general subscription, and the school be free for all our citizens who wish to learn to sing, or shall the expense be divided equally among the scholars? There was not time to settle this important question, the last evening. Will the parents and citizens interested, please attend the above named evening, hear the singing, decide this point, and aid in starting the school, which bids fair to be a blessing to the town. Mr. Newell will bring a supply of singing books.

The arguments to do away the prevailing error that only a few can sing, proved that if equal pains were taken to teach children to sing, as there are to read, write, etc., the same success would attend the instruction; and as all, with perseverance, can learn to read and write; so all can learn to sing.

SATURDAY, MARCH 9 1859

John A. Green, Editor.

JAMES W. BARTER.

It is with saddened feelings that we announce the death of the individual whose name is placed at the head of this article. Our acquaintance commenced with him, Sept. 21st, 1838, and has continued, with the exception of about nine months, to the period of his sickness and death. A fortnight ago, to-day, he was with us, apparently in health, buoyant in spirits, and performed his accustomed duties; and this afternoon his mortal remains are consigned to the place appointed for all the living. Such are the mandates of an All-wise Providence. Our friend, we believe, was a native of Kennebunk, Maine, and the only child of an aged mother who survives him, and destiny decreed that she should not be present to smooth the pillow of death, and cheer him with a mother's hope of a happier home beyond the troubled scenes of earth.

In our humble judgment few men have left us who will be more deeply mourned than the individual under notice. For ourselves the heart giveth utterance, that his equal will not soon be found again. We may freely say, and it was derived from daily knowledge for more than eleven years, that his excellent judgment—strict integrity—love of truth and justice—habits of promptitude—feelings for the oppressed in every circumstance—and possessing every other essential of a true Christian, he has secured a large circle of friends who deeply mourn his sudden departure. Words fail to portray the shining virtues that cluster around his name—let friends remember and imitate his blessed qualities, and so live that when they too shall go they may meet him in the happy home prepared for the honest and perfect of earth.

His funeral, we understand, will take place this afternoon, at three o'clock from the late residence of Dr. Thomas Phipps, in School street. Friends, etc., are invited, without further notice.

Voted.—To adjourn to the first Monday in April next, at one o'clock in the afternoon.

THE LYCEUM.

Rev. Dr. Gannett's lecture upon "Conversation" delivered before this institution upon Thursday evening of last week, was admirable. He considered it a very useful and truthful address. The subject was happily conceived and elegantly presented. His ideas were rational, and his diction chaste.

The "art of conversation" was considered worthy the most assiduous culture. This idea was developed with much power and beauty. The effects of proper conversation upon the politics of the day were regarded important. The influence of woman by means of the cultivation of this noble art was thought to be greatly augmented. A woman's tongue is mightier than her "tongue." Hence the necessity of education to control its energies and render its articulate language elegant and distinct. "Words fitly spoken, are like apples of gold in pictures of silver."

Some of the most enviable and felicitous remarks were made by the speaker upon the occupation of gossip.

This miserable custom so universally prevalent in any community was properly denounced and pungently satirized. This was just right; such contemptible lives as gossips live, cannot be too severely reprimanded by any Christian teacher in any Christian society.

"Oh, for a scourging pen, a scathing lash
To play the backs of fools," who talk such trash.

Having shown the importance of conversation as an art, the lecturer next proceeded to explain the pre-requisites to its success. Judicious reading, and patient reflection upon such reading, were the foundation of the art. Reading, stores the mind with ideas, and thought gives to those ideas arrangement and form. It makes knowledge permanent and substantial.

The entire address, was of a high order of merit, calculated to do much good, and simple enough, to be understood by the most common mind. It was beautiful in its simplicity and "plainness of speech." We consider it worthy the man who pronounced it, a person, no less eminent in goodness, than in the more dazzling popular splendor of a high literary sermon.

TO FRUIT GROWERS. Now is the time to select your Fruit and Ornamental Trees, Shrubs, Vines, &c., for spring planting. The Nurseries of S. Walker, Esq., Roxbury, are among the best in New England, at which you can obtain the very best of all the various and choice kinds. Mr. W. has long been celebrated in this department. See his advertisement in this paper.

ALTERED BANK BILLS. The Plymouth Bank two have been altered to tens well executed. The vignette of the alteration: Landing of the Pilgrims in the centre of the bill; that of the genuine ten in the left hand, with a large Y in the centre.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. At the recent stockholders' adjourned meeting, the investigating Committee were not able to make their report, and further time was granted them. The meeting adjourned till Tuesday, April 16th, at ten o'clock in the forenoon.

FOURTH DISTRICT. The attempt to elect a member of Congress from Middlesex District has again proved a failure. The whig candidate leads J. G. Palfry (free soiler) several hundred votes.

MILITARY HUMBUR. The Court Martial, for the trial of Brigadier General Dunham, of Abington, on charges preferred by ex Maj. Gen. Howe, has commenced in Boston, at the State House. The Court consists of Maj. Gen. Hobbs, President; Brig. Gen. Wilson, of 3d Brigade; Brig. Gen. Cook, of 5th Brigade; Col. Andrews, of 6th Reg't Light Infantry; Col. Jones, of 1st Reg't Artillery.

POL. DOC. Our kind acknowledgments are due to the Hon. E. Cazenave, one of the Senators from Plymouth County, for his attention in forwarding pamphlets of importance.

BOSTON. Clothing and furnishing goods have never been bought lower than they are now selling at Oak Hall, Boston. Its immense assortment is selling rapidly, and its low-price system is quite popular.

THE MATCHMAKER, OR FAMILY MANOEUVRES, by author of "The Jilt," "Marrying Man," "Warning to Wives," etc., etc. Published by H. Long & Brother, New York.

This excellent little novel has just been received by us, and we feel quite refreshed by its perusal. The popular author of "The Jilt," has rendered this last production, "The Matchmaker," as earnest, brilliant and recherche, as any of his previous efforts.

We are among those who delight to eat occasionally of the "forbidden fruit" of Romance, notwithstanding the eloquent homilies of moralists and the grave denunciations of novel-reading.

When a rich dish of intellectual viands is "served up" to us, swimming in the cream of elegance, and odoriferous with the pungent spices of taste, our heart is no physician warning our Sancho Panza appetite to taste not. The Matchmaker, has furnished us with a feast of this description. It is a capital burlesque upon the intriguing character. The "arts and manoeuvres" of that most despicable and ridiculous specimen of humanity, a matchmaking mother. We admire the contrast in character between Ellen and Augusta. The portraits of Julian, Old Grunter, Fizin, and the money-loving Dr. Jobbs are drawn with admirable effect.

In the "Matchmaker," as in the "Jilt," we observe a thorough knowledge of the female heart. Its caprices, susceptibilities, vanities and virtues, are blended as beautifully as the magic tints which shadow forth the elegant conceptions of Titian. We dismiss this pleasant little "novel," with the remark, that those readers, whose intellectual impulses ever lead them

"From grave to gay, from lively to severe," cannot fail of being entertained for a few leisure hours, by a perusal of the "The Matchmaker."

TAXES. For want of Room, we are compelled to defer publishing the Collectors notice of delinquent tax payers.

Cymon of the Boston Pathfinder, gives the following specimen of Negro Eloquence, uttered by one of their "Collored Brudderen" at one of the towns in New Hampshire. Speaking of a reformed infidel he ended his effusion thus:—"De last word dat dis dying man was heard to say:—de last word he was know to speak:—de last word he was noticed to utter:—de last word he ever pronounced:—de last syllable he ever breaved; de last idea he ever ejaculated:—yes, my breddren, de berry last word he ever was know to breav forth, sound or articulate—was—g-l-o-r-y!"

There are looking glasses for the face, but none for the mind. That defect must then be supplied by a serious reflection upon one's self.

NEWS FOR THE SICK.

Whitesville, N. Y. July 10, 1848.
MR. SETH W. FOWLE, Dear Sir:—It is with pleasure I write you this certificate, stating my experience in the use of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. In November last I was taken with a severe cough. My lungs were much affected, so much that it was with difficulty I could breathe. Hearing of your Balsam, I procured and took part of one bottle; and to my better astonishment, my lungs were freed and my cough cured. I am happy to recommend this Balsam of Wild Cherry to the public as one of the best medicines for coughs and colds I ever used.

WM. SWIFT.

N. B. Remember it is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, with the signature of I. BUTTS on the wrapper, that perform such cures.

(From the Boston Daily Times.)

A certificate case is one of a very remarkable character, we comply with pleasure. Certainly, well tested cases of cures of severe diseases by the use of a particular medicine, should be made known to the public for the benefit of others similarly affected.

None's genuine unless signed I BUTTS on the wrapper.

Ladies' Fair.

DOUGH FACES TAKE NOTICE!

The scheming slaveholders are at it again,
Preparing their net to entangle the free,
Look out you dough faces your labor is vain,
Except you stand ready to supply the knee.
The leaves and the fishes are plenty you know,
The Southrons' may give you a crust and a sprat,
For this you're expected most humbly to bow,
To earn all you get and be thankful for that.

Cringe low to your masters you little-souled knaves,
The brags of the South have great terrors in store,
They threaten to have you no longer for slaves;
Bend lower ye spaniels, bend lower still lower.
O where is the spirit your fathers could boast,
The spirit that tyranny dared to defy,
The men who would singly contend with a host,
For Liberty bleed or for Liberty die.

Their honor was sacred, their pledges were sure,
And firmly for freedom undaunted they stood,
But recants the cause of their fathers' abjure,
And batter for gold what was purchased with blood.
The curses of Freedom shall rest on his name,
Who basely deserts her for lust or place,
The finger of scorn and the livery of shame,
Shall point out his dwelling and signal his race.

Old, steady New England, to you it belongs,
Your home and your country from traitors to save,
By Liberty's hopes and by Liberty's wrongs,
Swear ne'er to acknowledge a man for a slave.
F. M. Adlington, Weymouth.

SONG.

Ye mighty brags of Southern States,
With pepper-heads and brazen faces,
Who swear as sure as death and rates,
You'll cut and leave the Union traces.

Why don't you do as oft before,
You swore you would in words so daring,
Your threats begin to be a bore,
And we to doubt your gallant bearing.
Your puppies all set up a yell,
Dissolve the Union! Blood and thunder!
Your bull dog rushes in pell mell,
To bark them down and make fools wonder.

Your man of Clay with head of brass,
Could never be so great an ass,
As not to know for well he might,
The puppies dare not risk a fight.
Your Foot who would not budge a foot,
May stand and stamp like hunted mutton;
But start a leaf from Freedom's Root,
His courage is not worth a button.

The farce begins before the play,
New tricks are tried for speculation,
But traitors you will rue the day,
You forge new fetters for the nation.
The very tools which you employ,
May sink the cause you're now defending,
That same "Old Coon," your ancient boy,
Is now your Dagon pillars bending.

Conviction flashes on his mind,
He grinds no more, the word is spoken,
And soon will all our depots find,
Their own the only yoke unbroken.
F. M. Adlington, Weymouth.

"THE FISHERMAN'S SONG."

Come, messmates! 'tis time to hoist our sail;
It's fair as fair can be;
And the ebbing tide and the northerly gale
Will carry us out to sea.
So down with the boat from the beach so steep,
We must part with the setting sun;
For ere we can spread our nets in the deep,
We've a weary way to run.

As through the night watches we drift about,
We'll think of the times that are fled,
And of him who once called other fishermen out
To be fishers of men instead.
Like us, they had hunger and cold to bear;
Rough weather like us, they knew;
And he who guarded them by his care
Full often was with them too!

'Twas the fourth long watch of a stormy night,
And but little way they had made,
When he came o'er the waters and stood in their sight,
And their hearts were sore afraid:
But he cheer'd their spirits, and said, 'Tis I,
And then they could fear no harm;
And though we cannot behold him nigh,
He is guarding us still with His arm.

ANECDOTES.

"Sambo, what you get dat watch you wear to meet-in-lase Sunday?"
"How you know I had watch?"
"Bekase I seed de chain hang out de pocket in front."
"Go-way nigger! spose you see halter round my neck, you tink der is horse inside ob me?"
"Jim did you ever double the Cape of Good Hope?"
"I expect I have."
"When?"
"Last night when I put my arm around de cape that belongs to de dress of the young lady that I have good hopes of making Mrs. Dusenberry of."

It is said, that a young clergyman called on Dr. Dwight for advice as to the best method of treating a very difficult and abstract point of mental philosophy, upon preparing a sermon. "I cannot give you information on the subject," the doctor replied; "I am not familiar with such topics, I leave them for young men."

At a training down east, after an order was given to "return ramrods," one of the soldiers broke from the line, and was off at full split. "Hallo," bawled the commanding officer, "where are you going?" "Down to Squire Muggins, to return the ramrod I borrowed of him. You said return ramrods."

Removal.

THE subscriber takes this method to inform his customers and the public, that he has moved to the new building lately erected by Mr. Samuel Copland, it being more commodious and better adapted to his business; and also, would tender his sincere thanks for the liberal share of patronage which he has received during the past year. His former customers and the public generally are invited to call, where will be found a variety of Stoves, among which is the embodying, in the highest degree of perfection, every essential quality requisite for any latitude. This Stove presents itself externally in a plain dress, with just and admirable proportions, giving it the appearance of a chaste and tastefully made piece of Cabinet Furniture. Intrinsically, the location and capacity of the Fire Chamber is such as to remove effectually the objections often made to Air-Tight Cook-Stoves for country use. The Oven proves itself to be precisely what its projectors intended it should be, viz: the largest and most perfect ever constructed in a family Stove. The Flues, upon which the great responsibility and reputation of a stove depends, differ from any ever before used, and are of such construction and capacity as to ensure the most perfect draught, without liability to fill up, and are easily kept clean. Nearly one hundred of this stove have been sold the past year and all have given the utmost satisfaction.

New England Air-Tight,

Also—A variety of PARLOR, OFFICE and CYLINDER STOVES, together with a good assortment of TIN, BRITANIA, SHEET IRON and

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of its heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,

it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS

is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove. It may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and Durability, over any other Air-Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.

A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the

Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory

of the Agent in this town.
E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIST'S, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The School Committee of Quincy, in compliance with the requisition of the laws of the Commonwealth, herewith present to their fellow citizens their Annual Report for the year ending February, 1850.

Rev. Stat., chap. 105, sect. 1.—The School Committees shall annually make a detailed report of the condition of the several public schools in their towns, designating particular improvements and defects in the methods or means of education, and stating such facts and suggestions in relation thereto, and in their opinion will best promote the interests and increase the usefulness of said schools.

The committee have felt deeply sensible of the responsibilities of their position the past year, and have endeavored honestly and faithfully to discharge the duties of the post assigned to them. As far as freedom from other duties would permit, they have kept a watchful eye over the schools, and have visited them regularly at the close of each quarter, besides other visits. The information thus obtained of their condition and improvement, they are now prepared to lay before you.

CONDITION OF SCHOOLS.

In reporting the condition of the Public Schools, the committee follow the order in which they were last examined; beginning with the

NORTH DISTRICT.

Robert Vose, Jr., Teacher.

The number of pupils belonging to the school in this district, has varied considerably
during the year. During a part of the summer term, the whole number belonging to the school was seventy-one. The average attendance fifty-five; but a much larger number was in daily attendance for several weeks. To accommodate them, it was found necessary to procure a number of new seats, and even with this addition, the school house, which is the smallest in town, was found to be quite inadequate to the wants of the district.

This inconvenience was however but temporary, the school having since been reduced to about its usual numbers. The whole number for the winter term is forty-two. The average attendance is thirty-five. Being a reduction of twenty-nine scholars. This school is still backward, but is making improvement. The teacher deserves praise for his faithful and persevering efforts. It is the opinion of the committee that this school has made as good proficiency, as all circumstances considered, it were reasonable to expect.

EAST DISTRICT.

William C. Davol, Teacher.

During the summer term, the school in this district was under the care of Miss E. A. Freeman. It did not make that degree of advancement which the committee had reason to expect. The whole number of scholars belonging to the school this term was thirty-two. Average attendance twenty-five.

The winter term was commenced by Mr.
Davol, its present teacher, and under his care
the school has been making evident improvement both in order and scholarship. His method of instruction is very thorough, and Mr.
Davol has succeeded in giving to this school an impulse, which it is to be hoped it may never lose. The whole number of scholars for winter term is thirty-seven. Average attendance 30 21-32.

QUINCY POINT DISTRICT.

Grammar School—George Newcomb, Teacher.

The committee believe that there has been no falling off in the proficiency of this school during the past year. The whole number belonging to this school is ninety-two. Average attendance during the winter, 72 81-100. Present at the last examination eighty-seven. The exercises of the school at this examination

were very interesting, and exhibited a degree of improvement satisfactory to the committee.
This school ranks well with the other schools of this town. It has not the uniform character which belongs to some of them, owing to the disparity in the ages of its pupils; there being no intermediate school between this and the primary department.

The teacher deserves commendation for his untiring zeal and devotion to the moral and intellectual improvement of his pupils.

Primary School—Miss Mary Ann Wood,
Teacher.

This school has suffered some during the past year by changing teachers. It was taught through the summer by Miss Brown with her usual good success. The number of her pupils was eighty-two. Average attendance fifty-five.
She left on account of ill health, and her place
has been supplied the present winter by Miss Wood. The children, who were much attached to their former teacher, have not readily conformed to this change; and the present deficiency in the order of the school is to be attributed mainly to this account. The committee have confidence in the present teacher, and believe that the future progress of her school will be satisfactory. Already the school stands higher in Geography and Arithmetic than at any former period.

WEST DISTRICT.

Grammar School—Stephen Morse, Jr., Teacher.

The whole number of scholars belonging to this school is eighty-seven. Average attendance seventy. The number present at the last examination eighty-two. The improvement of this school during the year has been highly satisfactory. The teacher's method of instruction is skillful and thorough, as was closely evinced by the great familiarity of his pupils
with the principles of arithmetic and of elocution. He has labored with great success, and has kindled up an interest in the minds of his scholars, which promises the best results. This school is surpassed by no other in town, in the degree of improvement made during the year.

Intermediate School—Miss Wealthy Holmes,
Teacher.

This school is favored with a superior teacher,
and her pupils discover the marks of thorough instruction. The improvement here has been most gratifying. Last year this school was reported "low and unpromising;" it has now gained a good standing among the schools
of this town, and is fast rising to excellence.
The whole number of scholars belonging to this school is now 73. Average attendance 53.
Present at the last examination, 65.

Primary School—Miss Mary E. Vose, Teacher.

This school has also made good improvement during the year. It has formerly been very backward. It is now in an orderly and prosperous condition. The children appear happy and interested in the studies, and the light of intelligence beams on every countenance. Much praise is due to the present teacher, by whose untiring exertions this school has been elevated to its present standing. The number of children now belonging to this school is 74. Average attendance 44. Present at the last examination, 51.

The Committee take pleasure in acknowledging the valuable services of the teachers
connected with the schools in this district.
They are deserving the thanks of the District,
as well as the commendation of the Committee for the fidelity and success with which they have labored in elevating the character of these schools.

CENTRE DISTRICT.

Grammar School—A. Edwin Bigelow, Teacher.

The whole number belonging to this school is 97. Average attendance 60. Present at the last examination, 67. The teacher of this school has labored hard, but not with that success which would be gratifying to himself and to the Committee. He has been successful in other schools, but in this, many things have operated unfavorably. The school has suffered much the past year from irregular attendance, which is always adverse to good scholarship. The most striking defect witnessed at the last examination, was a want of life and spirit in the reading and other exercises. The books looked remarkably well, and some of the specimens of improvement were not surpassed by any school in town.

To elevate this school to the rank which it ought to hold among the schools of this town,
the inhabitants of the district must take a friendly interest in its progress, and support the influence of the teacher over the minds of their children. The present teacher has persevered and done what he could.

Intermediate School—Miss Eliza J. Gerry,
Teacher.

The present number of scholars belonging to this school is 94. Average attendance 49.
This school has taken a higher rank the present year than at any former period. All the classes have made marked improvement, and the teacher is deserving of great praise. In reading, the vowel and consonant elements and the principles of elocution have received special attention; the results of which are very apparent. In geography and arithmetic, the school has made great proficiency.

Primary School—Miss Sophia G. Parshley,
Teacher.

The number of scholars belonging to this school is 83. Average attendance 52. Of the order and improvement of this school, the Committee, can speak in terms of high commendation. The present teacher has been eminently successful; and her school is a blessing to the district, and an honor to herself.

The Committee would suggest to the inhabitants of this district, how much they might improve the appearance of their school house,
by planting forest-trees around the yard which is the play-ground of their children. It would benefit their children both in body and mind,
and be ornamental to the neighborhood.

SOUTH DISTRICT.

Grammar School—Charles A. Cummings,
Teacher.

The whole number belonging to this school is 125. Average attendance 85. Present at the last examination 95. This school is remarkable for its good order and thorough scholarship. Mr. Cummings has labored the past year with more than his usual success. His scholars in all their exercises give evidence of a high degree of improvement, especially in arithmetic. This is the most advanced school in town, creditable alike to the teacher and pupils.

Intermediate School—Miss Emily A. Adams,
Teacher.

Whole number belonging to the school —
Average attendance —. This school is in a highly prosperous condition. The order, courtesy, and kindness, which prevail here, throw a charm over this whole school. Ready and noiseless at every signal from the teacher, their discipline seemed almost perfect. Their success in study is also truly commendable; all the classes appeared well. The present teacher, who has had charge of the school for the last six months, is highly approved.

Primary School—Mrs. Susan Burrell, Teacher.

This school gives evidence of thorough instruction. Mrs. Burrell is a tried teacher, having labored in this school for many years, with uniform success. Her school usually takes the first rank among the Primaries, and never was more deserving of it than it is the present year.
Her first class merited, and received, from the visitors present at the examination, high commendation. This school is suffering great inconvenience for the want of a larger schoolroom. The school numbers 106. Average attendance 40. Greatest number present at one time 76. These are crowded together in an apartment quite too small for the health of so many children. Besides the school is increasing every year; the seats are all filled; and there is no space for more.

The three schools in this district, hold a high rank. They are an ornament to the district, and an honor to the town.

In concluding this report of the condition of the schools, the Committee feel warranted in saying, that at no time have the schools of this town stood higher in their estimation than at the present moment. Their order is very good
—in several of the schools quite remarkable.
And what is better still, the moral as well as the mental culture of the young, is receiving an increased share of attention. It is but just to say, that the efforts of our teachers to deliver your children from vice, and to train them
to habits of virtue, are deserving of great praise.
But teachers must be aided by the influence of parents and of home, to enable them to give to our public schools that high moral tone which is the crowning work of education. Another very encouraging feature in our schools the present year, is the degree of interest manifested in them by the parents and friends in the districts. This has been seen in the large number of visitors who have attended the winter examinations of all the schools in town.
Our school-rooms have been literally crowded.
And their attendance in many, if not all of the schools, we doubt not, has been richly rewarded to themselves, while to the teachers and to the Committee, it has been a cause of heartfelt joy.

HIGH SCHOOL.

It is the opinion of your Committee that the time has come to extend our educational resources; and they therefore recommend to the immediate consideration of the town, the requistions of the laws of the Commonwealth.

By the Rev. Stat., chap. 23, sect. 5, it is required that "Every town containing five hundred families or householders, shall, besides the schools prescribed in the preceding section, maintain a school, to be kept by a master of competent ability and good morals, who shall,
in addition to the branches of learning before mentioned, give instruction in the history of the United States, book-keeping, surveying, geometry, algebra; and such last mentioned school shall be kept for the benefit of all the inhabitants of the town, ten months at least, exclusive of vacations, in each year, and at such convenient place, or alternately at such places in the town, as the said inhabitants at their annual meeting shall determine, and in every town containing four thousand inhabitants, the said master shall, in addition to all the branches of instruction before required in this chapter, be competent to instruct in the Latin and Greek languages, and general history, rhetoric and logic.

The 60th section of the same chapter provides, that,—"If any towns shall refuse or neglect to raise money for the support of schools
as required by this chapter, such town shall forfeit a sum, equal to twice the highest sum,
which had ever before been voted for the support of schools therein."

Your Committee would respectfully submit to the town, whether it is not consistent with a true and proper regard to the welfare of the rising generation, to comply with the wholesome provisions of the statute just quoted.
There are scholars enough already prepared,
and waiting to step in and fill up such a school, whenever it shall be opened. The Committee have ascertained that there are at least, sixty in the Grammar Schools of this town, who are in a situation to receive the immediate and direct benefits of such a school. A school in which they may follow any studies desired to fit them for the pursuits which they are designed to follow, and to qualify them to fill and adorn any station in life.

In carrying out the provisions of the statute,
our Public Schools would be made adequate to the entire wants of the community. This would draw around them the interests and hopes of all our citizens, and give to them a life-inspiring influence. We should then have all the grades of schools which are needed for the full operation of the Massachusetts System of Education. No argument is needed to establish the benefits of this system; and the Committee feel that they have done their duty
in calling the attention of their fellow citizens to this subject.

Should this report be accepted, the Committee would recommend that the town establish forthwith such a school as is required by the fifth section, of the twenty-third chapter of the Revised Statutes.

OUR SCHOOL SYSTEM.

During the past year, an important change
in our school system has been accomplished,
in accordance with the action of the town leaving to the Grammar School Committee the power of selecting and contracting with teachers, and the beneficial effects of it upon the schools, the Committee believe, is apparent to every unprejudiced mind. It has enabled them to secure teachers adapted to the several schools,
and to continue them without a surplus of money in some districts, and a deficiency in others.
Under the former system, every teacher who was presented for examination, had been contracted with for a particular school, and must be approved for that school or none. But it is easy to perceive that his success has depended upon his being placed in the particular school for which he is peculiarly adapted. (see thirteenth Annual Report of the Secretary of the Board of Education.) The course adopted by the Committee the past year, has been, first,
to ascertain the qualifications of all the teachers, and afterwards take into consideration their adaptedness to particular schools, and make proposals to them accordingly. This course we believe has contributed much to the success of our schools. Again, under the former system, some of our School districts had more money than was needed to support their school through the year; while in other Districts they were obliged to discontinue their schools for want of money. This evil has been remedied by leaving the distribution of the money to the Committee who have made the contracts, and who knew, better than others could know, the wants of the districts. The Committee earnestly recommend the continuance of this arrangement respecting the selection of teachers, and the distribution of the school money. The following account is an accurate statement of our

APPROPRIATIONS.

There has been placed to the credit of the School department, for "Teachers' wages and Fuel," during the past year, the following sums, viz:—

PRINTING OF SCHOOL REPORTS.

The Committee have received during the year a circular from the Secretary of the Board of Education, calling their attention to the importance of printing their reports in such a manner that they may be bound with other School reports in uniform volumes. The Statute authorizes the Committee to do this, but they prefer that it should be done by a special vote of the town, if that can be obtained. The printing and circulating of the School Reports, the Committee believe, will, by diffusing the information which they contain, awaken a deeper and more general interest in our Public Schools than the former practice, by which only a small part of the inhabitants of the town obtain any knowledge of them.

They therefore recommend that — copies of this Report be printed in the pamphlet form,
for general distribution among the inhabitants of the town; and that hereafter the Annual School Report be printed in the same form and circulated before the time of the annual March meeting.

LYCEUM.

Your Committee cannot close this Report
without alluding to the course of valuable Lectures furnished by the Quincy Lyceum, for the moral and intellectual improvement of the citizens of this town. The Lectures have been, generally, of a high character, well adapted to the improvement of all classes, by which they have been numerous attended. Their value in promoting social influence of a pure and elevating character, cannot be too highly estimated, especially as regards the youth of this town.
The thanks of our citizens are due to the members of the Lyceum for this valuable aid to their intellectual, moral, and social culture.
We hope they will continue to receive the encouragement and support so justly merited.

Commending these several considerations to your judgment, and the schools to your watchful care, your Committee respectfully submit their Report.

HOME AFFECTIONS.

The heart has memories that never die. The rough rubs of the world cannot obliterate them.
They are memories of home—early homes.
There is a magic in the very sound. There is the old tree under which the light-hearted boy swung many a day; yonder the river in which he learned to swim; there the house in which he knew a parent's protection; nay, there is the room in which he romped with brother and sister, long since, alas! laid in the yard to which he must soon be gathered, overshadowed by yon old church, whither, with a joyous troop like himself, he has often followed his parents to worship with and hear the good old man who ministered at the altar. Why even the very school house, associated in youthful days with thoughts of tasks, now comes to bring pleasant remembrances of many occasions that call forth some generous exhibitions of the noble traits of human nature. There is where he learned to feel some of his best emotions. There, perchance, he first met the being who, by her love and tenderness in life, has made a home for himself, happier even than that which his childhood knew. There are certain feelings of humanity, and those, too, among the best, that can find an appropriate place for their exercise only by one's own fireside. There is privacy of that which is a species of decoration to violate.
He who seeks wantonly to invade it, is neither more nor less than a villain; and hence there exists no surer test of the debasement of morals
in a community, than the disposition to tolerate in any mode, the man who invades the sanctity of private life. In the turmoil of the world let there be at least one spot where the poor man may find affections and confidence which is not like to be abused.—Dr. Hawker.

NOTHING LIKE TRYING. There are not a few boys and girls in some part of our cities and largest towns that seem almost hopeless. One would think to look at them, that there could be but a shade of difference between them and the beasts that perish. But there are kind hearts that expect something from them, and bold hearts that go into the cellars and gutters after them, and pluck them as brands from the burning.

When they are washed and dressed clean,
they are found to be human. They have mutual voices, and bright eyes and quick thoughts.
They are alive to praise and blame, and the very first hour they spend in the Sunday school which is open for them, awakens interest and encourages new efforts. In London nearly ten thousand such children have been thus saved by what are called "Ragged Schools." Be thankful, young reader, that you have food and raiment, and kind friends and teachers, and that God has also provided such means of instruction for the wretched and neglected children of the streets.

HEALTH.

Appetite is Nicholas the First and the noble faculties of mind and heart are Hungarian captives. Were we to see a rich banker exchanging eagles for coppers by tale, or a rich merchant bartering silk for serge by the pound, we should deem them worthy of any epithet in the vocabulary of folly. Yet the same men buy pains whose prime cost is greater than the amplest fund of natural enjoyments. Their purveyor and market man bring them home head-aches, and indigestion, and neuralgia, by hamper fulls. Their butler bottles up stone, and gout, and the liver complaint, falsely labelling them sherry, or madeira, or port, and the stupefied masters have not wit enough to see through the cheat. The mass of society look with envy upon the epicure who, day by day, for four hours of luxurious eating, suffers twenty hours of sharp aching; who pays a full price for a hot sapper, and is so pleased with the bargain that he throws in a sleepless and tempestuous night, as a gratuity.

English factory children have received the commiseration of the world, because they were scourged to work eighteen hours out of twenty-four; but there is many a theoretic republican who is a harsher Pharaoh to his stomach than this;—who allows it no more resting-time than he does his watch; who gives it no Sunday, no holiday, no vacation in any sense. Our pious ancestors enacted a law that suicides should be buried where four roads meet, and that a cart-load of stones should be thrown upon the body. Yet when gentlemen or ladies commit suicide, not by cord or steel, but by turtle soup or lobster-salad, they may be buried in consecrated ground, and under the auspices of the church, and the public are not ashamed to read an epitaph upon their tombstones false enough to make the marble blush. Were the barbarous old law now in force that punished the body of the suicide for the offence which his soul had committed, we should find many a Mount Auburn at the cross roads.—Horace Mann

INNOCENCE AND VIRTUE. Innocence and virtue, though totally different, are often mistaken for the same thing. Innocence is hardly to be found in this world; our specimens of it are to be seen in the lamb, the dove, and the infant; it consists in ignorance of evil. Virtue is alone attained through a knowledge both of good and evil, and a determined strife against the latter in all its forms. The innocence of this world may often go astray from very ignorance. Virtue knows both the good and evil path, but adheres firmly to the former. Virtue, then, is by far the nobler attainment of the two.

FAMILY PRESERVES. Patience forms a good preserve; so does temper. Preserves, in general, are a woman's business; but husbands, as well as wives, should be able to preserve temper and patience; indeed, perhaps the husbands more particularly than the wives.

MAGIC OF GOOD TEMPER. A cheerful temper, joined with innocence, will make beauty attractive, knowledge delightful, and wit good-natured. It will lighten sickness, poverty, and affliction; convert ignorant into amiable simplicity; and render deformity itself agreeable.

VISIONS. Stones like diamonds when they have defects are divided in smaller; and men in great states and bees in great hives lose their courage and signor, if they ally small lands to other small lands, like one colony hive to another.

A SMILE. The griefs of wedded love unreciprocated, and the griefs of divorce, remind us of the teeth which pain us when they come and when they go.

DRESS IN JAPAN. The Island of Japan is said to be the only country where a change in the fashion of dress has not occurred during a period of 2500 years. All individuals, from the highest to the lowest, wear the hata, a species of wide frock, or gown, and the only difference is the material and number worn—some of the richer classes wear as many as twenty five, of various colors, and of exceeding light texture. We have very little knowledge concerning the resources, manners and customs of the Japanese.

HOW AXES ARE MADE. The process has been greatly simplified within the last two years. The iron is rolled out in bars the proper width and thickness of an axe, and 6, or 8, and 10, feet long; it is heated, and cut off by a large pair of shears and propelled by water power; another workman picks up the piece and places it between a die and a punch, and the punch comes down and forces the hole for the handle by punching out a piece. An iron mandril is then inserted into the hole, and it is immediately put under another press, which forms one side of the axe; it then goes into another die, and forms the other side, and is then placed in an upright position, and a chisel comes down and splits the "bit" of the axe ready for the steel; it is then thrown aside. All this is done at one beat, and in less time than it takes to write the modus operandi. The blade of the axe is then put in and welded, passed along to the forger, tempered, and is cast upon the ground to cool. As soon as cool, it is taken up and planed down to an edge by a planing machine, and finished up with emery wheels; painted labelled stamped and are ready for market.

ENGLAND VS UNITED STATES. The illustrated London News speaks in the strongest terms of the growth of the United States in population and prosperity, and says that hereafter the Anglo Saxon race will rule the world, not from the banks of the Thames, but from those of the Potomac. The writer is of the opinion that England will rapidly decline in power and wealth, in the course of the next half century, and that the transatlantic Republic will as rapidly increase.

RETRIBUTION. Some people seemingly can't keep their hands away from property that don't belong to them, and are constantly putting their stealers into other people's pockets or hats, cribbing here an apple and there a newspaper or a picture, small matters, which the owners would hardly think of complaining about, preferring to let such things pass quietly for friendship's sake. We knew a case, in which one of these feelers, in his lingering way, alighted on a box of lozengers in a shopmate's coat pocket, and straightway transferred it to his own, chuckling at the good trick of its abstraction, and wondering what his friend would say when he discovered its loss. Nothing was said, however, and all the afternoon the depredator was munching lozengers, glancing furtively and often at the sufferer by his side. The next morning he came back to his station, but pale as a ghost and looking unhappy. Sometime after his friend went to his coat and fumbled in its various pockets after something. "Confound it," said he, "I've lost a whole box of worm lozengers; I don't see how I could have lost them." a groan from the man at his side attested that he knew something about it, at any rate. It effected an entire cure in him.

BEHAVIOR IN COMPANY. On the subject of behavior in company, Leigh Richardson gives the following excellent advice to his daughters: "Be cheerful, but not giggles. Be serious, but not dull. Be communicative, but not forward. Be kind but not servile. Beware of silly, thoughtless speeches; although you may forget them, others will not. Remember God's eye is in every place, and his ears every company. Beware of levity and familiarity with young men; a modest reserve without affectation, is the only safe path. Court and encourage serious conversation with those who are truly serious and conversable; and do not go into valuable company without endeavoring to improve by the intercourse permitted to you. Nothing is more unbecoming, when one part of a company is engaged in profitable and interesting conversation, that another part should be trifling, giggling, and talking comparative nonsense to each other."

PHENOMENA OF THE BRAIN. One of the most inconceivable things in the nature of the brain is, that the organ of sensation should itself be insensible. To cut the brain gives no pain, yet in the brain alone resides the power of feeling pain. In any other part of the body. If the nerve which leads from it to the injured part be divided it becomes instantly unconscious of suffering. It is only by communication with the brain that any kind of sensation is produced, yet the organ itself is insensible. But there is a circumstance more wonderful still. The brain itself may be removed, may be cut away down to the corpus callosum, without destroying life. The animal lives and performs all its functions, which are necessary to simple vitality, but no longer has a mind; it cannot think or feel; it requires that the food should be pushed into its stomach; and once there it is digested, and the animal will even thrive and grow fat. We infer, therefore, that the part of the brain, the convolutions, is simply intended for the exercise of the intellectual faculties, whether of the low degree called instinct, or exalted kind bestowed on man the gift of reason.—Wagon on the Quality of the Mind.

LOVE FOR THE DEAD. The love that survives the tomb, says Irving, is the noblest attribute of the soul. If it has woes, it has likewise its delights; and when the overwhelming burst of grief is called into the gentle tear of recollection, then sudden anguish and convulsive agony over the present ruins of all we most loved, are softened away into pensive meditations of all that it was in the days of its loveliness. Who would root such a sorrow from the heart; though it may sometimes throw a passing cloud over the bright hour of gaiety, or spread a deeper sadness over the hour of gloom, yet who would exchange it for the song of pleasure or the burst of revelry? No!—There is a voice from the tomb, sweeter than song; there is a remembrance of the dead, to which we turn even from the charm of the living.

WEBSTER'S SPELLING BOOK. About six million copies of this school book have been sold by the publishers since the decease of its author in 1813—an average of nearly one million a year! The entire sale of the work amounts to about thirty million copies.

CONGRESS.—The all-absorbing topic is the admission of California into the Union, with which is connected the subject of Slavery. Speeches are made on each side, eliciting much talent and research. The friends for admission and in opposition to slavery, have and do present the best arguments, and they will prevail. This is all of importance concerning Congressional doings.

"THE HARMONEONS."—This admirable company of singers, and they are the originals under this name, have visited this town within a short period, and been welcomed by crowded houses. On their last previous appearance, the house was so densely filled that seats could not be procured, and by urgent solicitation they again appear on this (Saturday) evening. Give them, then, at this their last time for a season, a good, yea, a crowded house, for such singing and such "good fellows" to use a Yankee saying, honestly deserve from the public the utmost of liberality. Go in season to secure a seat. The Town Hall is large, but the admirers of the Harmonic are larger.

FROM CALIFORNIA.—We have received a letter from a Quincy boy, who has been to the "mines," and consequently speaks from experience. We shall publish it next week, and from its contents we should judge that it was a pill for all who design to migrate.

Among all her seaward-looking cliffs Spain has not a single lighthouse, from the Pyrenees to Point Europa; she has no railroads, no canals, no telegraphs; and till recently there has been no safety for travellers on the highways.

Sundry lines of railroads have been proposed in Spain, in consequence of the great success and the large dividend yielded by the first undertaking of the kind in Spain. Lines have been projected to connect the capital with the principal ports, &c., of the country.

There is said to be in the Bank of France, four hundred and sixty millions of francs, or ninety-two millions of dollars in silver; which is supposed to be the largest collection of silver in the world.

The translation of the New Testament into Chinese is proceeding at the rate of thirty verses a day, and it is hoped will be completed this year. The missionaries, as they proceed insert every new word in a vocabulary.

It is estimated that there are in London 28,577 needlewomen under twenty years of age, the average earnings of each being four pence half-penny a day.

Mud is a queer article of traffic; but the mud of Paris is worth $100,000 to the city, while at retail it sells for over $700,000.

WEYMOUTH TOWN OFFICERS.
Town Clerk—Oran White.
Town Treasurer—Thomas Nash.
Selectmen—Noah Vining, Jr., Esq., Atherton N. Hunt, Edward Blanchard.
Assessors—Noah Jones, Esq., Harvey Cushing, Ezra Turrell.
Overseers of the Poor—Alvah Raymond, Esq., James Turrell, Samuel Curtis.
Constables—Silas Binney, Henry Loud, Martin Vining.
School Committee—Rev. Willard M. Harding, Rev. James P. Terry, Josiah Ball, Elijah F. Hall, Esq., Rev. Joshua Emery, Jr., Rev. Jotham Horton, Lemuel Humphrey, Esq.

Three thousand hands are constantly employed in making up garments for George W. Simmons of Oak Hall Boston. He probably clothes more people than any other man in the country, and sells his clothing at such prices that all can afford to purchase neat and fashionable suits.

A CARD.
The officers and members of the Niagara Engine Company, No. One of Quincy, return their sincere thanks to the engineers of Braintree and Weymouth, for their liberal supply of refreshments after the fire on Thursday evening. Also for supplying horses for them on their return home. And last though not least, to Mr. Joseph Frye of this town, who furnished the company with a horse to take the engine to the fire, to whom they will ever feel grateful for his kindness. For order of the Company.
Quincy, March 16. JOHN F. PIERCE, Clerk.

NOTICE.
The Ladies Howard Temperance Society will meet at Mrs. Whitney's, on TUESDAY next, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

NEWS FOR THE SICK.
Whitesell, N. Y., July 10, 1848.

MR. SETH W. FOWLE; Dear Sir—It is with pleasure I write you this certificate, stating my experience in the use of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. In November last I was taken with a severe cough. My lungs were much affected, so much that it was with difficulty I could breathe. Hearing of your Balsam, I procured and took part of one bottle; and to my better astonishment, my lungs were freed and my cough cured. I am happy to recommend this Balsam of Wild Cherry to the public as one of the best medicines for coughs and colds I ever used.
WM. SWIFT.

N. B. Remember it is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, with the signature of I. BUTTS on the wrapper, that perform such cures.

(From the Boston Daily Times.)
A certificate case is one of a very remarkable character, we comply with pleasure. Recently, well tested cases of cure of severe diseases by the use of a particular medicine, should be made known to the public for the benefit of others similarly afflicted.

None is genuine unless signed I. BUTTS on the wrapper.

His spirit floats in realms of love;
And though his form ye ne'er shall see,
Ye can commune with him above,
"Ye were sin to mourn; ye must not weep;
Say, would ye break that heavy sleep?"
But hark! what seraph strains arise!
The chains of sleep are quickly riven!
He wakes! he wakes and opens his eyes,
"Mid all the angel choirs of heaven,
Weep not for him: 'twere sin to weep!
When thus he wakes from such a sleep!"

Fruit Trees.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

THE Proprietor of the Nurseries at Hawthorn Grove, Dorchester (Mass.) is anxious to dispose of a large proportion of the FRUIT TREES thereon, with a view to improvement of the ground the coming season.

The collection of PEARS, CHERRIES, PLUMS, and other FRUITS, embrace almost every approved sort of American or Foreign origin extant, and is scarcely surpassed in excellence or extent of variety.

SPECIAL CULTIVATION has been bestowed on the PEAR, and many thousands of thrifty vigorous trees, are now ready for transplantation.

EXTRA SIZED TREES, with fruit buds, and well furnished with branches, and such as will soon commence bearing, can be supplied at moderate prices.

Also—All the new varieties of PEARS, CHERRIES, PLUMS, etc., and at rates less than is generally charged for novelties.

Scions for experimentation and the home trade can be had from bearing trees, thereby ensuring correctness of nomenclature.

SELECTIONS, where desired, founded on the experience of many years, will be made by the Proprietor, and which will seldom fail to please the correspondent.

Address—"The Superintendent" of the Nurseries at Hawthorn Grove, Dorchester, (Mass.) to the care of M. P. Wilder, No. 2 Pearl street, Boston.

Grove Hall coaches leave No. 11 Franklin street, four times each day.

POETRY.

HUMAN LIFE.

Our lives are like the ceaseless flow
Of rivers to the mighty sea;
Swift hurrying past each scene they go
To mingle with Eternity.
And man is like some gullant bark,
By the restless current borne
To that dread ocean, from whence whose dark
And untried borders none return.

Of all the myriads that before
Have gone its countless hosts to swell,
Not one has from that tideless shore
Come back, their history to tell!
The stream rolls on—but where are those
It bore but yesterday—the wept—
The loved—their freight of joys or woes?
Oblivion's wave o'er all has swept!

Though youth's bright sun with rainbow light
A morning mist, that skyward borne
Is seen no more; a meteor spark,
One moment flashing bright—and gone.
The vapor fades—even while we gaze,
It melts into the viewless air;
The transient meteor's dazzling blaze
But makes the gloom it leaves, more drear.

Though youth's bright sun with rainbow light
May arch the distant future o'er,
'Tis early shrouded from our sight
By manhood's clouds—to shine no more.
Mid mournful memories—hopes betrayed,
And vain regrets, our days are passed,
Till in Earth's sheltering bosom laid,
Forgetfulness is won at last!

Our life is like the desert bleak
Wide spread o'er Africa's burning soil—
We wander through it faint and weak,
Harassed by want and faint with toil;
If whilst, some freshly verdant spot
Amid the arid waste appears,
Whose loveliness is ne'er forgot,
How soon 'tis veiled by grief and tears!

We strive—for what? to build a name
O'er which the sands of time will creep
And leave no place for empty fame—
For triumphs—where we ought to weep.
As the mirage, whose treacherous ray
But mocks the traveller's straining eye,
Even love and hope soon pass away
And leave us thirsting, faint—to die.

Life's spring time hues are faint, but brief—
Their Eden beauties early gone:
And age steals on with autumn leaf,
Sad, scentless, desolate and lone
Though haply when their mites are dead,
Some few pale fading flow'ers wave—
There is the mournful fragrance, shed
From roses blooming round the grave.

Oh! who to linger here can feel
A wish, condemned with bosom torn Beside the shattered wreck to kneel,
Of all he loved—and vainly mourn—
When, heir of sorrow from his birth,
To man this blessed hope is given—
Though doomed to strife and toil on earth,
There's rest and peace, and joy—in Heaven.

COWARDICE.

The veriest coward upon earth,
Is he who fears the world's opinion,
Who acts with reference to its will,
His conscience swayed by its dominion.
Mind is not worth a feather's weight,
That must with other minds be measured,
Self must direct and self control,
And the account in heaven be treasured.

Fear never sways a manly soul,
For honest hearts 'twas ne'er intended,
They, only they have cause to fear,
Whose motives have their God offended.

What will my neighbor say if I Should this attempt, or that, or t'other?
A neighbor is most sure a foe,
If he prove not a helping brother.

That man is brave who braves the world,
When o'er life's sea his bark he steers,
Who keeps that guiding star in view,
A conscience clear, which never veers.

ANECDOTES.

La, me! said Mrs. Partington, here I have been suffering the agonies of death for three mortal weeks.
But I was seized with a painful phrenology in the left hemisphere of the brain, which was exceeded by a stoppage of the left ventrator of the heart. This gave me an inflammation in the borax, and now I'm sick with the chloroform morbus. There is no blessing like that of health, particularly when you're sick.

"Sir, you are no gentleman." "That may be, sir,
but my wife says I am a gentleman, and I shall certainly believe my own wife before you; for if a man cannot believe his own wife, pray who can he believe?"

"Pa, what is punctuation?" "It is the art of putting in the stops." "Then I wish you would go down cellar and punctuate the cider barrel, for the cider is running all over the floor."

A shrewd old gentleman once said to his daughter,
"Be sure, my dear, you never marry a poor man.
But remember that the poorest man in the world is one that has money and nothing else."

Alexander the Great, seeing Diogenes looking at-tively at a large collection of human bones, piled one upon another, asked the philosopher what he was looking for? "I am searching," said he, for the bones of your father, but I cannot distinguish them
from those of his slaves."

"Jack, your wife is not so pensive as she used to be." "No, she has left that off and has turned expensive."

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR
Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,
it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS
is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.
Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and Durability, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.
A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory

of the Agent in this town.
E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECON-

Removal.
THE subscriber takes this
method to inform his customers and the public, that he
has moved to the new building lately erected by Mr. Samuel Copeland, it being more convenient and better adapted
to his business; and also,
would tender his sincere thanks for the liberal share of patronage which he has received during the past year.
His former customers and the public generally are invited to call, where will be found a variety of Stoves,
among which is the

New England Air-Tight,
embodying, in the highest degree of perfection, every essential quality requisite for any latitude. This Stove presents itself externally in a plain dress, with
just and admirable proportions, giving it the appearance of a chest and tastefully made piece of Cabinet Furniture. Intrinsically, the location and capacity of the Fire Chamber is such as to remove effectually the objections often made to Air-Tight Cook-Stoves for country use. The Oven proves itself to be precisely what its projectors intended it should be, viz: the largest and most perfect ever constructed in a family Stove. The Flues, upon which the great responsibility and reputation of a stove depends, differ from any ever before used, and are of such construction and
capacity as to ensure the most perfect draught, without liability to fill up, and are easily kept clean.
Nearly one hundred of this stove have been sold the
past year and all have given the utmost satisfaction.
Also—A variety of PARLOIR, OFFICE and CYL-INDER STOVES, together with a good assortment of TIN, BRITANIA, SHEET IRON and Japaned Ware.

MISCELLANY.

FINE ILLUSTRATION.

The following is the conclusion of Hon. Horace Mann's speech before the late National Convention at Philadelphia:—

He who now visits the North-western part of the state of New York, to see one of the wonders of the world—the falls of Niagara—may see also see a wonder of art not unworthy to be compared with this wonder of nature. He may see a vast iron bridge spanning one of the greatest rivers in the world, affording the means of safe transit for any number of men or any weight of merchandise and poised high in the serene air, hundreds of feet above the maddened waters below. How was this prodigious structure stretched from abutment to abutment across the raging flood? How was it built so strong as to bear the tread of an army or the momentum of the rushing steam car? Its beginning was as simple as its termination is grand. A boy's plaything, a kite, was first sent into the air; to this kite was attached a silken thread, to the thread a cord, to the cord a rope, and to the rope, a cable. When the toy fell on the opposite side, the silken thread drew over the cord, and the cord the rope, and the rope cable one after another, great bundles of fascia, of iron wire, and these being arranged side by side and layer by layer, now constitute a bridge of such massiveness and cohesion that the mighty Genius of the Cataract would spend his strength upon it in vain.

Thus my friends may great results be deduced from small beginning. Let this first meeting of the National Association of the friends of education be like the safe and successful sending of an aerial messenger across the abyss of ignorance, Superstition and Crime, so that those who come after us may lay the abutments and complete this moral arch that shall carry thousands and millions of our fellow-beings in safety and peace above the gulf of perdition, into whose seething floods they would otherwise have fallen and perished!

HOW DOES A FLY BUZZ?

How does a fly buzz, is a question more easily asked than answered. "With its wings," is the sure, hastily replies one of our readers. "With its wings, as they vibrate upon the air," responds another, with a smile, half of contempt, half of complacency, of his own more than common measurement of natural philosophy. But how then let us ask, can the great dragon-fly, and other similar broad-pinioned, and other rapid flying insects cut through the air with silent swiftness, while others go on buzzing when not upon the wing at all? Rennie, who has already put this posing query, himself ascribes the sound partially to air, but to air as it plays on the "edges of the wings at their origin as with an æolian harpstring," or to the friction of some internal organ at the root of the wings or nerves. Lastly, how does the fly feed? the busy, curious, thirsty fly, that "drinks with me" but does not "drink as I," his soul instrument for eating or drinking being his trunk or suck; the narrow pipe, by means of which, when let down upon his dainties, he is enabled to imbibe as much as suits his capacity. This trunk might seem an instrument convenient enough when inserted into a saucer or syrup, or applied to the broken surface of an over-ripe blackberry, but we often see our sipper of sweets quite as busy on a solid lump of sugar, which we shall find on close inspection, growing "small by degrees" under his attack. How, without grinders does he accomplish the consumption of such crystal condiment? A magister will solve the difficulty, and show how the fly dissolves his rock, Hannibal fashion, by a diluent, a salivary fluid passing down the same pipe, which returns the sugar melted into syrup.

WILLIAM H. BEEBE.

We this week present our readers with a portrait of Mr. WILLIAM H. BEEBE, the eminent Broadway writer, in New York City, and we are quite assured that a sketch of his life, and of the far-famed hatting establishment, of which he is the founder and head, will prove to them highly interesting.

William H. Beebe was born in the year 1812, in the town of Richmond, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, of humble though highly respectable parentage, with whom he resided until he was eight years old, when his father died, and his mother was left a widow, with one older and two younger sons, without property, and dependent solely upon her and their own exertions for a livelihood. To the advice and guidance of this excellent mother may, in a great measure, be attributed the success of Mr. Beebe, as the correct principles instilled into his youthful mind, and inculcated by her precept and example, have formed the basis of his conduct throughout his life.

In about two years after his father's death, his mother was again married, to Captain Gaston, of the same town, and still resides at his old homestead, about one mile from the humble cottage in which Mr. Beebe was born.

The next period of six years was spent by him in the employ of an old farmer of Richmond; and, in acquiring the rudiments of his early education, which he sometimes humorously says, was derived chiefly from an old apple-tree stump and Webster's spelling-book!

At the end of this time, in the year 1826, he left his native town for the purpose of serving his apprenticeship to the art, trade, and mystery of hatting, with Mr. ———, at Saratoga Springs, New York. We will here remark that the hatting business at that time was conducted in a very different manner from what it is at present, as then hats were made entirely of wool and fur; and, the apprentice was required to commence at the beginning, by pulling the wool and cutting the fur from the skins and going through the whole process of fitting, napping, dyeing, and finishing, even to the trimming, until the hat was complete and ready for sale. The whole of these different processes (now almost obsolete, or done by the aid of machinery). Mr. Beebe learned practically and thoroughly; and, to hear him relate some of his experience of apprentice life, as, for instance, "having to carry a bundle of lined sheep-skins, or of hats from the dye-kettle, to a brook some quarter of a mile distant, on a cold winter's day, and there stand in the water knee-deep, by the hour, while washing and rinsing the same, the ice all the while making around the scanty legs of his home-pun pantaloons," is quite sufficient to cause an involuntary shudder, and repress all admiration for the beauties of that probationary stage of existence.

The art of water-proofing hats was introduced at about this time, and constitutes an era in the business; and, by way of explanation, we will state that, prior to the year 1823, all hats were stuffed with glue, and, in consequence, as soon as they became wet, the glue would melt and run, leaving the hat to slouch down about the wearer's face, or at least the nap would become so saturated with the glue as to stick down and adhere firmly to the body of the hat—in either case spoiling it completely. Instead of this glue for stuffing, gum shellac, dissolved in alcohol, was substituted; and the hat being saturated with it, the alcohol quickly evaporated, leaving the gum in the body, and rendering it impervious either to cold or warm water. This discovery is considered as one of the greatest improvements ever made in the art, and continues in use at the present day.

When Mr. Beebe had finished his apprenticeship, having served seven years and two months, he went to the city of Rochester, in New York; and in the year 1833, there established himself in business, where he remained three years. He then sold out, and removed to Newark, (N. J.) and, in 1838, established his business in that city.

From this period, Mr. Beebe put his present motto, "Excellence," practically into operation, and said, at that time, that if he lived, he would, if possible, surpass all others in the production of the fine hat, let the cost and exertion be whatever it might. To accomplish this object, we are credibly informed that, Mr. Beebe labored most assiduously day and night, with the most untiring industry, energy, perseverance, and economy, and there is probably few instances in which any person has used more strenuous exertion to effect the great object which he had in view. In this we see that he has been eminently successful, and is now without a rival in the art of producing a fine hat.

From the commencement of his business, Mr. Beebe has used only the richest and best materials, without regard to cost, and has employed none except the most talented and skillful workmen; and by the division of labor, keeping the same hands always employed at the different branches of work, has everything done in the most complete and perfect manner.

In adopting these principles and rules, he has differed in a great measure from almost every other large manufacturer; for, at about the time he commenced his business (1838), nearly all the manufacturers in the country, of hats as well as other articles, began to strive for precedence, in making low priced (not cheap) goods; and, to reduce the cost to the lowest possible point, their policy led to the employment of apprentices, until nearly all the labor, in the largest manufactories, was performed by them. The effect of this course was, to throw the journeymen out of employment for nearly half of their time, and to compel them, even then, to work at reduced wages, while the standard of work was so much lowered that it became difficult for many manufacturers to make a good article, even at any price. This will, we think, help to account for the five dollar hat being advertised for four dollars, three and a half, three dollars, &c., and so with many other articles of manufacture. This course has been adopted by the mechanics of this country, and carried on until the whole country is flooded with a lot of worthless trash, for which the people pay their hard earnings, under the delusive idea that they are obtaining a cheap article, because it is low-priced, and which too soon proves to them how certainly they have been cheated.

We have been told that some of the largest manufactories in Europe have been compelled to adopt the same system, in order to satisfy the incessant cry for low-priced (not cheap) goods, so prevalent in this country, as the price of an article seems to be all the mass of the people are disposed to consider, overlooking entirely, quality, value, and relative cheapness. The time, however, is fast approaching, when, in our opinion, the good people will begin to consider their own interests in a proper manner, and will adopt the views of our friend Beebe, whose motto is before them both in word and works—and whose manufactures have won for him a greater name and reputation in his business, than has been before obtained by any manufacturer of hats, either in this country or in Europe.

In the spring of the year 1844, Mr. Beebe made the necessary arrangements for constructing the extensive store and manufactory now occupied by the firm of William H. Beebe & Co., at 156 Broadway, and by adhering strictly to the principles and rules before mentioned, he has had the satisfaction to find that his business has increased to such an extent that he has already been obliged to enlarge his factory to nearly double its first dimensions, and still finds it too small by one-half to accommodate his constantly increasing trade. We are informed that Mr. Beebe has not accumulated a fortune in dollars and cents, but that he has lavishly bestowed his profits upon his merchandise and the increase of his business facilities, satisfying himself for the present, with the reputation which he has acquired, and the consciousness of laboring in a good cause.

The manufactory employs about two hundred people, aided by every device and contrivance of steam machinery, which is requisite or can be employed to advantage, and the store and sales rooms are unequalled for their size and the splendor of their appointment, and for the costly and beautiful merchandize which they contain.

We commend the example of their enterprising proprietor to all of our good readers, and sincerely hope that Dame Fortune may shower upon him her choicest favors.

THE DAY'S THREE RULES.

An old man called to him his son and pupil one morning, and said to him: "Theodore, have you prepared your mind for the three things?"

"What three things, father?"

"The three claims of the day, my son, concerning which I instructed you. We should enter on no day of life, without carefully inquiring what is before us, and what is expected of us."

"Now, I remember," said Theodore; "they are the three rules which you desired me to say once every morning on rising."

"What are these rules my son?"

"They are these," replied Theodore:—"First, Do the duty of the day; secondly, Bear the burden of the day; thirdly, Learn the lesson of the day."

"Yes, my son, and there is no day, to which these do not apply. Each has its duty, its burden, and its lesson. Something has to be done, something to be borne, and something to be learned."

And he who neglects no one of these three things, spends this day aright. Endeavor, Theodore, to apply these rules to some one day, which is fresh in remembrance, as for example yesterday."

"I will do so," said Theodore. "The duty of yesterday was that of making a catalogue of your books, and engrossing it in a volume. This I mean, was my grand business. The were many lesser duties, arising from my circumstances. The burden of the day was a heavy one, but I am afraid to name it, lest you laugh at me."

"Out with it!"

"It was a mortification of my vanity at the rejection of my verses sent to the newspapers."

"Ah! I can believe it; mortification of pride and vanity are among our heaviest burdens."

"The lesson of the day," continued Theodore, "was taught me by a lamb in the meadow, which suffered itself to be rudely pushed about by my dog, without the sign of resentment and hereby soon forgot the injury and healed the wound."

"I perceive," said the old man, "that you have observed my precept, in recalling to your memory the three things, on closing your eyes for sleep. But suppose you go further, and endeavor to apply them to the future. We have but just begun a new day, how do these rules apply to what it is likely to bring you?"

Theodore paused a little, and then replied, "The duty of the day is to go on in my studies, especially to perfect myself in what remains of geometry; and it is well you have called it to my mind, for I have to row myself across the river to get my book. The burden of the day, is in great part unknown to me. I can, however, foresee something of it in these severe studies, added to the knowledge that my companions will be keeping it as a holiday. The lesson of the day, so far as not included in the geometry lesson aforesaid, cannot be foreseen. But I shall be more on the watch for it, in consequence of your reminding me."

"My son," said the old man, "it is impossible for me to tell you the advantage I have derived from the habit of looking forward every morning and backwards every evening, upon the passing day, with these three little words in my mind; the Duty—the Burden—the Lesson."

WAS IT PROVIDENCE?

Take for example a young girl, bred delicately in town, shut up in a nursery in her childhood—in a boarding house through her youth, never accustomed to either air or exercise, two things that the law of God makes essential to health. She marries; her strength is not adequate to the demands upon it. Her beauty fades away. She languishes through her hard offices of giving birth to children, suckling and watching over them, and dies early. "What a strange Providence, that a mother should be taken away in the midst of life, from her children?" "Was it Providence? No. Providence had assigned her threescore years and ten; a term long enough to reach her children, and see her children's children, but she did not obey the laws on which life depends, and of course, she lost it.

A father, too, was cut off in the midst of his days. He is a useful and distinguished citizen, and eminent in his profession. A general buzz rises on every side, of "What a striking Providence!" This man has been in the habit of studying half the night, of passing his days in his office or courts, of eating luxurious dinners, and drinking various wines. He has every day violated the laws on which health depends. Did Providence cut him off? The evil never ends here. The diseases of the father are often transmitted; and a feeble mother rarely leaves behind her vigorous children.

It has been customary in some of our cities for young ladies to walk in thin shoes, and delicate stockings in mid winter. A healthy, blooming young girl, thus dressed in violation of Heaven's laws, pays the penalty; a checked circulation, cold, fever and death. "What a sad Providence!" exclaims her friends. Was it Providence, or her own folly?

A beautiful young bride goes night after night to parties made in honor of her marriage. She has slightly a sore throat, perhaps, and the weather is inclement; but she must wear her neck and arms bare, for who ever saw a bride in the close evening dress? She is consequently seized with an inflammation of the lungs, and the grave receives her before her bridal days are over. "What a Providence!" exclaims the world. "Cut off in the midst of happiness and hope!" Alas did she not cut the thread of her life herself?—New York Sun.

FAT MEN.

The annexed paragraph is extracted from the lectures of the Rev. Henry Giles, who it will be recollected, addressed the Lyceum in this town, several years ago.

"There is something cordial in a fat man. Everybody likes him, and he likes everybody. Your Ishmaelites are, in truth, a bare-boned race; a lank tribe are they—all skeleton and bile. Food does a fat man good; it clings to him, it fructifies upon him; he swells nobly out, and fills a generous space in life. He is a living, walking specimen of gratitude to the bounty of the earth, and the fulness thereof; an incarnate testimony against the vanity of care; a radiant manifestation of the wisdom of good humor. A fat man, therefore, almost in virtue of being a fat man; i. per se, a popular man and commonly he deserves his popularity. In a crowded vehicle the fattest man will even be the first to make room. Indeed, he seems half sorry for his size, lest it should be in the way of others; but others would not have him less than he is; for his humanity is usually commensurate with his bulk. A fat man is abundance of rich joys. The lines of his yam are well oiled; the springs of his being are noiseless; and so he goes his way rejoicing, in full contentment and placidity."

"A fat man feels his position solid in the world; he knows his being is cognizable; he knows he has a marked place in the universe, and that he need take no extraordinary pains to advertise marking that he is among them; he knows that he is in no danger of being overlooked. Your thin man is uncertain as to where he is; he is uneasy. He may vanish any hour into nothing; already he is nothing but a shadow, and hence it is that he uses such laborious efforts to convince you of his existence; to persuade you that he is actually something; that he is more than a nonentity; that he is a positive substance as well as his corpulent fellow creature."

"* * * It really does take a deal of wrong to make one actually hate a fat man; and if we are not always so cordial to a thin man as we ought to be, Christian charity should take into account the force of prejudice which we have to overcome against his thinness. A fat man is the nearest to that most perfect of figures, a mathematical sphere, a thin man to that most limited of conceivable dimensions, a simple line. A fat man is a being of harmonious volume, and held in relation to the material universe in every direction; a thin man has nothing but length; a thin man, in fact, is but the continuation of a point."

ART OF LIVING WITH OTHERS.

In this first place, if people are to live happily together, they must not fancy because they are thrown together now, that all their lives have been exactly similar up to the present time, that they started exactly alike, and that they are to be for the future of the same mind. A thorough conviction of the difference of men is the greatest thing to be assured of in social knowledge—it is to life what Newton's law is to astronomy. Sometimes men have a knowledge of it with regard to the world to agree with them in all points but are vexed at not being able to drive their own tastes and opinions into those they live with. Diversities distress them. They will not see that there are many forms of virtue and wisdom. Yet we might as well say, "Why all these stars? why this difference? why not all one star?"

Many of the rules for people living together in peace follow from the above. For instance not to interfere unreasonably with others, and not to ridicule their tastes, not to question and request their resolves, not to indulge in perpetual comment on their proceedings, and to delight in their having other pursuits than ours, are all based upon a thorough perception of the simple fact that they are not as we.

Another rule for living happily with others is to avoid having stock subjects of dispute. It mostly happens when people live much together that they come to have certain topics, around which, from frequent disputes, there is such a growth of angry words, mortified vanity, and the like, the original subject of difference becomes a standing subject of quarrel, and there is a tendency in all minor disputes to drift down to it.

Again, if people wish to live well together they must not hold too much logic, and suppose that everything is to be settled by sufficient reason. Dr. Johnson saw this clearly with regard to married people, when he said, "Wretched would be the pair above all names of wretchedness who should be doomed to adjust by reason every morning, all the minute details of a domestic day." But the application should be more general than he made it. There is no time for such reasoning and nothing that is worth them. And when we recollect how two

POETRY.

(For the Quincy Patriot.)
SONG—THE CATARACT.

Friend Green—The following lines were written many years ago. They are very irregular but will do to whistle.

A hermit liv'd by the mountain side,
Where the cataract tumbled along,
Where the bold eagle stretch'd his wings with pride,
O'er the lofty pine by the mountain side.
Where the cataract tumbled, along—long, long;
Where the cataract tumbled along.

His lovely daughter for whom I sigh'd,
The fair burthen of many a song,
From my father's cottage one day I spied,
I snatch'd up my cap and away I fled.
Chorus—Where the cataract, &c.,

I clasped her around her slender waist,
And I urg'd my passion so strong,
But she would not hear me, she was in haste,
Nor longer time with me would waste.
Chorus—Where the cataract, &c.,

Away she flew to ford the stream,
Where the current was rapid and strong,
She fell and I heard her piercing scream,
As she floated down the raging stream.
Chorus—Where the cataract, &c.,

On the wings of Love and fear I flew,
My limbs, like a giant's, were strong,
Her floating tresses first met my view,
As she pass'd the roaring waters through.
Chorus—Where the cataract, &c.,

I seized her in my brawny arms,
And bore her in safety along,
My bosom throbb'd, as I view'd her charms,
While love's soft elation rose to arms.
Chorus—Where the cataract, &c.,

I placed her on a flowery bed,
That grew the wild rocks among,
While on my breast she pillow'd her head,
Love flush'd her cheek and the lily fled.
Chorus—Where the cataract tumbled, &c.,

My cottage now contains the maid,
A fairer ne'er shown in song,
Her silken tresses with flowers I braid,
And clasp to my bosom beneath the shade.
Chorus—Where the cataract tumbles, along, long,
Where the cataract tumbles along.

EVER! EVER!

By the sunlight, by the moonlight,
By the starlight all the same;
In the paleness of the winter,
And the summer's crimson flame—
In the music of the sweet wind,
Or its wailing sad and low—
Still I gaze and still I listen,
Tho' none else may dream or know.

In the song voice, in the speech voice,
There is but one far off tone;
In the silence of my bosom
But one burning throbb'd alone—
But one burning of shade or brightness
In the mazes of my sleep,
One pearl of snowy whiteness
In my memory's heaving deep!

How I grieve, how I sorrow,
How I love with deathless love—
How I weep before the chilling skies,
And moan to God above!
I am higher, I am prouder,
Than if stars were round my head;
I am drooping, I am lonelier,
As a mourner o'er the dead!

Yet I part not from my sorrow,
My glory and my gloom,
For the smiling of the May time,
The sunshine or the bloom;
From the throbb of burning quickness,
That is answered far away,
Over mountains, over waters,
In the night or in the day!

ANECDOTES.

"A Frenchman whose wife was about to present him with the fond appellation of father, returned to await the happy moment; and with some friends to drink long life and a noble, to the first born. The punch bowl scattered its inviting fumes most prodigally round the company and anxiety was manifested by all, when in ran Betty Lightfoot, exclaiming—
"Joy, joy, sir—I give you joy." "Vat is he, Betty, vat is he?" "A fine boy, sir." "Health to young Marquis!" exclaimed one and the bumpers went round. "Betty you must drink one life to young Marquis." Betty raised the glass to her lips, when in rushed the nurse—"Joy, joy, sir—I give you joy." "Vat—vat is de matter?" "A fine girl, sir." "Betty," said the Frenchman, "vat for you say no true?" "Oh," said the nurse, "a boy first and a girl afterwards." "Vat, two—yon boy, one life?" "Two, sir," added the dame, and helping herself to a glass was swinging it off, when in popped another—"Sacre!" exclaimed the Frenchman, vat more joy?" "Another fine boy, sir." "Vat the diable—yon girl von boy—yon garçon—three times! Mon Dieu!" bawled the poor Frenchman. "By Gar, it will never do; I must go and put a stop to this!"

A woman on horseback came to a bridge, and was coolly riding by the gate, when she was hailed by the toll-gatherer for the pay.
"What you want toll for?" she asked, and the gate keeper explained in full.
"How much do you tax?" she inquired.
"The gate keeper, pointing to the rates of toll, read, 'For a man and horse, nine cents.'
"Oh! oh!" exclaimed the lady, "this is not a man and horse, but a woman and a mare!"
And, chirruping and plying her switch with great energy to the sides of her nag, she trotted off amidst the loud laughter and cheers of the bystanders, while the gate-keeper looked—
"you can guess how."

"Dick, you have a hole in your trousers."
"Well, who cares, it will wear longer than a patch."
"Yes," says Sam, "and wider too."

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR.

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed, that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE, it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS

is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, CONVENIENCE and DURABILITY, over any other Air-Tight Cooking Stove.

A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the

MISCELLANY.

LET EVERY BOY READ.

A Sunday School Teacher was very much puzzled to know what she should give her scholars on Christmas day. She had determined to make a present to each boy, whether he happened to be good or bad; and on the whole, she decided it would be best to find out what they wanted. So she called to see Thomas, and she found him playing marbles in the street. He said very eagerly that he should like a whole bag full of marbles. Then she went to find Robert; and he was sitting on a plank with another boy; he no sooner heard her question, than he jumped off in such a hurry he almost sent the other little fellow down head foremost. He said he had been wanting a good ball very much. The third boy was Charles. He was sitting on a fence munching apples with some other boys. He could not tell exactly what he did want most, but finally decided that he should like a knife for whittling. Just then the fourth boy, Stephen, came along with a basket of shavings, which he had been getting for his mother. There were but four boys in the class; and this was the poorest of them all, besides being a thin, weak, and sickly boy. As soon as the teacher told him what she wanted to know, he grew very red, and hesitated some time. At last he said in a low voice, "I shall like whatever the Lord pleases to send me." The other boys heard his answer and burst into a loud rude laugh; and one said "do you think it is the Lord that sends you Christmas presents? it is Miss Clarke." "I give them to you," said the teacher, "but it is the Lord who sends them. I should not give them if I did not know that he wished me to do it." "Tell me, Stephen," said she kindly, "What do you really wish to have most? a ball? marbles? a knife? a book?" Stephen looked at the other boys as if afraid they would laugh at him again; so Miss Clarke told him to take up his basket and walk along with her, which he did. As soon as they had turned the corner, he told her that his testament was almost worn out, and he should like a new testament above all things, if it were not for one reason. "And what is that?" said Miss Clarke. "Why," replied Stephen, "my mother's hood is worn out too; and she gets the ear-ache or the tooth-ache every time she hangs out clothes; so I don't know which I want most, the testament or the hood for mother." And what is worse, I don't know which I ought to wish for most." "Well," answered Miss Clarke, "which would you prefer to have? a testament, or a hood?" "Oh, the testament I know, because it would do us all good. I will choose the testament, if you please, Miss Clarke, and if God pleases."

The pious boy went home and told his mother what he had chosen, and she said that he had done well. "Christmas day is the birth day of Jesus Christ," said she, and you ought to read about him everyday, if you mean to be like him."

The other boys had never thought of Christmas day as having anything to do with Jesus Christ; they only thought of it as a day for getting presents.

At the next day poor Stephen was so sick that he could not get out of his bed. The other boys went to Miss Clarke's house at the time she had fixed just before dark. They were taken into a room, where a large beautiful picture hung upon the wall, and the room was brilliantly lighted with gas-lamps, so that they saw the picture distinctly. It represented the infant Jesus lying in his mother's lap, and stretching his arms towards them with a sweet smile. Presently, while the boys were gazing at it silently, Miss Clarke touched a spring in the frame. The picture slid down and left another in its place. It represented Jesus Christ hanging upon the cross, yet even there, looking affectionately down on those who stood beneath. The boys were thoughtless boys, but they were in a strange place, and these pictures had a strange effect upon them; they did not know what to say, and they stood still. At last Miss Clarke spoke softly, and said, "that is the Christ who came into the world to save you and who died for your good; and these books contain an account of his life, and of what he wishes you to do. If you will read these books every day, you will find that Christ is still alive, although he was crucified; that he still loves you, and he will help you to become good if you really desire it." So saying she gave each boy a testament and a green bag. On each bag some words were embroidered with crimson worsted.

Charles' bag contained a knife, and had this inscription: "Be not idle; idleness is the mother of mischief." Then Charles remembered that he was lounging on the fence the day before, though his father had wanted his help in piling wood.

Robert's bag contained a good ball, and these were the words upon it: "Be not heedless;" and he remembered how in haste he had carelessly thrown his brother from the tilting board.

Thomas felt more ashamed than any of them when he looked at his bag; it was full of marbles, and the words upon it were, "Swear not at all." Alas! he knew that he had just uttered a wicked oath, when Miss Clarke approached him the day before.

As the boys went away, Miss Clarke said to them, "Do not forget that it is not I, but the Lord who bestows these gifts upon you; and that this is the birth day of his Son Jesus Christ."

And where was Stephen? At noon that day Miss Clarke went to carry his mother a warm hood, and when she found the pious child lying hot and restless on the bed, threatened with a fever, she laid a new testament upon his pillow, with these words written on the blank leaf: "The same Lord who gave Christ, gives all good things."

THE EFFECT OF ECONOMY.

When Mary and I were married we were young and foolish, for we had nothing to be married with, but Mary was delicate, and I thought I could take care of her best. I knew I had a strong arm and a brave heart to depend upon. We rented a chamber and went to house-keeping. We got together a little furniture—a table, bedstead, dishes—but our money failed us before we bought the chairs. I told Mary she must turn up the tub; for I could not run in debt. No, no, Mrs. M., found us out, and kindly enough she supplied us; half a dozen chairs added to our stock. They were old ones, to be sure, but answered just as well for us. I shall never forget the new face those chairs put upon our snug quarters—they never looked just right before. The tables are turned with Mrs. M., and me now—she has turned a poor widow, but she shall never want while I have anything, never! cried the old man, with a beaming face, "I do not forget those old chairs."

Ah, now the secret was out. It was the interest of the old chairs which maintained the poor widow. She was living on the interest and compound interest of a little friendly act done years before, and it sufficed for herself and daughter.

How beautiful it is to see how God blesses the operation of his great moral law. "Love thy neighbor," and we should offend see it, could we look in the hidden paths of life, and find that it is not self-interest, not riches, not fame that binds heart to heart. The simple power of a friendly act can do far more than they. It is these, the friendly acts, the neighborly kindness, the Christian sympathy of one towards another, which rob wealth of its power to curse, extract the bitter from sorrow, and open wells of gladness in desolate homes. We do not always see the golden links shining in the chain of human events; but they are there, and happy is he who feels their gentle but irresistible influence.—Merchants' Ledger.

HOW HE WON HER.

A young lady of eccentric character, but of rare mental endowments and extraordinary personal attractions, had five suitors, equally assiduous in their attentions. Unable to decide upon which she should bestow her hand, she gave them notice to call upon her at a certain day, and each state his claims in the presence of the others. At the appointed time the lovers arrived. Four were confident of success; but the fifth had a downcast look, and sighed when he gazed on the object of his devotion.

"Gentlemen," said she, "you have honored me with proposals of marriage. I have, as yet neither refused nor accepted any of you; state your claims to my hand that I may know upon what grounds I may be justified in bestowing it."

A. answered as follows: "If you marry me, you shall live in a splendid house, have carriages and servants at your command, and enjoy all the luxuries of fashionable life. I am rich."

B. spoke next; "My rival has said very truly that he is rich, and that he offers you a strong inducement; but I am of noble descent. My grandfather was a duke, although not wealthy. I am of a family with whom an alliance would be considered an honor to the wealthiest heiress in the land."

C. stated his claims: "I am a politician, and have now a reputation that older persons have, and next year I shall run for Congress."

and have no doubt of success. By marrying me your name will be handed down to posterity."

D. twined his moustache with an air of an exquisite, and said: "Angelic creature! 'Pon my word I think you have already made up your mind in my favor. You know how much I am admired. Who is the most fashionable dressed in town? Who is the best judge of the opera? Rumor says D. but 'pon my honor, I'm too modest to insist upon it."

When it came to E.'s turn to speak there was a pause. All eyes were turned towards him. Poor fellow he was dreadfully embarrassed.

"Well," said the beauty, "what say you Mr. E.?"

"Alas!" was the reply, "I yield to those gentlemen: They have the advantage of me in every respect." And he took his hat to leave.

"Stop," said the lady, "make your statement, no matter how humble may be your claims."

"I am poor—"

"Go on."

"I am not of a noble family—"

"Go on, sir."

"I am unknown to the world—"

"No matter; proceed."

"I have neither the taste nor the means to dress fashionably. I work for my livelihood. It is hardly possible that I can make you happy, for I can afford none of the inducements held out by my rivals."

"I am to judge of that sir; what next?"

"Nothing, only I love you, and take a newspaper."

At this Messrs. A. B. C. D. burst out in a loud laugh, and exclaimed in one voice—"So do we! I love you to distraction! I take four newspapers, ha! ha!"

"Silence," said the lady: "In one month you shall have my answer. You may all withdraw."

At the end of the month the five suitors again appeared. Turning to each one in succession the lady answered—

"Riches are not productive of happiness. Boasting nobility of blood, is the poorest of all recommendations. Fame is fleeting, and he that has the garb of a gentleman is to be pitied. I have found out the names of the persons to which you all subscribe, and have ascertained that none of you who have boasted of wealth, nobility and fame, or fashion, have paid the printer. Now, gentlemen, this is dishonest. I cannot think of marrying a man who would be guilty of a dishonest act. I have learned that Mr. E. not only subscribes for a paper, but pays the printer. Therefore, I say he is the man; I give him my hand with a full conviction that he is the one every way calculated to make me happy."

Need we extend our narrative? The disappointed gentlemen disappeared quite suddenly; and the lucky suitor was united to the object of his devotion; and in a few years, by honesty and industry, became not only a distinguished but wealthy man and was esteemed by all. Young man, he paid the printer. Is there no moral for this?

RAISING THE WIND.

"We're out of funds," sighed Digges.

There was no denying this.

But at this moment a very respectable clad personage, who was going down Broadway at New York speed, tipped his hat, and said, "good morning, Mr. Digges." When he said this, he was gone, but the words made a great impression on the mind of Bob.

"Who's that?" he asked.

"Don't know his name; he belongs to my lodge, very clever fellow."

"Your lodge?" he echoed—"You're an Odd Fellow then!"

"Yes."

"And a Son of Temperance?"

"Yes."

"And a Rechabite?"

"Yes."

"And a United American Mechanic?"

"Yes."

Bob's face grew radiant.

"Are your dues paid up?"

"Yes; why do you ask?" exclaimed Digges, astonished at the sudden delight of his friend.

"How much do these societies give to a sick brother?"

"Some three and some four dollars a week."

"What proof do they require of his sickness?"

"The certificate of a respectable physician," answered Digges.

A pause ensued. Bob seemed to be running over with a superabundance of delight.

"And with these facts before you, misguided Digges, you have perished in the enjoyment of good health?"

"Never was sick a week in my life, only"—he paused, "only in the pocket."

Without another word, Bob took the arm of Digges within his own, and led him into a neighboring oyster cellar. Seated within the box, he closed the curtains, and said in a tone of great feeling—

"Digges, you really ought to take care of yourself. You now exhibit all the premonitory symptoms of a bilious attack—"

"Eh!" cried Digges, jumping from his chair.

"Your skin is sallow, your tongue furred, and your eyes feverish. In an hour, my friend, you will be in bed, with a raging fever. By night you will be delicious. Tomorrow you will not be expected to live, and next week—"

"Next week?" echoed Digges, becoming pale.

"Next week," resumed Bob, "are you listening?—draw at least twelve dollars from these societies. I will sign your certificate. And as you will be sick a great many weeks, you will continue to draw twelve dollars per week for a considerable time. Digges, I pity you!"

At these words, the countenance of Digges became overspread with a mild resignation. He extended his hand. He clutched Bob with a hearty grasp.

"It's a great deal of sickness to look forward to, but I am resigned. You see I am resigned. You see I am. By the by, Bob, I don't feel well. 'Spose you go home with me and put me to bed?"

It was quite touching to see how Bob went home and put him to bed.

For twelve weeks, Bob watched night and day by the bedside. Every one remarked his devotion. The Committees of the various societies, who came with the "weekly benefits" for the sick brother, were delighted with Bob. They spoke of the devotion of the young physician to their sick brother, in all the lodges and divisions.

"Sit down my friends," Bob would remark in a subdued voice when the committee appeared; "our poor friend fails fast. He has been delicious all night. Speak low—the least noise disturbs him."

And then the Committee would sit down in that darkened room, in the fourth story of a boarding house, and gaze through the gloom upon the form of poor Digges, who was stretched upon the bed, his cadaverous face appearing above the edge of the coverlet.

After a few moments they would leave, first placing in the hands of Bob the sum due his sick friend.

And after the Committee had left, and gone down stairs, Bob would give orders that his patient should not be disturbed. He would then lock the door. He would then approach the bed, and address his patient in these words:—

"Digges, my boy, will you take your toddy hot or cold?"

To which the patient, flinging off the bed-clothes, and jumping out of bed, would respond—

"I'll take it hot, Bob."

COUSINING.

A country gentleman lately arrived at Boston, and immediately repaired to the house of a relative, a lady who had married a merchant of that city. The parties were glad to see him, and invited him to make their house his home (as he declared his intention of remaining in that city but a day or two). The husband of the lady, anxious to show attention of relative and friend of his wife, took the gentleman's horse to a lively stable.

Finally, the visit became a visitation, and the merchant, after the lapse of eleven days found, besides lodging and boarding the gentleman, a pretty considerable bill had run up at the lively stable. Accordingly, he went to the man who kept the stable, and told him when the gentleman took his horse he would pay the bill.

"Very good," said the stable keeper, "I understand you."

Accordingly, in a short time, the country gentleman went to the stable and ordered his horse to be got ready. The bill, of course was presented.

"Oh," said the gentleman "Mr.—, my relative, will pay this."

"Very good sir, please to get an order from Mr.—; it will be the same as the money."

The horse was put up again, and down went the country gentleman to the wharf, where the merchant kept.

"Well," said he, "I am going now."

"Are you?" said the merchant, "well, good bye."

"Well, about my horse; the man says the bill must be paid for his keeping."

"Well, I suppose that is all right, sir."

"Yes—well, but you know I'm your wife's cousin."

"Yes," said the merchant, "I know that you are, but your horse is not."

TAKE THE FIRST STEP.

If you are ever to be anything you must make a beginning; and you must make it yourself. The world is getting too practical to help drones, and push them along, when there is a busy hive of workers who, if anything, live too fast. You must lift up your own feet, and if you have a pair of clogs on which clatter about your heels, they will soon be worn off and left behind on the dusty path-way. Mark out the line which you prefer; let truth be the object glass—honesty the surveying chain—and eminence the level with which you lay out your field; and thus prepared, with prudence on the other, you need fear no obstacle. Do not be afraid to take the first step. Boldness will beget assurance, and the first step will bring you so much nearer the second. But if your first step should break down, try again. It will be surer and safer by the trial. Besides, if you never move, you will never move, you will never know your own power. A man standing still and declaring his inability to walk, without making the effort, would be a general laughing stock; and so, moral, is the man, in our opinion, who will not test his own moral and intellectual power, and then gravely assure us that he has "no genius," or "no talent," or "no capacity."

A man with seeing eyes keeping them shut and complaining that he cannot see! The trumpeter of his own imbecility!

LETTER FROM CALIFORNIA.

The following letter from a Quincy boy in California, will be read with interest by our patrons:—

SACRAMENTO CITY, Jan. 10th, 1850.

Mr. Editor—Dear Sir:—Thinking that you would like to hear from a Quincy Boy that has seen the "Elephant," and supposing your numerous readers, of which I have many friends, would also be pleased to hear from one on that all exciting topic, I will attempt as far as I know, in words, to give them a brief history of California, and the mines, from actual experience. We arrived here after a comparatively pleasant voyage of six months round "that Horn," near the first of July next. After giving San Francisco a fair look, and hearing all the stories on both sides—on one from those that had actually tried the "diggins," and on the other from the Broker and the Tradesman, who are ready to fit you out with a suit of mining clothes and implements, who had seen lumps of east magnitude, and men that had made fortunes in a day, we hurried forward to the mines, anxious to get a glimpse of the Monster. We arrived at this place after about thirty-six hours sail from Benicia; and I must say that this was about the pleasantest sail I have experienced in California, to say nothing of swamping twice in Suisun bay. This place is the grand depot for all the mining districts. Men generally stop here to recruit and make their minds up which mines to go to. We stopped here two or three days and concluded by all accounts that the southern mines were the richest. We hired teams at an enormous expense, and packed off for the Moquelomnes river, considered about three days travel by foot. After one week's travel we arrived there; and well it was, for more than half of nearly a hundred men, were sick from exposure and fatigue. All this time the August sun was pouring down its melting rays on the open and sterile plains of California, (of which they are not few). At distances of fifteen and twenty-six miles, there was no water nor shelter, and it seemed as if the earth was in a blaze; the hardest gave out under this and even fainted on the road; and probably if timely sustenance was not afforded they would have died. Hundreds have died from the effect of travelling in mid-day. We could not believe anything that was told us, as so many stories had proved erroneous; and we were ignorant of the country. Those that were able went to work eagerly as soon as we arrived and had pitched our tents on the craggy banks of the Moquelomnes. All went to work as soon as they were able, and worked hard and earnestly for days, weeks and months; and out of one hundred and fifty only three, to my almost certain knowledge, have accumulated by digging three thousand dollars; and they have been fortunate and have had their health. I have worked and have seen others work, and heard their story—men from all countries and climes, and they say as I say, there is not an average of five dollars a day to each man that works in the mines. These men that say this are not the Sluggards, but men of enterprise and courage, men that have dug, picked and sweated—men that are persevering men, that hope on hope ever. Now, kind readers, we will balance the account. Put against five dollars a day the expenses that are actually incurred in a day in California, and what is the balance? not "two dollars a day and roast beef," but two dollars a day and stale bread and porks and oft too tired to eat that.

When off returned from labor at night, Our bones on the ground reposing, Little cared we for the light, Or pork or bread with worms in.

I say as I have said before, that where there is one that makes a fortune by digging, a hundred do not. I do not say that there is less than the moderate estimate made of the gold in this country. No, there is all of that in my mind, but it is so fixed by the All-wise Providence, that it will make any man cry to get it. I do not say that any man cannot make a fortune here—No! he can if he is temperate, industrious and enterprising. In a few years, and now as to the migration out here. Where there is one comes from stories told by those that have actually dug it, hundreds come from stories told by speculators—some who speculate out of the ignorant Indians and half breeds. Where there is one letter goes from the mines, twenty goes with golden stories to the States and world from speculators in lands, cities and towns.

But all this does not signify that this is not a great country. Within two years it has grown from a mere sapling to a mighty oak. Its branches are extending out wider and wider—cities and towns are growing up all over the country with wonderful rapidity; and what is greatest of all, they are populated by the hardiest and most enterprising and quiet people in the world; and I am proud to say of the States there is a great majority from the Northern free States. The old Bay State, according to her number of inhabitants, sends the largest delegation. The most fashionable Hotel in this city is kept by a "colored gentleman." Go into our cities and towns and all are busy, the black as well as the white; all move along harmoniously,—no fighting, when compared with some of your Eastern cities. The man in the red shirt and overalls as good and better than he in English broadcloths. And that is is. These scenes happen only once in a man's life time. California is rich and the United States is richer. So goes California! So goes the United States!

I am at present one of the many speculators. By enterprise I have become the owner of a California Cattle. I can only as yet count my hundreds; but in a year from this time if I have my health, I think prospects are that I can count my thousands. I have had news from Quincy up to the 10th of November. I hope this will arrive ere Quincy is entirely disfranchised, for the rest to feed upon. In doubling the Cape, it appears that letters that I have written to individuals, heretofore in town, have been heralded all over the country, and erroneous stories have been going the rounds in connection with them. I have said nothing in my former letters but what I say in this. If those that have sailed for California think of getting a fortune here very easily, or have changed their opinions as given in my former letters on this subject, I am afraid they will be sadly disappointed. I glory in their spunk and shall lend them all the aid and give them all the knowledge I can, when they visit my rancho. But to those at home who feel disposed to injure my reputation by reporting such stories, I would say that they will find themselves disappointed in what they undertake. I am one of that kind that kind that don't think the world was made in a minute. I am contented here and have had no desire to come home. Since started for the Eldorado I have seen hard times, and calculated on seeing more.

I think those submarine armors will work well in places where there is solid bottom. If they are bulky and of much weight they will cost a fortune for transportation. People at home seem to a wrong idea concerning the lay of the land and beds of the rivers in this country. She beds of the river are generally found in crevices which require a great deal more labor in tearing the rock to pieces. I think machinery for pumping water would be the most profitable, after draining the river. I have already taken up more space than I intended, and must close by saying, the Quincy boys are all well to the last accounts.

P. S. January 22.—It was my intention to have sent this by the steamer of the 15th; but the river rose so rapidly that on the 11th the city of Quincy was flooded on an average four feet deep, and there was no conveyance to the office. The amount of damage done by this sudden overflow to this city and the towns above, must be very great. Houses were moved from their foundations, and many floated some ways. Lumber, barrels, &c., &c., was adrift—horses and cattle were wandering around, shivering with cold and hunger—people took refuge on board the shipping and small hills in the rear of the city. The river commenced rising the 9th. On the 12th the flood was at its height. It has been gradually falling ever since, but runs over the bank in some places yet. Some of the streets are hardly navigable with long boats. It is the general opinion that the wet weather is about over, and that Spring will soon set in. It has been beautiful over head for the last week. There is still considerable snow on the lofty peaks or ranges of the Tuerrier chevalliers which are plainly to be seen from this place.

Yours, &c., Adlon.

A QUINCY BOY.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, MARCH 30, 1850.

John A. Greer, Editor.

We understand that the ticket for County Commissioners on which are the names of Mr. Safford of Dorchester and Mr. Doane of Cohasset, though put forth by the Whig Convention at Dedham, is not considered as a whig ticket but a rail road ticket—those gentlemen having been selected on the alleged ground that wherever it shall be necessary to take land for rail road purposes, that the rail road should be favored and not the owner of the land. The name of S. P. Lord Esq., because he would not yield to rail road inducements, was not put upon this ticket.

The 'Peoples Ticket' nominated at a union Convention, though not in all respects such as we approve yet being under no Rail Road influence is much preferable and will give better and more general satisfaction.

We learn that Mr. Doane is largely interested in several corporations, and that Mr. Safford is Clerk, Treasurer and Director of the Dorchester and Milton Branch Rail Road.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS.

Pursuant to public notice given in accordance with the wishes of gentlemen belonging to the several political organizations, a convention, composed of persons without distinction of party, was held at Dedham on Tuesday last for the nomination of a board of County commissioners. The convention was organized by the choice of Joseph H. Billings Esq. (Whig) of Roxbury, President, and of William S. Morton Esq. (Dem.) Quincy, Secretary.

A nomination list was opened, and after marking for the candidates presented, the whole subject was referred to a Committee composed of one person from each town represented. That Committee after due deliberation, reported the following "Ticket" which was adopted viz:—

For Commissioners—Nathaniel F. Safford (Whig) of Dorchester; Henry Hobart (Dem.) Foxboro; Fisher A. Kingsbury (Free Soil Dem.) Weymouth.

Special Commissioners—Edward L. Keyes (Free Soil Whig) Dedham; Elijah Perry (Whig) Dover.

A Committee was thereupon chosen consisting of

B. V. French, F. W. Bird and Joseph H. Billings, to confer with the Whig convention to be held the next day thereafter, with power to form a union Ticket which should represent the various interested sections, and parties of the County. The undersigned, a majority of said Committee, after an amicable conference with gentlemen composing the Whig convention, became satisfied that no arrangement could be made with that body, whereby that portion of the people, who do not claim to belong to the Whig party would be fairly considered or represented. In pursuance therefore of their duty, and in the exercise of the power conferred upon them by the convention which they represented, they have made changes in the ticket above reported as a due regard to the right and honor of the people, whom they represent seem to demand, with great confidence, they offer to the public the following "Peoples Ticket," trusting that it will be sustained by the friends of equal rights and knowledge throughout the County.

For Commissioners—Nathan Jones of Medway; Fisher A. Kingsbury of Weymouth; Henry Hobart of Foxboro.

Special Commissioners—Edward L. Keyes of Dedham; William S. Morton of Quincy.

Benjamin V. French, F. W. Bird, Committee.

HANCOCK HOUSE. George H. French, admitted to be not only by his personal friends but by strangers with whom we have conversed the best landlord in the vicinity of Boston, has retired from the management of the Hancock House, the responsible duties of which have been assumed by his father, Mr. Daniel French. While the retiring landlord has the satisfaction of knowing that his relation to the public meets the approval of all the venerable successors, as in times long ago will be greeted by a host of friends who know his admirable tact and good judgment in catering not only to their own but to the public wants. That he may be successful in all his endeavors, and reap a rich reward, is a sentiment that will find a cordial response in every bosom.

We understand that the now occupant of the Hancock House will be happy to see his friends, this evening, between seven and nine o'clock, to partake of a clam and oyster chowder.

A NOVELTY.—Mr. Whipple's Dissolving Views and Pyramic Fires, are too peculiar and beautiful to admit of accurate description. They are greatly admired by those who see them; the ladies especially, have been enraptured by them. No adjectives or exclamations in the language, are sufficiently intense to express the pleasure they impart. The epithets "splendid," "brilliant," "grand," and "magnificent," are not in the least too strong to apply to them. The exhibition, as a whole, is one of great novelty and beauty. Those who fail of seeing it, when in Boston, will lose one of the most delightful entertainments ever presented to the community. To be understood and appreciated it must be seen. See advertisement in this paper.

NOTICES.

The regular monthly Meeting of the NIAGARA Engine Company, No. 1, will be held at the Engine house on Monday evening next at sunset. A full and punctual attendance is requested. A clam chowder may be expected.

It is not in the hour of death, when those we love depart.

Nor yet when laid upon the bier, we follow slow the cortege.

And leave it in its dwelling dark, that most we feel the loss.

When past the last, the solemn rite and dust to dust being gone.

And in its wonted channel'd course the stream of life rolls on.

Oh! who can tell how dear the space, once fill'd by those most dear.

When viewed the scenes which they have loved and all but they are here! Communicated.

In Hanover 26th inst, Junius E. son of Caleb and Lucy B. Packard of this town aged 2 years and 9 months.

Sweet child, no more, but Seraph now,

At Jesus' feet behold him bow;

His soul enlarged to angels rise,

Joins in the chorus of the skies;

Short pain, short grief sweet child were thine,

New joys immortal and divine.

POETRY.

(For the Quincy Patriot)
WOMAN.Written in Auld Lang Syne, but true now as ever.

Beneath the stars that deck the sky,
And shed their lustre from on high,
There's naught with woman's worth can vie
For beauty, faith or charity,
So high beyond all else she soars,
That even lordly men adore.

Who ever gazed on her sweet face,
Or felt her tender chaste embrace,
Or view'd her fair and graceful form,
By heaven ordained man's heart to warm.
But while the beautiful prize he press'd,
With grateful heart her Maker blest.

Art thou unhappy, to her go,
Her smile's the antidote to woe;
Oh, could I like her lily hand sing,
I'd make the lands he travers'd ring,
'Till every lordling of the sod,
Should choose her for his household God.

In childhood who but she could save,
God's beautiful image from the grave,
Who has not mark'd her feeling mind,
In sickness, who like her is kind;
And 'tho' through every clime she roams,
Poor man, without her finds no home.

In youth when all our spirits dance,
She melts us with her witching glance.
See next the matron by her side,
A cherub sits, its father's pride,
Who guides the young and pliant mind,
'Till the young shoot to heaven's incline'd.

If guilty, who like her will strive,
To set it right and bid it live;
Oh, hear an anxious mother's prayer,
In mercy, God, my children spare!
On me not them thy judgment pour,
Thou whom I tremulously adore.

Oh, what had man without thee prov'd,
Woman in every clime belov'd,
'Tis selfish men in fetters bind,
The budding beauties of thy mind;
And half thy virtues are not known,
Or in the cot nor on the throne.

Yet with thee be't my fate to dwell,
For without thee this earth were hell;
A desert wild a joyless waste,
Devoid of virtues, arts or taste,
Exiled eternally from thee,
E'en heaven would prove no heaven to me.

F. M. Adlington, Weymouth.

SATURDAY NIGHT.

Sweet to the soul the parting ray
Which ushers placid evening in;
When with the still expiring day,
The Sabbath's peaceful hours begin—
How grateful to the anxious breast,
She sacred hours of holy rest!

I love the blush of vernal bloom,
When morning glows night's sullen tear
And dear to me the mournful gloom
Of autumn, Sabbath of the year;
But purer pleasures, joys sublime,
Await the dawn of holy time.

Hush'd is the tumult of the day,
And worldly cares, and business cease,
While soft the vesper breezes play,
To hymn the glad return of peace—
O season blest! O moments given,
To turn the vagrant thoughts to heaven!

What though, involv'd in lurid night,
The loveliest forms in nature fade;
Yet mid the gloom shall heavenly light,
With joy the contrite heart pervade.
O then, great Source of light divine,
With beams ethereal gladden mine.

Oh as this hallowed hour shall come,
O raise my thoughts from earthly things,
And bear them to my heavenly home,
On living faith's immortal wings—
'Till the last gleam of life decays,
In one eternal SABBATH DAY!

ANECDOTES.

"I hope you will be able to support me," said a young lady, while walking out one evening with her intended, during a slippery state of the side walks.
"Why, yes," said the somewhat hesitating swain, "with some little assistance from your father."
There was some confusion, and a profound silence.

"I'm afraid that you do not practice much self-denial," said a parson to a pretty miss.
"Nay, but I do," said she, "for every day I fall in with pretty young men whom I want to kiss most sadly; but I deny myself that pleasure."

"Zeh," said a chap to his chum the other day, "seems to me you didn't stay long at Squire Tigger's last night." "No," was the reply, "I was sayin' a few pleasant things to the daughter, and the old man came in and gave me a hint to go." "A hint, Zeh, what sort of a hint?" "Why, he gave me my hat, opened the door, and just as he began to raise his cowhide boot, I had a thought that I wasn't wanted, and so I—I—took my leave."

"Digby, will you have some of the butter?"
"Thank you, marm, I can't take anything strong, I belong to the Temperance Society."

Zeno, the philosopher, believed in an inevitable destiny. His servant availed himself of this doctrine, while being beaten for a theft, by exclaiming—"Was I not destined to rob?" "Yes," replied Zeno, "and to be corrected also."

There was much sound palpable argument in the reply of a country lad to an idler, who boasted of his ancient family: "So much the worse for you," said the peasant, "as we ploughmen say, the older the seed the worse the crop."

Quincy, Oct. 20.

Removal.

THE subscriber takes this
method to inform his customers and the public, that he
has moved to the new building lately erected by Mr. Samuel Copeland, it being more convenient and better adapted
to his business; and also
would tender his sincere
thanks for the liberal share
of patronage which he has received during the past year.
His former customers and the public generally are invited to call, where will be found a variety of Stoves,
among which is the

New England Air-Tight,

embodying, in the highest degree of perfection, every
essential quality requisite for any latitude. This Stove presents itself externally in a plain dress, with
just and admirable proportions, giving it the appearance of a chaste and tastefully made piece of Cabinet Furniture. Intrinsically, the location and capacity of the Fire Chamber is such as to remove effectually the objections often made to Air-Tight Cook-Stoves for
country use. The Oven proves itself to be precisely what its projector intended it should be, viz: the
largest and most perfect ever constructed in a family Stove. The Flues, upon which the great responsibility and reputation of a stove depends, differ from any
ever before used, and are of such construction and
capacity as to ensure the most perfect draught, with-
out liability to fill up, and are easily kept clean.
Nearly one hundred of this stove have been sold the
past year and all have given the utmost satisfaction.

Also—A variety of PARLOR, OFFICE and CYL-INDER STOVES, together with a good assortment of TIN, BRITAINA, SHEET IRON and Japaned Ware.

CHARLES HOLMES.
Quincy, Jan. 12.

The Circassian Oil.

THIS OIL has now obtained celebrity worthy its high interest. The sales have greatly increased and in public estimation it supercedes all other preparations for the HAIR. The proprietor is constantly receiving testimonials of its great efficacy in restoring the hair in cases of baldness, and it has also been signally successful in curing the various scurfous affections to which the head and hair is subject. Parents will find the Cir-cassian Oil an article of incalculable benefit to children, in laying the foundation of a stantly on hand.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air-Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,

it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS

is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air-Tight Cooking Stove.

It is price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.

A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis,
to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the

INK,

For Blacking Heels, Shanks, Edges, etc., etc., Manufactured by

P. TORREY,

Practical Chemist, of Milford, Massachusetts.

THIS Ink is recommended by the best mechanics in the New England States as being better than any other article now in use for blacking and polishing Heels or Shanks, once blacking being sufficient for any red leather, with the addition of being free from smut, which is desirable for fine work. No workman who pretends to do his thing should be without
it. For sale, WHOLESALE AND RETAIL, by

A. B. PACKARD.

Also for sale by G. B. NIGHTINGALE and H.
A. RANSOM & Co., but at no other places in this County.

N. B. I wish it to be understood that this Ink is not made by Torrey of Weymouth, but by P. TOR-REY, practical Chemist, of Milford, Mass.
